Senior Leadership

Message from the President

Otterbein College this year continues its proud tradition of athletic and academic excellence. As we approach the turn of the century, Otterbein has enjoyed nearly 100 years of intercollegiate competition. During that time, the College's mission has been to balance academics and athletic competition. Our commitment has been to the whole person, both in and out of the classroom. Our coaches are teachers first, mentors who make deep and lasting impressions on their students.

While the drive to win is important, our real commitment lies in developing leadership traits and the competitive spirit, which will aid our scholar athletes throughout their lives.

On behalf of Otterbein's faculty, students and administration, we thank you for your support of Otterbein's athletics programs in 1999-2000 and for your continuing involvement in their successes.

Roush Hall is the first general purpose academic facility built on the Otterbein campus since historic Towers Hall was constructed in 1872. This year the college completed interior renovation of Towers Hall that included complete overhaul of classrooms, work spaces and corridors. Changes designed to recapture the essence of the time period in which Towers was built is evident throughout the facility. Physical changes to make Towers Hall more accessible, new wiring and a modern heating, ventilation and air conditioning system was included. Updated lighting, flooring, paint, restored trim and archways, network cabling and acoustic ceilings prepares the building for the classes of the next millennium.
Towers Hall houses Mathematics, English, Foreign Language, History and Political Science and Religion and Philosophy departments. Other offices in Towers include the student newspaper, Continuing Studies, the Registrar's office and the Office of Grants and Special Projects. The Towers Hall renovation was completed in April, 1999.
Other facilities on campus include Courtright Memorial Library which houses more than 200,000 volumes and 1,000 periodicals as well as an outstanding modern learning resource center and television studio. Schear-McFadden Science Hall has modern laboratories and classrooms as well as the Weitkamp Planetarium/ Observatory. Cowan Hall houses theatre and speech facilities, including an expanded scene shop and WOBN-FM, the campus radio station. Faculty
Otterbein's student-faculty ratio of 13 to one offers students the opportunity to receive personalized attention from their instructors. A majority of full-time faculty hold doctorates or appropriate terminal degrees. Professors are active in campus affairs, serve as advisers to students, and participate in a unique sabbatical program to research and study recent developments in their fields.

Athletics
Men and women compete in the Ohio Athletic Conference, NCAA Division III. There are eight varsity sports for men and women. A complete intramural program is available to all students.

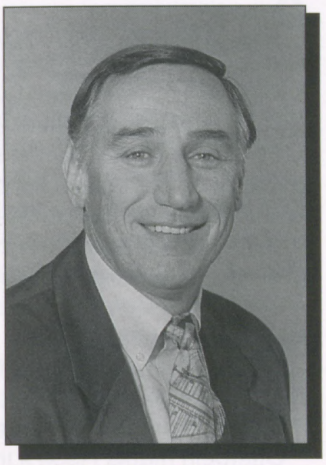
ADMINISTRATION



Athletics Director Dick Reynolds

Dick Reynolds, who has established himself as one of the most successful basketball coaches in the 96-year history of the Ohio Athletic Conference (OAC), brings those winning traits to his additional position of athletics director.

The 56-year-old Reynolds, who took over the reigns of the men's athletics department in 1992, was also placed in charge of women's athletics last year after Otterbein combined both men's and women's athletics into one department.

A nine-time OAC Coach of the Year selection, Reynolds has taken his cagers to at least a share of the regular-season conference title nine times and into the NCAA Division III Tournament twelve times. The Cardinals advanced to the Final Four in 1981 and 1991.

He became the all-time winningest basketball coach in the OAC, surpassing Wooster's E. M. "Mose" Hole (1926-57), with an 86-82 single-overtime win at Muskingum Feb. 15, 1994. Reynolds has compiled a 470-265 record over 27 seasons at Otterbein.

Following graduation from Otterbein in 1965, where he was a 12-time letterman in football, basketball and track, Reynolds returned to his home town of London, Ohio, and taught seventh-grade science while serving as an assistant coach in football, basketball and track at the high school. He served three years in the U.S. Air Force (1966-69) as a personnel services officer in charge of recreation.

He spent three seasons as an assistant under Otterbein head men's basketball coach Curt Tong while teaching in the Columbus and Westerville, Ohio school districts from 1969 to 1972. He became head coach in 1972.

Reynolds and his wife, Ellen, live in Westerville. They have two children, Amanda and Chad, and four grandchildren.

Head Coach

A. Wallace "Wally" Hood, with 31 years of collegiate football coaching experience—much of it in the Ohio Athletic Conference (OAC)—seeks to install a new era in the history of football at Otterbein College.

Hood, 64, enters his fifth season as the Cardinals' head coach. He is also the president of the OAC Football Coaches Committee.

"With four full years of recruiting," Hood says, "we have built a base from which we can compete in the OAC on a week-to-week basis. Obviously, the quality of our players has improved.

"Through an extensive off-season weight and training program, our players are stronger and quicker," Hood continues. "I am confident we are on the right track."

Otterbein marks Hood's third collegiate head coaching assignment. He has compiled a 101-103-8 record over 22 seasons as a head coach.

He spent ten seasons (1974-1983) as head coach at Ohio Northern University, a member of the OAC, and eight seasons (1984-1991) as head coach at Fairmont State College (WV), a member of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA).

Before coming to Otterbein, Hood spent two seasons (1993-1994) as an assistant coach at Kenyon College. He was selected "OAC Co-Coach of the Year" in 1982, leading the Polar Bears to an OAC divisional championship. He tallied a 42-35-4 record, including five winning seasons, at Fairmont, leading the Falcons to a 7-2-2 mark, a share of the West Virginia Intercollegiate Athletic Conference (WVIAC) title and to the NAIA Division I national playoffs in 1988. He was named "WVIAC Coach of the Year" in 1988.

Hood comes to Otterbein from Kenyon College where he served as an assistant coach in 1993 and 1994. His collegiate coaching career began at Baldwin-Wallace College in 1967. He spent six seasons there as an assistant under head coach Lee Tressel before moving on to Colgate University (NY) for a one-year stint as an assistant in 1973.

KICKOFF

MEET THE PRESS - NEW ENGLAND STYLE

BY TIM BURTON

These days, when so many coaches consider the media the enemy and many players refuse to talk to reporters, it is refreshing to find a setting where coaches, players and the media peacefully co-exist. It's known as the New England Football Writers Luncheon and it is a long-standing tradition.

Northeastern University assistant athletic director and longtime sports information director Jack Grinold, who emcees the weekly gatherings, which now take place at Harvard University, one of the nation's most prestigious institutions, says that it is a chance for coaches and players to talk about their teams in a time when some think that football is on a downslide.

"When I started with the football writers in 1962 there were approximately 25 colleges in New England playing football," said Grinold, the dean of New England sports information and witness to more than 350 consecutive Northeastern football games. "Now we have 50 schools involved and we get a lot of schools to turn out each week. We sometimes have 15 coaches speak at our luncheons and that says a lot about the interest in football."

THE COACHES

According to Grinold, the New England Football Writers have been holding its luncheons for more than seven decades. Starting back in the 1920s, former Boston College All-American and head coach Joe McKenney headed up a group of men that wanted to gather on a weekly basis. McKenney, who went on to become one of college football's best officials, joined forces with former Tufts University captain Arthur Sampson of the Boston Herald Traveler to form the foundation of the football writers.

For many years the Hotel Kenmore served as the backdrop to the weekly meetings, as well as the association's annual dinners. The weekly diet of speakers included some of the game's giants, including Frank Leahy, who led Boston College to a 21-2 record and a Orange Bowl championship before taking his talents to Notre Dame.

Herman Hickman, the brilliant coach at Yale and New Hampshire, was among the country's wittiest banquet speakers. Hickman, who grew up in the South, brought a genuine wit to the luncheons and even got a chuckle or two out of those north of the Mason-Dixon Line.

As the years went by some of the game's great characters also preached from the podium, telling their brethren of great gridiron tales, including College Hall of Fame coach Bob Blackman. Blackman brought Dartmouth to national prominence during his days in Hanover, New Hampshire, and also shined in coaching stints at Cornell, Illinois and Denver.

THE PLAYERS

New England has produced some of the game's finest players, including a few who won college football's most prized individual award. Who could forget the brilliant Larry Kelley and Clint Frank, two of Yale's greatest gridiron talents? And it wasn't that long ago that a little-known field general by the name of Doug Flutie ran roughshod over opponents while quarterbacking Boston College to three straight Bowl berths.

Yale also produced one of the great defensive backs in New England in Dick Jauron, who is in his first year as head coach of the Chicago Bears. Northeastern turned out two of the region's best players in Sean Jones, a standout defensive end who captured a Super Bowl ring in 1997 with the Green Bay Packers, and Dan Ross, an All-America receiver from Everett, Massachusetts. Ross played in the 1982 Super Bowl with the Cincinnati Bengals and for many years held the Super Bowl record for most receptions in one game (11) before it was broken by future Hall of Famer Jerry Rice.

Pat McInally, the standout receiver and punter at Harvard, also was a frequent visitor to writers' postseason all-star banquets in the early '70s, as were Boston College stalwarts Art Donovan, Fred Smerlas and Bill Romanowski. Donovan and Smerlas each went on to further prominence in the National Football League, while Romanowski has four Super Bowl rings to his credit.

THE WRITERS

With pen in hand and an ear to listen, the scribes that covered college football each autumn had plenty to write about. Whether it was a coach accusing another coach of spying on his alma mater or a coach calling it quits at the season's break-up luncheon, stories were never lacking.

Brilliant wordsmiths such as Bill Cunningham, Jerry Nason, Ernie Roberts, George Carens along with Dave O'Hara all covered the luncheon at one time or another. In more recent years former Boston Globe columnists Jackie MacMullan and Leigh Montville covered the football beat as do present-day scribes like the Globe's Bob Monahan, who's been following college football for more than 40 years, and the Boston Herald's Jocko Connolly.

It seems only appropriate that the football writers gather each week at Harvard, which hosts The Game every other autumn against Yale at Harvard Stadium. For the stadium, which sits within view of every attendee, has a history like the New England Football Writers. It is one replete with facts and figures that etch themselves in times past while linking itself with a future that no doubt will add to the lore of New England football.

TDI TUNE-INS

THE TEAMS: Florida State at Clemson THE DATE: Oct. 23, 1999
LAST MEETING: Florida State 48, Clemson 0
WHAT'S AT STAKE: It's Bowden vs. Bowden, as son Tommy leads his Tigers against father Bobby's Seminoles. But don't think that's all there is. Although Clemson was only 3-8 last season, it lost five of those games by a touchdown or less, and is a much tougher team in "Death Valley." The Tigers will be anxious to put on a good show for ESPN and haven't forgotten last season's 48-0 shellacking in Tallahassee. Throw in senior QB Brandon Streeter, who came on strong at the end of last season, and his fine corps of receivers in Tommy Bowden's explosive offense that worked wonders at Tulane. Should FSU possibly be looking ahead to the following week's matchup in Virginia, suddenly, there's the makings of a ball game.

THE TEAMS: Arizona at UCLA THE DATE: Oct. 30, 1999
LAST MEETING: UCLA 52, Arizona, 28
WHAT'S AT STAKE: If all holds to form, this game could decide the Pac-10 championship. Arizona is the preseason favorite in the Pacific-10 and UCLA is right behind. Both teams are legitimate top 10 teams with high-powered, big-play offenses. The Wildcats have a preseason candidate for Pac-10 Player of the Year in Trung Canidate and the Bruins have one of the nation's best receiver corps in Danny Farmer, Brad Melsby, Freddie Mitchell and Brian Poli-Dixon. Last year, Arizona actually led the Bruins 28-24 in the third quarter, but the Bruins proceeded to score the next 28 points. Expect another track meet this year.

THE TEAMS: Rhode Island at UMass THE DATE: Oct. 30, 1999
LAST MEETING: Umass 23, Rhode Island 13
WHAT'S AT STAKE: In the course of UMass' improbable run to the Division I-AA national championship last season, head coach Mark Whipple's Minutemen had to fight off the charging Rams of Rhode Island. Whipple, a former favorite son of the Ocean state, brought his Minutemen to Kingston and promptly fell behind 10-0 at the half. But a 17-point fourth quarter gave UMass a come-from-behind victory. The Minutemen will again look to running back Marcel Shipp, for ground presence in Whipple's Whiplash Offense. Rhode Island is hoping QB transfer Ken Mastole can reverse last year's results.

THE TEAMS: Air Force at BYU THE DATE: Oct. 30, 1999
LAST MEETING: Air Force 20, BYU 13
WHAT'S AT STAKE: Air Force fights primarily by land, BYU primarily by air, but the goal is the same: the inaugural Mountain West Conference title. It should come as little surprise that the Cougars boast the conference's top passer in senior Kevin Feterik. What may surprise, however, will be the formation he uses to throw out of. LaVell Edwards has introduced the shotgun to try and bolster his team's aerial attack. Falcon linebackers, led by senior Craig Thorstenson, will provide the stiffest test of the new offensive set up. Offensively, Air Force should continue to be strong on the ground, but will look to spice things up by throwing the ball more, behind the strong arm of Cale Bonds. The Falcons rode out last season on a nine-game unbeaten streak, including victories over BYU in the WAC championship game, and Washington in the Oahu Bowl.

DANNY WHITE

BY MIKE CAREY

BARRY GOSSAGE

To say that Danny White has experienced success is an understatement.

A big one.

He led Arizona State to three straight wins in the Fiesta Bowl. Following that, he had a stellar career as the quarterback for the Dallas Cowboys, setting the team's touchdown passing record as a first-year starter in 1980 and leading the team to the playoffs five times and to three NFC East titles.

Now, as head coach of the Arizona Rattlers of the Arena Football League, White has led his team to two AFL titles.

TDI had a chance to talk with White about his collegiate and pro careers and his life as coach.

1 TDI: What do you remember most from your collegiate career?

DW: I think what stands out most was being a part of the first three Fiesta Bowls and winning all three games. We had the chance to play teams from back East that we had never seen and that was special.

I think it did a lot for the program at Arizona State, and it helped to put us on the map as a good football program. And now, seeing what the Fiesta Bowl has become, it's really special to have been a part of those first three games. That, more than anything, stands out.

I can't think of anything else that stands out, but we went 32-4 in those three years. It was a great program to be a part of.

2 TDI: What does it mean to you now, seeing how successful ASU football has become in recent years?

DW: Seeing the level the program has risen to, it's something that all of us, as alumni, can be proud of. Just like the Fiesta Bowl becoming what it has in that area, it's special for all former football players at ASU to see that program rise. We take a lot of pride in being ASU alumni.

It's gratifying to see how well they've done, but it's strictly a result of the success the program has had. There have been some years where we've struggled and lately Arizona has had the upper hand. That game [against Arizona] is 90 percent of it, the bragging rights. It doesn't have anything to do with record or going to the Rose Bowl. Everything builds up to that Arizona game. It's as big a rivalry as there is in college football. It may not have the stature of some other games, and it may not affect as many people, but around here, that game is as big as it gets.

3 TDI: Did you ever expect, after your success at ASU, to do as well in the NFL?

DW: I don't think that I ever expected it or that I didn't expect it. I was just fortunate to get with a team at the right time. I had the opportunity to watch Roger [Staubach] and Tom [Landry] and that was a great experience. A lot of being in the NFL is luck. There are a lot of talented players who just weren't in the right situation for success.

Roger was at the end of his career and to inherit that team, that took a lot of pressure off of me. Those first three or four years were a lot of fun for me. Timing just had a lot to do with it.

4 TDI: What did you learn from Staubach?

DW: Roger wasn't necessarily a student of the game as much as I was. I relied a great deal on working during the week, studying the opponent, trying to pick up their tendencies and knowing where I was going before the snap. Roger was a great decision-maker. He had the ability to get out of a jam and the will. He didn't always make the right reads or the right passes, but he knew the game and had a tremendous will to win.

What I was able to learn from Roger was great leadership skills, taking control of the team and taking control of a huddle. That's what made him the great player he was.

5 TDI: What did you learn from Coach Landry?

DW: He didn't influence me because he tried to. It was by watching him that I learned about coaching. It was his example. The time and effort he put into it was incredible. It was more than just X's and O's with him, though.

It was about developing people, as men, and overcoming adversity. All that came from just watching him.

6 TDI: Did you ever think you'd go into coaching?

DW: I always felt like I'd be a coach. I remember Coach Landry talking to me about it. Again, because of the timing [when Landry left the Cowboys], it just didn't work out. You look at the number of coaches he's developed and tutored and it would have been nice to be in that class, but I still learned a lot about the game from him.

Having played for him and having guys like [Dan] Reeves, [Mike] Ditka and [Gene] Stallings around, it's quite an impressive list. I thought coaching was the thing I was most qualified to do, but I'm not really interested in getting on the full-time coaching circuit.

I've got other things going on in my life, family things that, at this point in my life, are more important to me. That's why being a coach in the Arena League is perfect for me. When the season is going, six months a year, I'm into it, but it allows me to pursue other things in my life.

EXTRA POINT

TDI: Did you ever expect you'd be where you are now?

DW: I'm not a guy that sits back and thinks about what he's going to do in the future, five or 10 years from now. I took things as they came and I'm happy where I am today.

THE PRESSURE COOKER

FOR TENNESSEE QUARTERBACK TEE MARTIN, THE FUN BEGINS WHEN THE PRESSURE'S ON.

COURTESY TENNESSEE SPORTS INFORMATION

BY TONY BARNHART

Those who watch Tee Martin play football often marvel at his ability to handle pressure. For what college football player can you name who was under more pressure than Martin as the 1998 season began?

All Martin was being asked to do last fall was replace Peyton Manning, who was more than just the greatest quarterback in Tennessee history. By the time he became the NFL's No. 1 draft choice in April 1998, Manning had become a Southern icon, whose standards for performance on and off the field seemed beyond the reach of mere mortal men.

Did Martin, the poor black kid from Mobile, Ala., resent the constant comparisons to the fair-haired boy from the rich white suburbs of New Orleans? Did he chafe under the enormous burden of expectations left by his beloved predecessor? Just the opposite. As soon as the mantle of leadership was passed to Tee Martin, he embraced Manning's legacy of excellence in all things. The challenge, said Martin, was not to surpass Manning's legacy but to continue it.

"I couldn't equal what Peyton did here. No one could," said Martin. "But I could work every single day to get better, like he did. I could make sure others around me were working hard, like he did."

With that basic philosophy, Martin proceeded to take the Tennessee team to places even Manning never visited during his storied career, leading the Volunteers to a 13-0 season, which included a win over Florida and a Fiesta Bowl victory over Florida State for the national championship.

"A lot of people on the outside wondered how we would do without Peyton, because he was such a great player," said running back Jamal Lewis. "But if you know Tee, you had to know that we were going to be all right."

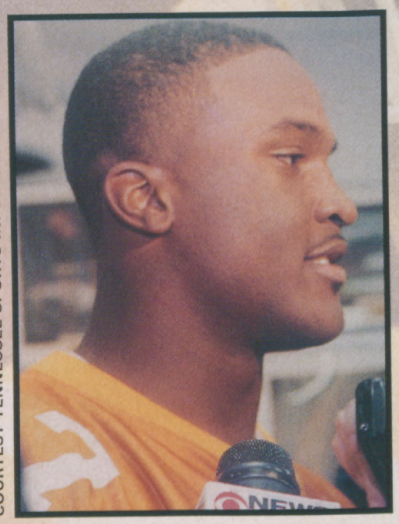
In Tennessee's first four games last season against Syracuse, Florida, Houston, and Auburn, Martin completed only 35 of 79 passes (44 percent). Take away his 14-of-19 effort against undermanned Houston, and Martin was only 21 of 60.

Fact is, Tennessee didn't need for Martin to be great because it had Lewis, one of the nation's best backs. But on the Monday before a key showdown with Georgia in Athens, Lewis was pronounced out for the season with a knee injury suffered against Auburn. If Tennessee was going to keep winning, Martin would have to raise his level of play.



COURTESY TENNESSEE SPORTS INFORMATION

Martin's as cool facing the media as he is facing opposing pass rushers.

At halftime of the nationally televised game with Georgia, the Vols led 9-3 and Martin had thrown two interceptions. In the locker room, Martin was confronted by an angry Cutcliffe, who thought his quarterback had not stepped up and faced the challenge.

"He was right," said Martin. "The team was waiting on me to lead and I wasn't getting it done. It was up to me to play better."

The light came on for Martin that afternoon in Sanford Stadium and stayed on for the rest of the season. Martin threw two touchdown passes in the second half and led the Vols to a big 22-3 win. Over the course of the last seven regular-season games, Martin completed 102 of 162 passes (63 percent) for 1,499 yards and 10 touchdowns. He threw only two interceptions in his last 179 pass attempts. Included in that run was his NCAA-record-setting performance against South Carolina, when he completed 23 of 24 passes for 352 yards.

"It was like anything else," said Martin. "You get more comfortable, you get more confident. You get more confident, you just play better."

And during the course of the season, Martin showed an uncanny knack for making the big play just when Tennessee needed it:

- When the Vols trailed late in the opener against Syracuse, Martin broke off a 55-yard run to help set up a score. Tennessee won 34-33 on a Jeff Hall field goal as time expired.
- His 14-yard run after escaping pressure set up Hall's winning 41-yard field goal in the memorable 20-17 overtime victory over Florida. It was Tennessee's first win over the Gators since 1992.
- With his team trailing 14-10 in the fourth quarter of the SEC championship game against Mississippi State, Martin told Peerless Price to go long down the sideline. "Just keeping running," he told Price. "It will be there." Price hauled in the 41-yard touchdown strike seconds later. Then Martin added another touchdown pass to Cedric Wilson for the 24-14 victory.
- With Tennessee clinging to a 14-9 lead in the fourth quarter of the Fiesta Bowl, Martin unleashed a bomb to Price, who had but a step on cornerback Mario Edwards. The ball could not have been thrown more perfectly and Price turned it into a 79-yard touchdown. It was the play that clinched Tennessee's first national championship since 1951.

So after all those heroics, what does a quarterback do for an encore? Martin is 13-0 as a starter. How do you improve on perfection?

Simple, said Martin. Like Manning's legacy, you can't improve on perfection, but you can continue it.

"We all enjoyed last year a lot and we'll remember it the rest of our lives, but we've got a chance to be very good again," said Martin. "But we've got to be willing to work as hard as we did last year. Probably harder."

Fact is, Tennessee could very well have a more talented team in 1999. Lewis returns to what was the SEC's best running attack last season despite his absence. A stronger running game is only going to make Martin's play-action passes more effective.

"I couldn't equal what Peyton did here. No one could. But I could work every single day to get better, like he did. I could make sure others around me were working hard, like he did."

— TEE MARTIN

Martin has a new offensive coordinator in Randy Sanders, who promises to let the quarterback take a few more risks in the hopes of making a few more big plays. When reminded of that, Martin breaks into a big grin.

"Coach Sanders has got a few tricks in his bag that nobody has seen," said Martin. "I look forward to pulling them out."

So Martin, having escaped the shadow of the great Peyton Manning, has taken Tennessee to places not even he could have dreamed of in those difficult days in Mobile. Will he feel pressure as the Vols try to repeat in 1999?

Now that we know Tee Martin, it's obvious the answer is no.

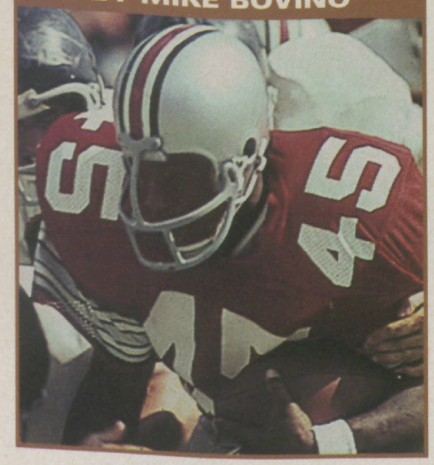
SECOND EFFORT

BY MIKE BOVINO



OHIO STATE RUNNING BACK ARCHIE GRIFFIN WON HIS SECOND HEISMAN THE HARD WAY.

Archie Griffin stands alone for winning back-to-back Heisman Trophies. Yet his devotion to team excellence, rather than individual performance, was as noteworthy as his running during his magical 1974 and 1975 Heisman Trophy-winning seasons.

"That trophy is a team honor," Griffin once said. "They (his teammates) all earned it. It just has my name on it."

Thanks to the diverse talents of Buckeye teammates such as quarterback and team MVP Cornelius Greene, fullback Pete Johnson, All-America offensive guard Ted Smith, and stellar tackles Scott Dannellyey and Chris Ward, Griffin raced toward a second Heisman, while the Buckeyes raced to the top of the polls.

From his first game as a freshman Ohio State fans knew there was something special about this halfback from Columbus with the powerful internal drive.

On Sept. 30, 1972, the first year the NCAA allowed freshmen eligibility for varsity football, Griffin entered the game against North Carolina midway through the first quarter. When the final gun sounded, the Buckeye halfback, who had attended his first college class just three days earlier, held the new Ohio State single-game rushing record with 239 yards! An extraordinary career had been launched.

The next season, Griffin served notice to the Heisman voters by rushing for 1,428 regular-season yards and becoming the first sophomore in half a century to be honored as the Big Ten's Most Valuable Player. He was instrumental in the Buckeyes' 10-0-1 record and No. 2 final ranking, and finished fifth in Heisman balloting.

Rushing for a school and Big Ten-record 1,620 yards in his junior season with an astounding 6.8 yards-per-carry average, Griffin won over the Heisman voters. They awarded him 1,920 points to runner-up USC tailback Anthony Davis's 819.

By becoming only the fifth junior ever to win the Heisman, Griffin felt the pressure to become the first to repeat. Army's Doc Blanchard (1945), SMU's Doak Walker (1948), Ohio State's Vic Janowicz (1950), and Navy's Roger Staubach (1963) all won the award their junior years, but failed to repeat when injuries slowed each of them to varying degrees their senior seasons.

The challenge to stay healthy would be Griffin's greatest, as opposing teams keyed on him in 1975. Although the targeted halfback wore lineman's thigh pads to protect his legs, he usually was so battered following games that he couldn't practice until Wednesdays.

Two West Coast running backs, California's Chuck Muncie and USC's Ricky Bell, would provide competition for Griffin in his quest for a second Heisman. But Griffin's priorities resided first and foremost with the team. Prior to the start of the '75 season, he commented he would gladly give up all of his individual awards, including the Heisman, to be on a national champion.

Griffin helped propel Ohio State to an 11-0 record and No. 1 national ranking entering the Rose Bowl. Although his individual statistics had fallen off somewhat—1,357 yards rushing, sixth-best in the nation—his numbers were impressive given his injuries and status as a marked man.

Meanwhile, Muncie battled Bell for attention within the Pac-8 as well as on the national landscape. Muncie revitalized a dormant Cal program, igniting the team to an 8-3 record and No. 14 ranking, rushing for a school-record 1,460 yards and 13 touchdowns, catching 39 passes for 392 yards and two touchdowns, and completing three of three pass attempts for 143 yards and two touchdowns!

Bell, meanwhile, continued the tradition of excellent USC tailbacks. He led the country in rushing with 1,875 yards (170.5 yards per game), while averaging nearly 33 carries a game, while rushing for at least 190 yards on five occasions during the team's 7-4 season.

Voters were obviously moved by Griffin's pivotal role in the No. 1 Buckeyes' success, which culminated in a Big Ten title and Ohio State's fourth consecutive Rose Bowl appearance.

Griffin captured 1,800 points, easily beating Muncie (730), Bell (708), and Pittsburgh's Tony Dorsett (616). He became the first college player to rush for more than 5,000 yards in a career (5,177, fifth all-time), accumulate more than 6,000 all-purpose yards (6,003), and record 100-yard rushing in 31 consecutive regular-season games.

The more than 800,000 men and women of the U.S. Postal Service bring the same strength through diversity of talent to the workplace that Archie Griffin brought to the '75 Buckeyes. By embracing and celebrating the many cultures represented within the Postal Service, the organization strenthens itself through unparalleled opportunity for personal and professional development. ■

THE HEARTBREAK KID

SYRACUSE RUNNING BACK ERNIE DAVIS BROKE THE HEISMAN COLOR BARRIER BEFORE BREAKING THE HEARTS OF THE NATION.

College football had been pretty much a white player's game through the first six decades of the 20th century. It wasn't until the late '50s when black players began to make their presence felt and it wasn't until 1961 that the first of them won the Heisman Trophy.

Ernie Davis was a powerful, 6-2, 212-pound running back who was born in Uniontown, Pa., and moved to Elmira, N.Y., when he was 11 years old.

Orange when, as a sophomore in 1959, he led Syracuse to the national championship and a perfect 10-0 record, including a 23-14 victory over Texas in the Cotton Bowl. He was not among the top 10 Heisman vote getters that season, when Billy Cannon of Louisiana State won the award. In 1960, he had his greatest season, averaging 7.8 yards a carry and surpassing his previous season's rushing totals (877 to 686), yet still he didn't crack the top 10 vote-getters, either. Another Eastern running back, Navy's Joe Bellino, won the award.

Davis' choice in 1961 was close, though he was the preseason favorite. He edged Ohio State fullback Bob Ferguson after he rang up 823 yards on 153 carries, for a 5.5 average. "Winning the Heisman Trophy is something you just dream about," he said. "You never think it could happen to you."

That it happened to him, and not to his boyhood idol, Jim Brown, was one of the great ironies in Ernie's life. Five years before Davis won his award, Brown, the first of a great line of Syracuse backs through the '50s and '60s (Davis was the second), finished fifth in the Heisman balloting behind winner Paul Hornung, a quarterback on a very poor Notre Dame team. Many still consider Brown the greatest running back of all time, thanks mainly to his fame with the Cleveland Browns.

As a high school player at Elmira Free Academy, Davis had idolized Brown. The latter, then a star with the Cleveland Browns, helped to recruit him, and that's all it took for Davis to choose Syracuse to try and follow in his footsteps. But Davis did even better—he broke all of Brown's rushing records at the school and then was the No. 1 pick of the 1962 NFL Draft by the Washington Redskins, the first black player ever selected by that team. A month later, his dream of joining Brown as a teammate was realized when Cleveland traded for his rights. Cleveland coach Paul Brown had planned to use them in the same backfield, with Davis eventually replacing Brown as the team's star running back.

But in one of football's great tragedies, the potential greatness of that pairing was never realized. Ernie was diagnosed with leukemia during the summer of 1962 and he never played in another game. He died on May 18, 1963.

> "If you made just one mistake against him, it was good-bye. He was the kind of runner you hated to coach against. You can't instruct a boy to tackle a man if he can't catch him."
> JOE PATERNO

While Brown is best remembered for his exploits in pro football, Davis earned all of his football reputation at Syracuse. He rushed for 2,386 yards during his three varsity seasons (freshmen were not permitted to play varsity football at that time) and gained a solid 3,414 all-purpose yards. He also amassed 220 points, and scored 35 touchdowns.

Ben Schwartzwalder coached both players (as well as future Syracuse running stars Floyd Little and Larry Csonka, who, like Brown and Davis, wore jersey No. 44) and he was solidly entrenched in the belief that running the football was the only way to go. Because he had flashed into prominence so early, Davis spent his final two seasons as a marked man by Syracuse opponents. "He earned everything he achieved," Schwartzwalder once said. "He was our big guy and we gave him the ball most of the time. Much of what he did came from his great talent because no one attracted a crowd quicker than Ernie did when he got the ball."

Penn State coach Joe Paterno coached against him for three seasons and said, "If you made just one mistake against him, it was good-bye. He was the kind of runner you hated to coach against. You can't instruct a boy to tackle a man if he can't catch him."

Davis was faster than Brown as a collegian and just as strong. He also had more agility in the open field and, while Brown would run over people if he found he couldn't elude them, Davis could do both equally well.

During the Cotton Bowl game against Texas as a sophomore, he flashed into the secondary as a pass receiver, split two defenders and faked a safety to break into the clear and catch an 87-yard touchdown pass as easily as if it had been in a practice session. Schwartzwalder strongly favored the running game over the passing game, even with a player of Davis' talents, so his receiving skills were always underutilized. In his Heisman season, he was his team's top receiver with just 16 catches.

Davis was equally impressive off the field, and while as talented as Brown, he was totally different in personality. Ernie was a quiet, unassuming young man who didn't have Brown's dark, moody, I-dare-you-to-knock-this-chip-off-my-shoulder approach to life. "He was so good, he had no imperfections," Schwartzwalder once said. "He was like a man with a halo."

When it was discovered that Davis had leukemia and that he had only a relatively short time to live, he sought no sympathy and brushed aside any consolations of the bad hand fate had dealt him.

"Some people say I'm unlucky, but I don't believe it," he said. "When I look back on all that I've achieved, I can't really call myself unlucky." ■

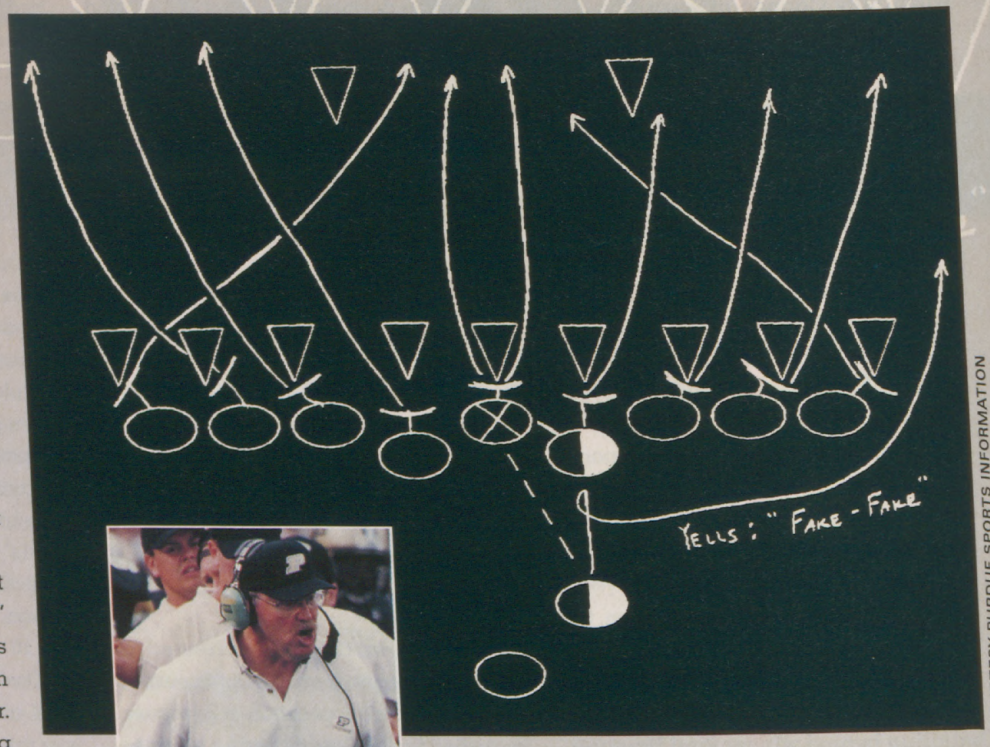
PLAYING THE SLOTS

PURDUE HEAD COACH JOE TILLER'S DOUBLE-SLOT BACK PUNT FORMATION CREATED THE PERFECT DUCK BLIND.

BY DAN HERBST



COURTESY PURDUE SPORTS INFORMATION

Joe Tiller doesn't get excited about "deceptives," with the possible exception of the double-slot back punt formation.

The first thing you should know about Joe Tiller is that he's been given the wrong assignment at Purdue. Anybody who insists on referring to trick plays as "deceptives" clearly belongs not in the athletic office but in the political science department. The second relevant fact is that he and his coconspirators pulled off a doozie of a deceptive during his days as a Washington State assistant coach, roughly a quarter of a century ago.

"It was a calculated risk against a superior opponent that worked," recalls Tiller. "Our head coach was Jim Sweeney, who has always been something of a riverboat gambler. To his credit, he would attempt a deceptive from any part of the field at any time. He had an influence on me because that's a fun part of the game. The players and fans like it. You just hope it's successful because when one works it's something that everyone leaves the stadium talking about.

"This was a close game. We were a .500 team that was good but not great. Oregon was an upper division Pac-10 team, so we knew to win we'd have to take some chances. We lined up in our standard punt formation with two slot backs, each about one yard off the line of scrimmage and about a yard-and-a-half to either side of our center. [The punter's] protector was about five yards deep. We had our guards up on the line with two yards between them, our tackles, and our ends.

"We snapped the ball directly to the personal protector. He caught the ball and took a couple of steps ahead. Meanwhile, our slot backs continued to face forward. Bernard Jackson, who was one of the slot backs, put his hand between his legs. The protector took a couple of steps forward and then placed the ball between Bernard's legs under his rump and into his hands. As he did that he spun around as if it was an end run. We had half of the Oregon team rushing the punter and our punter did some great acting by going through his kicking motion even though he never touched the ball.

"One of their defenders broke across the line of scrimmage and he actually put his left hand on Bernard's helmet after he'd been given the ball. Luckily for us, their guy didn't see that the ball was right in front of him, so he started running in a circle to chase our protector. After those guys cleared the line our slot back took off."

So fooled was the opposition that Tiller himself probably could have run the ball for 50 yards. Instead, the lugger of the leather was none other than Jackson, a future Cincinnati Bengal defensive back who, understates Tiller, "was real fast. By the time they realized what was going on Bernard was long gone. It was perfectly executed. That was the most effective deceptive that I have ever seen."

Otterbein, off to its best start since 1981, takes on cross-town rival Capital in tonight's Ohio Athletic Conference (OAC) matchup.

The Cardinals, 3-1 overall, sit in a five-way tie for second place with a 2-1 OAC record. The Crusaders are seeking their first win.

Under head coach Wally Hood, who is in his fifth season with the Cardinals, Otterbein continues to turn heads, coming into the game off an impressive 48-22 win at Muskingum last Saturday. And the pundits are beginning to take notice. The Cards entered the week ranked 18th in the nation by Don Hansen's National Weekly Football Gazette.

Capital, under head coach Jim Collins, who is in his third season with the Crusaders, dropped a 33-9 decision to Heidelberg at home last Saturday. The team opened '99 with a 19-0 loss at non-conference Thiel, followed by conference losses to John Carroll, 51-12, and Muskingum, 42-21.

Otterbein has won the last four meetings with Capital, including a 31-15 verdict in Columbus last season. Matt D'Orazio connected on 22 of 32 pass attempts for 279 yards and two touchdowns. Jeff Gibbs, Joe Simmons and Ben Streby caught five passes each in the win. The Crusaders hold a 36-34-3 edge in the series which began in 1894 with an Otterbein 60-0 victory.

Following Capital, Otterbein hits the road for a 1:30 p.m. kickoff next Saturday at three-time defending national champion Mount Union.

The Purple Raiders, with a win at Heidelberg this evening, will seek to set the NCAA record for consecutive wins in the Otterbein game. Mount Union won its 46th straight with a thrilling triple overtime win, 57-51, at John Carroll last Saturday. Oklahoma holds the record, winning 47 straight from 1953 to 1957.

Cardinal Notes

Streby Sets Mark: Streby made three touchdown receptions at Muskingum, boosting his season total to 11, an Otterbein single-season record. The former record of nine was set by Ron Jones in 1960. With 17 career touchdown receptions, Streby needs three to tie the school career record of 20 which was also set by Jones (1958-60).

D'Orazio Rewrites History: D'Orazio tallied five touchdown passes at Muskingum, bringing his career total to 54, an Otterbein record. He broke the career record with three touchdown passes at John Carroll Sept. 25. Luke Hanks (1990-93) set the former mark of 47. D'Orazio sits sixth on the OAC career list.

Back-to-Back 100's: Running back Shane Rannebarger, for the second straight week, rushed for over 100 yards. He tallied 121 yards and a touchdown on 21 carries at Muskingum. A week earlier, Rannebarger rushed for 107 yards on 16 carries at John Carroll.

Seconds: Otterbein sits second in total defense (giving up 290.2 yards a game) and total offense (gaining 460.2 yards a game) in the OAC. The squad is second with a plus-six turnover margin.

Cardinal Marching Band

The Cardinal Marching Band continues its tradition of highlighting halftime with hand-clapping, toe-tapping music for football fans of all ages. Besides its popular football game performances, the band also performs in local parades and at special functions. To add to these performances, the band provides music for front groups, including the O-Squad (dance), the Cardinal Guard (flags), and solo featured twirlers.

One of the outside functions the band is noted for is the annual Circleville Pumpkin Show. The band also performs at local high school band concerts, including St. Francis DeSales High School. This program is designed to interest high school students in becoming involved with marching band in college.

The Cardinal Marching Band also has a very active alumni following. Alumni band members often join the band in celebrating Homecoming.

Senior Drum Major Carl Gelfius, First Assistant Andrew Peters and Second Assistant Mandi Wilson will lead the Cardinal Marching Band onto the field this year. The 1999 band is under the direction of band directors Dr. Jeffrey D. Boehm '82 and Mr. John Orr '79. The Cardinal Guard and O-Squad advisor is Susie Crum '86.

Membership in the band is open to all students of Otterbein College, regardless of their majors. Of the approximately 100 members, one-third are music majors and the other two-thirds come from other areas of the college.

This season's musical selections are taken from a variety of genre, including Rock, Jazz, Classical and Show tunes.

Dr. Jeffrey D. Boehm '82 is beginning his third year as Director of the Otterbein Cardinal Marching Band. Dr. Boehm came to Westerville after having taught for three years at William Penn College in Oskaloosa, Iowa. He received his Ph.D. in Music Education and his M.M. in Trumpet Performance from the University of Wisconsin, Madison, and his B.M.E. from Otterbein College in 1982. Dr. Boehm has 12 years of public and private school teaching experience, having taught all levels of band in Westerville, OH; Milton, WV; Madison, WI; and Oskaloosa, IA. He also was the drill coordinator and a horn-line instructor with the Capitol Aires Drum and Bugle Corps from Madison, WI. Dr. Boehm is an active trumpet player, and has formed a chamber duo with his wife, Kim, called the Boehm System.

John W. Orr '79 is serving in his fourth year as Assistant Director of the Cardinal Marching Band. An Otterbein alumnus, John is married to Denise (Alford), a fellow member of the Class of 1979. Both John and Denise were in the Cardinal Marching Band for four years under the direction of Professor Gary Tirey. In addition to receiving bachelor's degrees in Music Education and B.S. in Elementary Education from Otterbein, John holds a Master of Educational Administration. John's marching band experience includes work with the high school bands in Dublin and Pickerington, as well as 16 years assisting with the Independence High School Band in the Columbus Public Schools.

Otterbein "O" Club

Otterbein "O" Club
"Supporting Otterbein College Athletics Since 1955"
The Otterbein "O" Club is a nonprofit entity. Although the "O" Club is closely affiliated with Otterbein College, it remains a separate 501(c)(3) corporation.

Established in October of 1955, the Otterbein "O" Club is the athletic boosters association affiliated with Otterbein College. Working closely with Athletic Director Dick Reynolds, the "O" Club strives to enhance the efforts of the athletic department by assisting with the upgrade of athletic facilities and equipment, and hosting special events. The "O" Club also owns and maintains a small fleet of vehicles used to transport athletes to their events, including the motor coach donated to the "O" Club in 1987 by Dorothy McVay.

"O" Club Foundation
The "O" Club Foundation was established in 1980 to provide a permanent and regular source of income to the "O" Club. Donations to the Foundation are permanently invested. Supporters who have contributed $1,000 or more to the "O" Club are considered Foundation Members. Former "O" Club President Robert "Moe" Agler initiated the Hit a Million Campaign in 1995 to raise the Foundation's total assets to $1 million by 2001. Today, through the generosity of many "O" Club supporters, the Foundation is nearing that goal.

"O" Club Membership
The "O" Club Board of Directors invites all persons or corporations interested in supporting Otterbein College athletics to become active members of the "O" Club. There are no membership dues. However, the "O" Club suggests an annual contribution to help defray costs.

FROM DUSK 'TIL DAWN CONTINUED

When sophomore QB Antonio Hawkins connected with Damon Thompson on a 43-yard scoring pass, Virginia State led, 33-26, with 5:11 remaining in the third quarter. Hawkins, from Richmond, passed for 306 yards and 3 TDs on the night.

"We probably took it for granted [when the first half went so well]," Cook says. "Then we learned the hard way."

Wyatt pulled Troutman from the game, and adopted more of a passing offense with Randall Foster at the helm. Foster led an 80-yard drive in the fourth quarter, culminating in Johnny Hart's one-yard run to tie the game with 3:27 to play.

As luck would have it, Anderson and Wyatt had different philosophies about overtime. Anderson felt it was better to have the ball first, Wyatt preferred starting on defense, finding out what his offense needed before it took the field. So Virginia State started each overtime period on offense.

Each team scored in the first session, Foster tying the game with a 13-yard run. An interception stopped State in the second OT, but Danny Mathis missed a field goal, and the game kept going.

The rules change a little after two overtimes. Teams cannot kick extra points, but must go for two instead.

And so it was that Virginia State moved out to a 48-40 lead. Deveron Kearney scored the TD, and Hawkins hit Desmond Thornton for the conversion.

Foster struck immediately, hitting Larry Jones on the first play for a touchdown and Antonio Stanley for the tying two-pointer. Both plays featured difficult receptions.

"We made catches that were uncatchable in the overtimes," Wyatt says.

The fourth overtime was scoreless, and each team managed a field goal in the fifth, putting the score at 51-all.

In the sixth period, Hawkins and Foster each threw touchdown passes, but neither team could convert the conversion, setting the stage for Cook's dive.

Isaac Johnson attempted a 35-yard field goal that would have given State the lead. Cook, a 6-foot-6 defensive lineman, blocked the kick and got a perfect bounce. He gathered the ball in stride, with nothing but the end zone ahead.

Except for that red line five yards before the end zone.

"It got on ESPN, the first time we've ever been on ESPN," Wyatt says of the play, which earned Cook the nickname "Big Dive," among others. "It got a lot of great publicity for us."

Anderson, the Virginia State coach given new life by the gaffe, said he doesn't allow his team to perform touchdown dives.

He added, "I thought that guy was offside. It looked like it hit him right in the stomach."

Troutman, who grew up in Daytona Beach, said Cook had seen him dive earlier when Troutman scored in the first half.

The mood on the sideline wasn't as bad as Cook expected.

"They laughed at it," he says. Then his teammates got serious again. "They said 'You gotta go back out there and make some plays.'"

So on they went. Bethune-Cookman started its possession at the 25, rather than the one, and Foster threw an interception.

In the eighth overtime, Bethune-Cookman's Doby Lewis forced a fumble recording the Wildcats' 14th sack, a school and Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference record. The Wildcats recovered.

On its first two plays, Bethune-Cookman lost a yard. With third-and-11 at the 26, Wyatt sent Troutman back in the game. The plan was to run the option, at least to improve field goal position.

"I went ahead and saw the opening," Troutman says. "My teammates made the key blocks down the field."

Troutman's 26-yard run came at 11:50 p.m. Kickoff at Municipal Stadium had been at 7:00.

"That was like playing two games," Wyatt says.

For Virginia State, the night was just beginning. The players finally ate around 1 a.m. and, with their flight home scheduled for 6 a.m., they had to leave for the airport at 4:00.

Auxiliary members of the traveling party, like sports information director Greg Goings, had it even worse. He had a 6 a.m. flight...out of Orlando, about a 90-minute drive.

But nobody, winners or losers, is unhappy with the overtime system.

"It's a fair system of what needs to be done to win a football game," Wyatt says. "They just didn't figure you'd have games like that."

So he likes the rules?

"That night I did," Wyatt says .

YOU MAKE THE CALL

The rare play, quirky bounce or bizarre situation can give college football referees instant headaches, especially since they are expected to make immediate decisions during the heat of battle. Under the gun, could you make the right call? Touchdown Illustrated gives you the whistle. Below are rulebook headaches designed to test your knowledge of the game. You be the ref!

HEADACHE #1

BRIGHAM YOUNG vs. COLORADO STATE

On second and 10 from the Brigham Young 40, Colorado State wide receiver Frank Rice goes in motion and stops. Before he is stopped one second, running back Kevin McDougal takes two steps back. As he stops, the Rams snap the ball.

YOU'RE THE REF:
What happens next?

ANSWER

The play is blown dead and Colorado State is penalized five yards from the previous spot. Once McDougal moves before Rice comes to a complete stop, the entire 11 men must be set for one second.

HEADACHE #2

SYRACUSE vs. MIAMI

Syracuse wide receiver Quinton Spotwood and Miami safety Al Blades run shoulder-to-shoulder down the left sideline. Blades has inside position. About 20 yards down field, Spotwood breaks to the inside and contacts Blades, who makes no effort to get to the pass.

YOU'RE THE REF:
What happens next?

ANSWER

Miami is flagged for defensive pass interference. Syracuse gets a first down 15 yards from the previous spot, in accordance with Rule 7, Article 3, Section 8, Part XV.

HEADACHE #3

NOTRE DAME vs. USC

Notre Dame wide receiver Bobby Brown and USC safety David Gibson run shoulder-to-shoulder down the right sideline. Gibson has the inside position. About 20 yards down field, Brown cuts to the middle, runs into Gibson and falls down. Seeing the contact, N.D. quarterback Jarious Jackson fires downfield toward Brown

YOU'RE THE REF:
What happens next?

ANSWER

There is no foul and the pass is incomplete. According to Rule 7, Article 3, Section 8, Part XIII, because contact occurred before the pass was thrown, there is no interference.

HEADACHE #4

ARIZONA STATE vs. ARIZONA

About 10 yards downfield, Arizona State tight end Todd Heap cuts right across the middle. At the same time from the other side, tailback J.R. Redmond cuts left across the middle and in front of Heap. Redmond's cut leads Arizona linebacker Marcus Bell into Heap. The ball is thrown too high for Redmond to catch the ball.

YOU'RE THE REF:
What happens next?

ANSWER

There is no foul on the play. Pass interference would only be called if the pass was thrown toward Heap and been catchable, according to Rule 7, Article 3, Section 9, Part I.

HOLTZ: SOUTH CAROLINA SPORTS INFORMATION; ROBINSON: UNLV SPORTS INFORMATION; ERICKSON: OREGON STATE SPORTS INFORMATION

VETERAN COACHES LOU HOLTZ, JOHN ROBINSON AND DENNIS ERICKSON HAVE STAKED THEIR REPUTATIONS TO ATTEMPT MAJOR REBUILDING PROJECTS.

BY ANTHONY McCARRON

'COCK-A-DOODLE-LOU

Early in his tenure as newly minted South Carolina coach, Lou Holtz was asked about the Gamecocks' prospects for a bowl bid.

"That," Holtz said, "is like talking to a homeless person about a 401(k) plan."

Holtz wasn't making a crass, politically incorrect crack. Rather, he was summing up the state of the football program. "What I was saying was, 'Tell me what applies to me,'" Holtz says.

That's how difficult a job Holtz faces after leaving a cushy broadcasting gig with CBS for Columbia, S.C. South Carolina, a doormat in the powerful SEC, was 1-10 last season, its worst in 106 years of football. And that is 106 years without much gridiron legacy—the Gamecocks have gone to one major bowl (the Gator Bowl during World War II, a loss) and won more than eight games only once.

Though the school has a rabid fan base and its annual meeting with mega-rival Clemson practically shuts down the state for a day, many of South Carolina's best prep players are bolting for greener football fields when it comes time to commit to college. Notre Dame and Tennessee each had three Palmetto State natives in their starting lineups last season.

"People think there's a 'Chicken Curse,'" Holtz says. "Anyone who strives for anything other than mediocrity is cursed. It's pretty much understood in college football that you can't win here."

That's why, Holtz says, South Carolina football has "moments, not tradition. We have George Rogers, a beautiful person, winning the Heisman. We have to build tradition."

Holtz, 61, is one of several high-profile coaches rebuilding in new surroundings this season, along with Oregon State's Dennis Erickson and John Robinson at UNLV. With his success at places such as Notre Dame, Minnesota and Arkansas and the dilapidated state of football in Columbia, Holtz' story should prove to be the most compelling among coaches starting from scratch, even with Robinson inheriting a team with a 16-game losing streak.

Holtz already has had an impact after signing a five-year contract worth $600,000 per year. Fans are buzzing. The South Carolina sports information office is besieged by requests for Holtz to talk about his task. Fox Sports South is televising his press conferences live. His summer tour of the state, in which he spoke to overflow crowds at booster clubs, was more of a state occasion than the Spoleto Festival.

But Holtz-as-Gamecock almost never was. He said he turned down the job three times, including twice early in his career, when he was at North Carolina State.

"It was over and done with this most recent time," Holtz says. "I went to Nashville to do a broadcast and my wife called and said I ought to do it. That's how it became a possibility. I've always enjoyed coaching and considered myself a teacher, so I did it."

He installed his ideas immediately. And his eagerness to improve the program. He put up a bumper sticker on a closet door in his office that read, "How do you spell relief? H-O-L-T-Z."

His winter conditioning program, known at Notre Dame as the "Pukefest," was in place to get players ready for spring practice. He and his handpicked staff began massaging players' attitudes, tweaking work habits and defining roles. "And I'm talking about if the coach says something, it's not just a suggestion," Holtz says. "The big thing is getting them to believe."

Holtz says that teams go through four stages, from becoming competitive to expecting to win, to learning to handle success and, finally, expecting to compete for a national championship.

"We're trying to be competitive," Holtz says. "That's where you go in and say, 'We get a break or two, we can beat anyone, no matter what.' When you expect to win, that's where you remember to do the little things in a critical situation that wins games. And you expect to go to a bowl.

"Next, you learn to handle success. You're starting to get accolades, but you've got to watch that you don't fall back while taking your victory lap. You've got to stop pettiness from coming in, where someone says, 'I didn't get the ball enough' or 'I didn't get my picture in the paper.'

"The last stage, that's where 11-1 and a bowl game victory isn't a great season."

Holtz spent spring practice trying to put players in the right spot on the field. He worked out a starting lineup, except for the offensive line and the kicking game.

"I know two players who will be in the starting lineup on the o-line," Holtz says. "But I don't know where they'll play. I still don't know who I'll see out there in the fall when I say, "OK, let's work the first unit."

On defense, Holtz saw in the spring that his team would have to improve their tackling. "Either that, or I've got to work like hell to get tackling banned from the game of football," he quips.

Despite the challenges, Holtz thinks that he can make the next Kansas State out of South Carolina. "I know we were 1-10 last year, but that's a plus in one respect, because we've had to look at everything," Holtz says. "If we had been 5-6, we might have been tempted to just change a spark-plug or two.

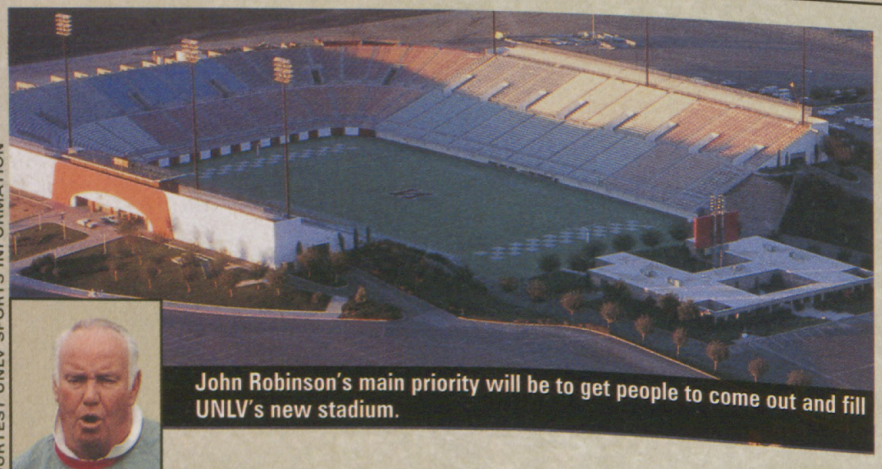
"There are plenty of positives here. We have a great university, we're in a beautiful, clean state with mountains, the ocean and a great cilmate. Our facilities need to be improved, but our stadium is as impressive as any in the country.

"We've had too many athletes living off-campus. We're going to get them on campus and we sure have the schedule to attract players—eight bowl teams this season. We'll get the kids to stay home.

"But I'm not here on an eight-year rebuilding program and I didn't come here to prop up my feet and retire, either.

"Rome wasn't built in a day only because I wasn't the foreman. Patience is not a virtue of mine.

"We're going to try to be competitive."



COURTESY UNLV SPORTS INFORMATION

John Robinson's main priority will be to get people to come out and fill UNLV's new stadium.

CHEERS AND GROWING IN LAS VEGAS

While Holtz tries to conjure up a K-State-like turnaround, new UNLV coach John Robinson called the architect of Kansas State's blossoming, Bill Snyder, for tips on how to build his new program from the shambles of 16 straight losses and just four wins in three years.

"Bill is a friend and I talked to him about how he went about it," says Robinson, 63, who returned from a one-year absence from football. "He was patient. It didn't just happen. I got a sense of how very determined he was.

"Hey, if you're looking for a repeat of what K-State did, it could happen here. In college football now, it can happen. It couldn't happen 20 years ago, because the powers then were the powers and the have-nots were the have-nots. That's not true now. Every time I look around, I see programs making rapid changes."

Robinson is also optimistic because, while the team has been the equivalent of taking a hit on 12 and seeing a king come up at one of the city's blackjack tables, internal improvements in the program have been a jackpot.

UNLV is in the middle of an $18 million renovation of Sam Boyd Stadium that could make it one of the finest college venues in the West. It will be boosted to 40,000 seats, have a new press box, suites and club level seats—perfect for a sports-mad town.

Plus, the administration, Robinson says, has decided to build up football. They inked Robinson to a three-year deal at $350,000 per and even jacked up salaries for assistant coaches.

"There was never a commitment before," Robinson says. "They just never improved the commitment when the program went to Division I and never got a first-rate program going. It was bare bones, always an orphan. It's been a tradition, being second-rate."

UNLV is also just a four-hour drive from the talent hotbed that is Southern California, so Robinson feels he'll be able to recruit. "If you don't go to USC or UCLA and you live in Southern California, we're the next closest D-I school. That gives us a base. We're not saying we can compete with them, but it's a base."

Robinson has preached patience and planning. "I have specific goals, but they're not related to wins," he says. "It's habits, self-image. Those are the things that have to change. We're trying to build a foundation. I won't predict a year that we'll be good, because that limits it. We need to make progress.

"I've been a fund-raiser, a visionary, a salesman since I've been here. Sometimes I feel like I'm running for mayor," Robinson says. "Vegas is a city that buys into new ideas. You say you're going to put up a hotel and three weeks later, there is one. There's a lot of daring in this city. The opportunity is there. We're starting something that hasn't existed here."

THE AFTERLIFE OF RILEY

While Holtz and Robinson are getting back into coaching after taking time away from the sidelines, Oregon State's new head coach, Dennis Erickson, is moving over from the NFL's Seattle Seahawks. It won't be an adjustment, since Erickson cut his teeth as a college coach at Idaho, Wyoming, Washington State and Miami.

"The personnel and the ability are obviously different from the NFL," Erickson says, "I've got to adjust to understanding the level of play again. The NFL, that's the players' job and you've got them for as long as you want. In college, you have limits."

Though Erickson is taking over a program that has enjoyed more recent success than South Carolina or UNLV, going 5-6 last year with a victory over rival Oregon, he says the mindset of building is similar.

"Obviously, the biggest thing is to get to a point where we can compete and believe we can win," Erickson says. "It's a matter of laying out a plan, techniques and making [the players] believe in themselves. We're hoping we can show success as we go through things to get a good self-image."

Erickson said there was a slight dip in morale on campus when ex-coach Mike Riley left to become head coach of the NFL's San Diego Chargers, but that he was well received. "Mike did a nice job and all of a sudden, the players were disappointed, Beaver fans were disappointed, but once we came in, people have been receptive," Erickson says.

"Now we've got a lot of work to do, but it's exciting."

Fans in Corvallis were a little disappointed to see Mike Riley (right) go, as the Beavers finished near .500 and showed signs of moving in the right direction. But Beaver fans will quickly forget him if Erickson can direct the team to a few more wins—especially in the "Civil War" against Oregon—and maybe a bowl trip to, say, Pasadena.

STOOPING TO NEW HEIGHTS

THE ARRIVAL OF NEW HEAD COACH BOB STOOPS AND HIS BROTHER, MIKE, HAS BROUGHT A NEW SENSE OF OPTIMISM TO DOWNTRODDEN OKLAHOMA.

Bob Stoops was upbeat when he met the demanding Oklahoma press and unveiled his plan to bring the Sooners back to the top.

BY CHRIS LINDSLEY

Jay Smith may know more about the University of Oklahoma's football decline than anyone in the Sooners locker room. Smith, a sixth-year offensive lineman, is now playing for his fourth head coach and fifth offensive coordinator. He's seen it all — coaches with different styles, strengths and temperaments. Their one similarity has been their inability to win consistently. Granted, expectations at Oklahoma, a tradition-rich program that's won six national titles, are unrealistically high, but the Sooners' 23-33-1 record over the past five years, bears little resemblance to those of the teams directed by legendary coaches Bud Wilkinson and Barry Switzer.

Smith has heard plenty of talk about returning the program to national prominence, but few signs the team is moving forward. Until this spring.

"When we started working in drills, we were actually working to get better," said Smith of new Oklahoma head coach Bob Stoops's first spring practice. "We weren't working to lose weight or to overwork us, which a lot of other coaches did. The players felt we were going to work hard to get better, not work hard to get worse."

Stoops came to Norman in December with a sterling resume and a fresh attitude. "I'm not going to come in with a bunch of promises," Stoops said at his first press conference. "If I were to say we're going to be 9-2 next year, that means I'm giving up two games. I believe you go all out, one game at a time. At the end of the season, you see how you did, where you succeeded, where you fell short and how you need to improve."

Stoops is widely considered one of the nation's best young coaches. He's literally helped change the way defense is played — from read and react to attack. His stop-the-run first and blitz-the-quarterback pressure defense has turned one program around and was the final piece of the puzzle for another.

Kansas State, a program with little tradition and even less success, went 35-12 in Stoops's last four seasons as co-defensive coordinator. The Wildcats won a school-record 10 games in 1995 thanks in large part to Stoops's defense. That unit led the nation in total defense and held six opponents to seven or less points, with three shutouts. Stoops was then hired away by Florida head coach Steve Spurrier. An offensive genius, Spurrier needed an equally sharp defensive mind for the Gators to go from good to great. Stoops proved to be the right choice. In his three years at Florida, Stoops's defenses ranked among the country's best and the Gators went 30-5 and won a national title.

"He was the reason we won a national title," said former Florida cornerback Fred Weary, who plays professionally for the New Orleans Saints. "Before he came we used to be a passive, reacting defense. He taught us to always attack, and by the time the offense adjusted it was too late."

Oklahoma fans will get a double dose of the Stoops defense, as one of Bob's first acts as head coach was to hire his brother, Mike, as co-defensive coordinator. Mike replaced Bob as Kansas State's defensive coordinator in 1996, but it was as though Bob never left. Mike's Wildcat defenses were very stingy, especially against the run. The two share the same defensive philosophy, a philosophy they began forming at an early age.

Their father, Ron, was defensive coordinator at powerhouse Cardinal Mooney High School in Youngstown, Ohio,

"I don't mind expectations. No one's expectations are higher than mine."
BOB STOOPS

for 28 years before his death in 1988, and sons Ron Jr., Bob, Mike and Mark were usually with him on the field and in the locker room growing up. The sons played for their father in high school and have gone on to be defensive coaches.

"Our dad was our idol," Bob Stoops said. "We developed a love for the game at an early age, and I learned from him that you can be hard on players as well as have fun with them. We also share the same philosophy about stopping the run."

Bob Stoops also developed a toughness and competitiveness from his father that has served him well. Ron Stoops suffered a heart attack in the final minutes of a 1988 game that went into overtime. He sat down on the bench and stayed there until Cardinal Mooney won before going to the hospital. He died on the way.

Don Bucci, who's entering his 34th year as Cardinal Mooney head coach, said he sees a lot of Ron in Bob. "Ron had a great defensive mind, and was a very sound coach, and I think Bob picked up on that," Bucci said.

Stoops also learned a lot from the head coaches he's worked for: Iowa's Hayden Fry, whom he also played for; Kansas State's Bill Snyder and Spurrier. Fry said that although Stoops has been a defensive player and coach, he also knows offense. "I can remember a game we played against a tremendous Illinois team and on the first play of the game they came out in a weird formation," Fry recalls. Bobby had broken down all the Illinois film prior to the game, and he starts yelling 'watch for the reverse.' The play was a reverse and we threw their wide receiver for a 12-yard loss. That set the tempo for the defense and we upset them."

Oklahoma's offense has been virtually nonexistent the past few seasons. In 1998, the Sooners ranked last in the Big 12 Conference in passing offense and 11th in total offense, while averaging less than 17 points a game. Stoops wasted no time addressing Oklahoma's offensive needs by hiring Kentucky offensive coordinator Mike Leach. Last season, Leach's possession-passing offense compiled more than 500 yards of total offense seven times, including 801 yards against Louisville. Leach also developed quarterback Tim Coach, who threw for 4,275 yards and 34 touchdowns last season and was the first player selected in the 1999 NFL Draft as a sophomore.

This year Leach will work with junior-college transfer Josh Heupel, perhaps the best Oklahoma passer since Troy Aikman. Heupel (pronounced HYPE-pull) threw for 2,308 yards and 28 touchdowns last season and is just the type of quarterback Leach wants to run his offense.

"Having played against them [at Florida], I recognized that Coach Leach's style has generated a lot of offense," Stoops said. "I felt that

FACILITIES

Memorial Stadium (5,000 capacity), with a 400-meter all-weather track around a natural grass football field, underwent major renovation in 1989-90.

New outdoor track and field facilities were installed in 1988 through a $100,000 donation from Mrs. Dorothy McVay, from Westerville. In 1989, the gridiron was named in honor of Dwight "Smokey" Ballenger, a 1939 graduate of Otterbein.

A $100,000 lighting system, courtesy of Cellular One, was installed in 1996.

Additional outdoor sports facilities include tennis courts, and separate fields for softball, baseball and soccer. A 2.5-mile cross country course, which meanders Alum Creek and traverses woods and farmland, opened in the fall of 1995.

Built in 1974, the Rike Center houses men's and women's athletics and physical education facilities and offices. The domed roof encloses an intercollegiate hardwood basketball floor with seating for 3,100; a tenth-mile oval track with an 87-yard straightaway and seating for 600; nets and space to segment three courts each for volleyball, basketball or tennis; equipped weight training room; two handball courts; gymnastics space; and locker rooms for varsity teams and physical education classes. Additionally, nets serve to section off a baseball infield and batting cages. Conventional classrooms and offices are located on the perimeter.

A $300,000 gift from the Rike family of Dayton inaugurated the capital campaign to finance construction of the Rike Center, which was built for about $1.5 million.

Gifts from the Otterbein alumni and friends have helped provide educational opportunities through athletics for sports-minded students. Former student-athletes have continued their success in coaching, teaching, recreational and professional fields—evidence of quality educational experiences offered at Otterbein College.

The Ohio Athletic Conference

Moving Progressively into the 21st Century

Commissioner: Timothy W. Gleason Assist. Commissioner: Angela Dudziak Supervisor of Officials: Gordon Schutt Secretary: Charlene Stoner

Welcoming a brand new century, the Ohio Athletic Conference (OAC) continues to grow in stature as one of the nation's premier conferences. To wit, all nine current OAC members had at least one team finish in the NCAA Sweet 16 last year, a feat that will be difficult to match. All told, the OAC garnered one national championship, three Final Fours, five Elite Eights and five more Sweet 16s in 1998-99.

Individually, the OAC boasted 59 All-America selections and 28 Academic All-Americans, including two national Academic Players of the Year. In addition, a usual plethora of players and coaches received national honors for their achievements.

The OAC, the third oldest conference in college athletics, is predated only by the Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association (1888) and the Big Ten (1895). The Conference is older than the Rose Bowl, the World Series and even the NCAA itself and has survived two world wars, the Great Depression, the Korean War and the Vietnam Conflict. From a modest beginning of six charter members in 1902, the OAC grew to as many as 24 members in the mid-1920s.

Through the years a total of 30 colleges and universities at one time or another have been members of the OAC. Currently the Conference consists of nine members, including Baldwin-Wallace College, Capital University, Heidelberg College, John Carroll University, Marietta College, Mount Union College, Muskingum College, Ohio Northern University and Otterbein College.

In the OAC's first year of existence, 1902, the first Conference champion was crowned— Case Tech won the football title with a 5-0-0 record. Outdoor track was added a year later and a third sport, cross country, became a Conference sport in 1914. More sports were steadily added to the OAC's repertoire throughout the years, culminating in the addition of women's sports in 1984. The Conference currently sponsors championships in 21 sports, 11 men's and 10 women's, with women's golf sponsoring its first championship in 2000.

The enrollments at the nine OAC institutions range from 1,200 to 4,000. All of the schools were founded in the 19th century and have long and outstanding academic reputations.

While maintaining these high academic standards, Ohio Athletic Conference athletic teams and athletes have consistently enjoyed a great deal of success on a regional and national level. The athletic competition is viewed not as an end in itself, but as an extension of the educational programs.
