New Student Convocation Welcomes Incoming Freshmen

Otterbein this fall conducted an expanded New Student Welcoming Convocation, an event to welcome incoming freshmen and to serve as a "bookend" for commencement four years down the line.

The convocation for the first time was modeled after commencement, with a marching procession and the names of the class of 2002 listed similarly in the program as graduates are in the commencement program. The affair was a combination of rolling out the welcome mat and a brief lesson of Otterbein history.

Ed Vaughn, associate professor of Theatre and Dance, reprised his role as the Rev. Lewis Davis, Otterbein's first president. Vaughn's speech as Davis was reminiscent of his performance at the Sesquicentennial Convocation. Vaughn and ten members of the Otterbein choir, directed by Professor of Music Craig Johnson, took the students on a musical jaunt down Otterbein's storied past. Interspersed with Davis's reminiscences were snippets of historical songs associated with Otterbein, such as "Up on the Husetop," "Darling Nellie Gray," and of course the "Otterbein Love Song."

Vice President and Academic Dean Patricia Frick told the students that the convocation was meant to "celebrate the academic spirit which has united the institution since its beginning, and to welcome you to the very special learning environment which characterizes Otterbein." She encouraged the students to "work with, rather than learn from, your professors. They will challenge you to explore new ideas, test your assumptions, and learn along with them."

Beth Rigel Daugherty, chairperson of Integrative Studies, related her own experiences of being 18 and going off to college for the first time, and how she was scared and excited at the same time. About her experience in being a freshman, she said, "I was coming alive, intellectually, socially, emotionally. That's my wish for you, that you will come alive here. Catch fire. Blossom. Experience the excitement and pleasure of learning."

Daugherty warned the students that at times, the faculty "will irritate and anger you. And indeed, something's wrong if they don't. They will make you work hard sometimes on what you will think is busy work. But that's the mental life's equivalent of running laps and practicing scales." Daugherty urged the students to "go for the education, go for the learning, and everything else, the degree, the career, the future, will fall into place."

Two current students also had words for the incoming class. Melissa Johnson, a senior in Public Relations, told the students, "within each one of you, God has placed a purpose. There's a reason for your existence, and a reason you're here at Otterbein." She also advised the students that a lot of learning goes on at Otterbein outside the classroom, in the community. She prodded the students to get involved in campus activities. "Walk into your purpose," Johnson said, "the world needs you. Otterbein needs you. Are you ready?"

Going Off to College for the First Time:

A Lesson in Life and Maraschino Cherries

It's fall, and that means new freshmen recently hit campus for the first time, taking that monumental leap in life, that first step away from the abodes where they grew up. In this issue we take a look at that experience, how that experience has changed throughout the years, and perhaps more importantly, how it's stayed the same. Starting on page 20, hear alumni from various generations talk about their experiences of coming to the 'Bein for the first time. We hope to do more of these "through the years" stories in the future, possibly looking at such topics as studying and dating, and looking again at how things have changed, and how they've stayed the same.

This year's incoming freshmen were met with more fanfare than usual, with the advent of an expanded New Student Convocation. As I sat and looked at the young faces at the convocation, and listened to Beth Daugherty, chairperson of Integrative Studies, talk about her own experience of arriving at college (Mt. Union), I thought about that time in my life.

Like Beth, I went to a small college, Lorain County Community College, and yet that small college seemed huge to me. I came from a small farming village in North-western Ohio (population 1,000, or maybe 999 after I left); LCCC might as well have been Ohio State.

No matter where we came from, though, we all felt that excitement. Is there truly any more exciting time in life? Being on one's own for the first time! I feel the heady rush of that even now, 27 years later.

One of the odd things I remember getting so excited about was going grocery shopping for the first time. I'd never done it! I could buy...anything, doughnuts, cookies, real Coca Cola instead of the generic ones. I couldn't believe that right there on the shelf, for sale, was a whole jar of maraschino cherries. I thought you had to have a license to dispense them one by one, carefully, over sundaes and banana splits. But there it was, a whole jar, right there on the shelf for the taking. And it didn't cost hundreds of dollars. I could afford it. I could buy it. And so I did.

And there I got the lesson on diminishing returns that finally sunk in. I finally understood. When you're half-way through the jar, those wonderful little things just aren't special anymore.

I try to remember both sides of leaving home and going to college for the first time. Oh, I remember the heady, giddy, stomach-churning excitement and exhilaration, but I also remember the wrenching heartache. I had been booted from my safe and comfortable high school environment, where three-sport lettermen were demigods (at least we were in our own minds). I had been dumped onto a college campus where I was not just another freshman, but a country bumpkin freshman to the city-slickers of Elyria and Lorain. I knew my track records couldn't save me now from this new and shocking reality that I was (oh God)...uncool. That I didn't have a prayer of getting a ticket to hip. Why hadn't I seen this in high school?!

It was a travesty, a nightmare. At orientation, my peace sign patches, the ones my mother had sewn so carefully at the bottoms of new wide-bell blue jeans, were being snickered at. Leave the letter jacket at home. It was a shocking development—I would actually have to become a person.

That first quarter was hard for me. My high-school girlfriend and I had broken up; she was two years younger and had to stay and cheer on the mighty Panthers. Someone else was wearing number 20 now. I no longer had any connection to a world that had been my world. At times I felt I couldn't take the heartache. Just last year, I'd been part of a championship team. The whole town stood and cheered...

And now I was a hick, stranger in a strange land.

But I knew there was something else going on...something, could it be, even possibly as good (better!?) than making a touchdown. I was learning, really learning. Yet another shock. I had come to college so I could get a better job. I hadn't even thought about learning anything. (Hey, I was a jock, okay?) But here I was, really seeing for the first time a whole world that was so much bigger than from where I'd come. It was an astonishing world, alive with knowledge, scary.

I discovered, that first year, that my brain could actually do something more than stick a running back in the stomach.

How sweet but bittersweet that time was.

I wish our incoming class of '02 truly the best for the upcoming year. It's not an easy time in your lives, but it's a wonderful time, one you'll remember forever.

I hope that by looking at little glimpses of that special time of starting college—through the years—perhaps we can see that no matter what generation we're in, we're not so far apart as we are one and the same; that the life experiences we hold common resound deeply greater than the particulars of clothes, music, trends and attitudes of any one generation.

If we listen earnestly to those in generations other than our own, older and younger, we just might...learn. Yes, it's even better than scoring a touchdown. ■

Jimmy Ondrey, senior accounting major, told the students he realized how much he had grown in his time at Otterbein. "You have planted the seed that is you in the soil that is Otterbein," he said. "Education is the water and sunshine you need...Learn best by living it, by loving it...that's Otterbein life."

To end the convocation, Craig Johnson led the audience in singing the Otterbein Love Song. The faculty then exited and stood and applauded as the Class of 2002, perhaps a bit self-consciously, made their way from Cowan Hall to Roush Hall and the beginning of their education at Otterbein.

Art Department, Children Create Books

Art Department Chairperson Nicholas Hill last spring received a grant from Ohio Campus Compact to bring children from inner city neighborhoods to the Otterbein campus to create a limited edition book.

This fall the Columbus Museum of Art displayed the Book of (H)ours, the result of their efforts. Approximately 50 children from Children of the Future, a city-wide multi-arts education program, worked in Otterbein's printmaking studio to generate the words and images for the book on community building, safety issues, and the concepts and use of time. Hill then transferred the text and pictures to plates for the printing process.

Under the guidance of Hill, Otterbein art students and other artists, the children also printed and assembled the books. With the exhibition of the book, there were also photographs of the children creating the book. Copies of the book were distributed to the children's schools and recreation centers.

Children of the Future is an arts and public safety program for youth ages five to 12. The daily art programming is free and available to children at inner-city recreation centers both after school and during the summer. Artists work in teams at the recreation centers to plan and conduct activities to develop exhibits and performances that can be seen at sites throughout the city. These exhibitions and performances help enhance the children's self-esteem and create in them a greater awareness of their roles and responsibilities in the larger community of which they are such an important part.

The program uses art to create a safe haven not only in the physical surroundings but also in the social and psychological environment. Through the program, children create art projects and performance pieces, and they also take field trips to other participating recreation centers, city parks, museums, and libraries. They attend live art performances and enjoy interactive presentations and workshops with visiting artists from the Greater Columbus Arts Council's Artist-in-Schools program.

Before joining the Otterbein faculty, Hill was employed by the Greater Columbus Arts Council as the program director of Children of the Future.

Ohio Campus Compact (OCC), which provided $1,800 for this project, is a coalition of Ohio colleges and universities established to increase campus-wide participation in community and public services.

Sarah Emerine, a teacher in the Children of the Future program, helps a student ink a plate for the Book of (H)ours.

Daumier Prints Displayed in Fisher Gallery

Otterbein College's Art Department this fall presented "The Human Comedy — Daumier and the Art of Caricature," a collection of prints by the 19th century French artist Honoré Daumier. From the collection of the Columbus Museum of Arts, this exhibition presents works from throughout Daumier's career.

Daumier's prints are on display at Otterbein in Fisher Gallery for the rest of 1998. Located in Roush Hall, 27 S. Grove St., Fisher Gallery is open Monday through Friday 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. There is no admission charge.

Daumier (1808-79) was perhaps the most significant caricaturist the world has ever known. Although his lithographs were inspired primarily by now long-forgotten events of the 19th century Paris, Daumier had a gift of being able to dramatize an abstract or political idea and present it in such convincing and universal terms that it still has meaning for audiences today.

A tireless fighter for political freedom, he used his art as a powerful weapon against the repressive forces of government. Daumier's political satires focus on issues that still concern us today: censorship, exploitation, corruption, police brutality, abuse of authority and the venality of the law. Daumier was also a faithful chronicler of Parisian middle class. Attuned to all its hopes and fears, its virtues and prejudices and its minor crises, Daumier presented the drama of humanity through the eyes of the middle class.

Daumier enjoyed a prolific career that spanned more than 40 years. He produced over 4,000 lithographs, 1,000 wood engravings, roughly 300 canvases, 70 sculptures and hundreds of drawings and watercolors. The efforts that gained him fame with the French people — and infamy with the French government — was the work he created in the new print medium of lithography, which is on display at Otterbein. Daumier's career spanned the reigns of three French rulers: Charles X, Louis Philippe and Napoleon III.

Daumier's work exemplifies the power of art to stimulate change in society. The political forces that constantly tried to eradicate his work did not succeed. His lithographs survive as compelling images that continue to speak with a fresh voice today.

"The Human Comedy — Daumier and the Art of Caricature," is a collaborative exhibition between the Columbus Museum of Art and the Art Dept. of Otterbein College. The selection of 19 lithographs featured in Fisher Gallery are on loan from the Museum's permanent collection.

Art Grads, We Want to See Your Art!

The Art Department is building a slide bank of current art work done by Otterbein College Art graduates. The slide bank will serve several purposes: creating a connection between the Art Department and alumni, providing a resource when selecting art for future exhibitions, and informing current students about the creative work of Otterbein art graduates. As a first step in the process, interested art graduates are asked to complete this form and mail it to Nicholas Hill, Chairperson, Art Department, Otterbein College, Westerville, OH 43081.

Towers Renovation on Schedule

Towers looks rough now, but soon it will shine with a new luster! This is the first floor toward the front of the building.

Towers may look the same from the outside (if you ignore the construction trailers parked around) but inside the renovation is well underway. Director of Physical Plant Kevin Miner reports that the demolition work is 90 percent complete.

The electrical work is progressing and workers have begun the installation of the heating, air conditioning and ventilation system. The elevator shaft in the northwest corner of the building has been constructed.

"It's on schedule and we moved Continuing Studies and the Academic Support Center back in during the first part of October," Miner says.

There have been a few surprises. The work crew found above the ceiling tiles of a first floor restroom a book from the Philomathean collection which had not been circulated since 1935. The book, Free Love and Votaries by John B. Ellis, was returned to the library archives.

Original pieces from a chandelier that once hung in one of the literary society rooms were found in a crawl space. Behind a display case, workers found the signatures of several students who have long-since graduated and, of course, old wallpaper has been uncovered.

Right now, most of the work has been in removing old features of the building. The ceiling was removed in the main hallway to make way for the arches that will be installed later. The three classrooms on the west side of the first floor, which used to be Centennial Library, have been opened into one long space again. With those walls removed, the whole length can be seen just as it was when Otterbein used the space for a library. That space will eventually be turned into two large classrooms.

The $4.7 million renovation of Towers Hall has been made possible through generous gifts of alumni, corporations, foundations, and friends of the college.

The renovated Towers should be open for public inspection in June 1999. Miner emphasizes that the project is within budget and on schedule to be completed in June.

Pi Kappa Delta Plans 75th Anniversary Reunion

Pi Kappa Delta, the first honorary ever established at Otterbein, will celebrate its 75th anniversary in 1999. Pi Kappa Delta is an honorary for achievement in speech and debate.

Susan Millsap, who has been Pi Kappa Delta advisor for the last 11 years, reports that plans are underway for a reunion in early January with past and current members of the speech and debate team making presentations.

For more information on the Pi Kappa Delta reunion, please contact Millsap at 614-823-1753.

Associate Professor of Chemistry Selected for Project Kaleidoscope

Dr. Chihae Yang, Associate Professor of Chemistry at Otterbein College, was chosen in May for membership in the Project Kaleidoscope Faculty for the 21st Century Network.

Project Kaleidoscope (PKAL) was formed in 1989 with support from the National Science Foundation to outline an agenda for reform of science and mathematics in liberal arts institutions. Since then, it has continued to be a part of a larger national effort to build an undergraduate science and mathematics community that serves the interests of students and society. Current membership includes over 600 colleges and universities and 3,000 faculty, administrators, and science leaders.

With support from the Exxon Education Foundation, PKAL has begun to build a network of emerging leaders in undergraduate science and mathematics. These are the faculty who have been identified by their senior administrators as having demonstrated promise as leaders within their local community and with the potential for national leadership into the next century. Known as PKAL F21 (Project Kaleidoscope Faculty for the 21st Century), this network offers members a wide range of opportunities to become productive agents of change in the scientific community on their campuses.

Yang was nominated for the PKAL F21 Network by Dr. Patricia

A. Frick, Vice President for Academic Affairs/Academic Dean at Otterbein College. As part of Yang's initiation into the network, she and Frick attended the PKAL Faculty for the 21st Century Assembly in Chicago, Illinois, in September. The goal of the assembly is to provide participants with the tools for their work as leaders at the local and national level. From case study presentations, they will collect specific ideas about curricular reform and about new approaches to working with students.

In addition, in August, Yang was awarded $75,000 by the National Science Foundation's Professional Opportunities for Women in Research and Education program.

The title of her project is "Research in Education Enhancement at Otterbein College: Effect of Surfactants Mesophase and Divalent Cations on Structures in Model Lipid Bilayers and Cell Membranes."

Her research is being done in collaboration with researchers at the Ohio State University. Under this grant, Dr. Yang also will be traveling to Chicago to the Argon National Laboratories to work on a project involving neutron scattering. ■

1998-99 Men's and Women's Basketball Preview

The Otterbein men's team, under 27th-year head coach Dick Reynolds, seeks to pick up where it ended last season, winning five of its last six games. The lone loss in that stretch—83-80 to Baldwin-Wallace—came in the championship game of the OAC Tournament.

The Cardinals return all five starters from last season's 15-12 squad, which finished in a tie with Muskingum for fourth place, each 10-8 in the OAC. Those five averaged a combined 65.3 points a game.

A starter since his freshman season, senior point guard Kevin Weakley from Lewis Center, Ohio is a two-time honorable mention All-OAC pick and tops the list of returning starters. Weakley, who averaged 15.7 points a game, led the conference in assists (six a game) and steals (2.9 an outing) last season.

Junior post Jason Dutcher, from Columbus, Ohio, earned 2nd team All-OAC honors as a sophomore. Dutcher averaged 15.8 points and a league-leading 9.3 rebounds a game last season. He shot 52.2 percent from the field, sixth best in the OAC.

Rounding out the list of returning starters are senior wing Ryan Roston from Galion, Ohio (13.9 ppg., 6.3 rpg.); sophomore wing Scott Elliott from Sunbury, Ohio (15.6 ppg., 5.3 rpg.); and sophomore guard Chad Dresbach from Hillsboro, Ohio (70 assists, 22 steals).

Roston and Elliott both received honorable mention All-OAC honors last season. Elliott placed tenth in the OAC for scoring, and second for free-throw percentage (87.1).

Returning lettermen and post players John Damschroder, a senior from Columbus, Ohio, and Trevor Younkin, a junior from Ashville, Ohio, provide experience and depth in the paint.

LeAndre Marshall, from Columbus, Ohio and a senior transfer from Goucher (MD) College, and Morgan Wenger, a sophomore from Dalton, Ohio who played junior varsity last season, provide depth along the perimeter.

Jason Dutcher

Women's Team Will Test Young Players

Eighth-year head coach Connie Richardson sends a fairly youthful squad into the 1998-99 campaign.

Three starters, led by senior post Jen Burns, from Plain City, Ohio, return from last season's team, which finished 10-15, overall, and 7-11 in the OAC.

Burns, a two-time honorable mention All-OAC selection and two-year starter, averaged 12 points and 7.4 rebounds a game last season. She ranked fifth in the conference for shooting (52.5 percent), sixth for rebounding and eleventh for scoring.

Sophomores Kara Grishkat, a point guard from Pickerington, Ohio, and Mandy Simmerman, a forward from Westerville, Ohio, round out the list of returning starters.

Grishkat, who made 23 starts as a freshman, tallied 96 assists and 60 steals. She ranked third in the OAC for assists (4.2 a game) and second for steals (2.5 an outing). Simmerman cracked the starting lineup late in the season and averaged 5.1 points and 2.4 rebounds a game. In her six starts, however, Simmerman averaged 8.3 points and 5.7 rebounds.

Junior forward Sarah Kuhner, a transfer from Allegheny (PA) College from Pickerington, Ohio, brings experience and could crack the Otterbein starting lineup. She started all 25 games last season at Allegheny, averaging 7.2 points and 4.4 rebounds.

Other letterwinners back include senior forward Angie Wilson from Caldwell, Ohio (2.2 ppg., 1.7 rpg.); junior guard Melissa McAlister from Columbus, Ohio, who lettered as a freshman but sat out last season; and sophomores Gretchen Linscott from Amesville, Ohio (5.8 ppg., 3.3 rpg.), a center, and Lisa Patton from Waynesfield, Ohio (4.5 ppg., 2.9 rpg.), a guard.

The Last (for Now) in the Cawley Line Graduates

As I sat and watched my younger brother receive his diploma from Otterbein this past June 14, it suddenly dawned on me that it was, in a way, the end of a legacy. The fall of 1998 will be the first time in 14 years that a Cawley will not be walking the brick streets of the Otterbein College campus. My oldest brother, David, entered Otterbein as a freshman in 1984. I soon followed in '85; my sister, Peggy, in '89, and then Steven in '94.

I am sure my father, (Larry Cawley '62), never intended for all four of his children to attend his alma mater, but it is pretty neat that it turned out that way. He never pushed Otterbein on us. He would mention it every now and then, but it was always a choice for each of us. A few of us looked at other institutions, but when it came down to the final decision, we all fell in love with Otterbein. It is possible that our trust in our father influenced our choices. He had paved the way for our education, so we knew that following in his footsteps could not put us down the wrong path. In addition, we each loved the size and the beauty of the college, but mostly the people.

Over the years and among the four of us, we truly made a mark at Otterbein as a summer head resident, a featured twirler, a resident assistant, a varsity volleyball player, an Otterbein Christian Fellowship leader, and a student sports information coordinator. But more importantly was the impression Otterbein made on each one of us by providing us with all of those wonderful opportunities, caring staff and faculty members, and fine educational backgrounds. Otterbein and its people laid the groundwork for making the Cawleys what we are today: a principal with his Masters entering his 37th year in education; a head of a division at a petroleum distribution company; an assistant director for a student union at a public university with her Masters; a volleyball coach and elementary teacher working on her Masters and entering her 6th year of teaching; and a recent graduate with a solid college education behind him and a world of opportunity before him.

The theme of Steven's baccalaureate was "May your hopes be realized and your memories cherished." The Cawleys continue to have their hopes realized on a daily basis, and we will never forget the memories we made on the streets, in the residence halls, at the campus center, in the Rike Center, and on Ballenger Field of the Otterbein campus, or how Dr. John Coulter, Dr. Robert Price, Mr. Ken Zarbaugh, Ms. Denise Shively, Ms. Patti Wilson, Mrs. Becky Smith, Mr. Bob Gatti, Dr. Marilyn Day, Dr. Mary Cay Wells, Mr. John Buckles, Mr. Ed Syguda, and Dr. Beth Daugherty touched our lives. We truly cherish those times and those people.

The Cawleys at Steve's graduation: David '88, Vicki Kay Pitsick '89, Steven '98, Larry '62, and Peggy Sue '93.

My father had tears in his eyes as he sang the familiar words of the Otterbein Love Song on Commencement Sunday, 1998. Who could blame him? He was on a campus he loved surrounded by his loving wife and four children, now all graduates of Otterbein College. I have to admit, there were tears in my eyes, too.

Who knows, maybe the legacy will continue as each of us plan and dream for our own children. But right now we must say, "Thank You, Otterbein." From Larry,

David, Vicki, Peggy, and Steven Cawley. "We pledge anew, We will be true, Dear Otterbein."
Vicki Kay Cawley Pitstick '89

To the Editor,

I was pleased to read that Sylvia Phillips Vance and Becky Fickel Smith received the Bread and Roses Award. I have always thought that Sylvia was a national treasure, and we were very lucky to have her considerable talents and marvelous personality at Otterbein for more than 30 years, during a time when the accomplishments of women were not always accepted or recognized.

Robert B. Bradfield '50

Dear Otterbein friends,

Greetings from McCurdy School in northern New Mexico.

It is always good to read Towers and catch up on what is happening in the not-so-quiet, peaceful village these days. We especially enjoyed the sesquicentennial coverage. My mother, Carol Krumm, served on the planning committee, but passed away on September 27, 1996, before she could participate in the events. You may know that she was, until her death, the curator of Hanby House. She was also on staff at Otterbein as a librarian from 1946-51. We appreciated her inclusion in the "Deaths" section as a friend of the college.

Dennis '69 is in his 22nd year as pastor of the Valley View United Methodist Church and executive director of Group Ministries of Northern New Mexico. We have served as commissioned United Methodist missionaries since 1975. After teaching English, speech, and drama at McCurdy High School for twenty years, in the fall of 1994 I became the director of Church Relations. In addition, for the past three and a half years, I have been supervising wonderful Otterbein College student teachers here at McCurdy.

An interesting side note is that Marlene Lansman Deringer '69 and I spent the summer of 1967 working here in northern New Mexico through McCurdy. Currently, she is the Otterbein faculty member responsible for sending those student teachers to us.

Our son, Todd '95, is now a business analyst for the Huntington Bank operations center on Morse Road. All of us appreciate the terrific education we received at Otterbein.

Sincerely,
Caryolyn "Dee Dee" Krumm Heffner '69

Nita Shannon Leland announces the publication of her new book, Exploring Color Revised Edition, by North Light Books. Her three previous books have been translated into German, French or Chinese. The second video of Nita's Exploring Color Workshop Series "All About Paint," is also being released. Nita continues to teach workshops throughout the United States and Canada and is scheduled well into the year 2000.

Patricia Axline de Sanchez received the Institute Mexicano Americano de Relaciones Culturales award of merit in Saltillo, Mexico. Basis for this award was her work as one of the founding teachers of the Mexican American Institute of Cultural Relations and for fostering cultural interchange between the U.S. and Mexico. Now retired, she taught English and literature in Saltillo for 34 years.

Jim Seckel has retired from Bank One's Mt. Gilead branch after 37 years. Jim and his wife Sherry have four children and live in Washington Township (Morrow County).

1960

John Lloyd's A Hectic Overture was played by the Chautauqua Symphony Orchestra last August in the Symphony's amphitheater near Bemus Point, NY. John has retired from teaching and is organist at the First Presbyterian Church of London, OH.

1961

Chuck Croy retired from Detroit Country Day School after 24 years. He and his wife Mary are moving from Troy, MI to Bainbridge Island, WA where they intend to enjoy the beauty of the Great Northwest.

David Frees has been serving Oak Hill Presbyterian Church (Akron) as senior pastor since 1987. He will be moderator of The Synod of the Covenant (Ohio and Michigan) in 1999.

Jean V. Poulard is president of the Michiana Shores Town Council, a position he has held since 1995. He is also the editor of the Journal of the Indiana Academy of the Social Sciences. Jean and wife Regina Fehrens '64 have a son, Roger, who is a junior at Otterbein.

1965

Tom Heisey Antiques, located in Newark, Ohio, has completed its 13th year of business. The store specializes in 16th, 17th, 18th, and 19th century furniture, accessories, art and folk art.

1966

Nels Gustafson retired from GTE after 25 years in Human Resources. He is now a consultant with school systems introducing team teaching methods.

After 30 years, Warren R.H. (Hill) Knapp retired as a Colonel from the US Air Force in June 1994. Warren and his wife Penny are living in Fairfax, VA with an eye toward Florida in a few years. Warren works part-time and still aggressively plays racquetball and golf. And, of course, they find time for trips to Texas to see their 3-year old grandson.

MacCanon Brown, formerly Marilyn MacCanon, has received the following awards: Public Citizen of the Year from the Wisconsin Chapter of National Association of Social Workers; the 1998 Race Unity Award from the Milwaukee Baha'I Spiritual Assembly; and the Peace Achiever Award from Milwaukee V100 Radio. Brown directs a grass-roots homeless organization.

Alice Kay Jenkins Hilderbrand received the Outstanding Performance Award at Ohio Northern University where she is assistant dean of students and director of career services. This award is for staff members who are not teaching faculty who have achieved competency and effectiveness in their position, responded to the needs of students, staff and colleagues, and taken efforts to maintain and improve professional skills and performance. She lives in Ada, OH, with her husband Thomas.

Elma Lee Schmidt Moore has been appointed program administrator of Central Michigan University's College of Extended Learning Program located at Wright Patterson Air Force Base. She will also teach course work in Managerial Accounting, Financial Aspects of Health Services Organizations, and Financial Management.

Esther Burgess Palmer was awarded her Master of Education degree from Ohio University in August of 1998. She teaches fourth grade for the Logan-Hocking school district. Esther's husband, Dr. Roy E. Palmer '66, is vice president of Hocking College in Nelsonville, OH. They have four children: Marc, 26; Seth, 25; Whitney, 21; and Zach, 17.

1968

Patricia Emrick Kennedy received a DMA in choral conducting from Michigan State University in May 1998. In June she completed her sixth season with the Robert Shaw Festival Singers and will make a return performance at Carnegie Hall with the Singers in January. Pat is director of choral activities at R. Nelson Snider HS in Fort Wayne, IN.

1969

Cecil and Carol Mathias '70 Elliott are proud of their son Scott who was named most outstanding freshman on the men's basketball team at Otterbein.

1970

Lynn Scarlett Atkinson and her husband own a bed and breakfast in Steamboat Springs, Colorado. Their three children are all avid summer and winter sports enthusiasts. And they are, too. "Come visit sometime."

Brian Hartzell, APR, director of development for the Ronald McDonald House of Cleveland, has been elected 1998-99 President of the National Association of Hospital Hospitality Houses, Inc. (NAHHH). He has also been named by the Cleveland Plain Dealer as a "Shining Star," one of Greater Cleveland's unsung heroes. He and his wife, Terry, live in Macedonia, Ohio.

Sharon Ellenberger Wilson owns the S & J Travel in Clyde, OH. She has been the chairwoman of the Sandusky County Park District Board for the past year and will continue for another three-year term. She and her husband, Joe, have three children and live in Clyde. The family also owns and shows horses.

Mary Marsh is the program director of the Village of Westerville Nursing Center's InterMed subacute unit. She will be responsible for product development, marketing, census and customer service.

George Miller received his MBA from OSU in 1976 and is a client manager for Northern Telecom Inc.

Kathleen Hoshor Dickerson received a Master's of Education degree from Azusa Pacific University in May, 1996. She is a middle school home economics teacher in Colton, CA.

J. Douglas Yeakel, M.D., was named president at the annual meeting of the Aultman Hospital Medical Staff. He is in practice with Canton Aultman Emergency Physicians and Canton Orthopaedics in the Akron-Canton area.

SFC Vicki Ettenhofer retired from the US Army on Oct. 31, 1998 after 22 years active service. She was honored in a retirement ceremony at Fort Myer, VA, sponsored by the Commanding General of the Military District of Washington. Following her prior assignment in Japan, SFC Ettenhofer served the last 10 months as NCOIC of the Garrison Chaplain's Office at Fort Meade, MD.

Alumna-to-be Has Reins on Her Own Business

Many people end up in careers far from their major. But Equine Science major Brittany Buckholtz '99 is immersed in her career with horses even before the degree is complete.

At the age of 23, Brittany is the owner of All Seasons Carriage Service which operates in downtown Columbus.

She joined the company through an internship for Otterbein and drove carriages for about a year. She worked with the owner and learned all the ins and outs of the business. When the owner mentioned that she was ready to sell the business, Brittany decided she was ready to buy.

"I knew what I was getting into," she said. Her carriages run seven days a week except for major holidays and depending on the weather. "Last year we got lucky," Brittany says of the mild winter Columbus enjoyed. "But I hear this year we're going to get hit hard."

Weather is an important factor. "December is by far our busiest month. It works out real well for me because classes end right before Thanksgiving and that's when we get busy. And it calms down when I go back to classes," Brittany says.

Prom season and Valentine's Day are also busy. It is a romantic business and Brittany says she has overheard more than her share of wedding proposals. "At first I thought it was so sweet but now it's really routine. You can get three or four guys proposing a night, especially on Valentines Day."

The business includes seven carriages, eight horses and she employs 10 drivers. Brittany recently bought a farm in Galena. She keeps four or five horses downtown and the others at the farm. "A horse will work four days. They may stay downtown for a month and then go out to the farm for a 'vacation,'" she says.

Brittany's is almost the only company in town. One other carriage company operates but only on the weekends. City law doesn't allow the carriages to start running until after 6:30 p.m. during the week but they can also run during the day on weekends. This schedule allows Brittany to attend class during the day.

Well, most of the time.

"This morning I was getting up to get ready for class and the farrier called to say he was already at the barn," she says. "So I had to call my professor to explain but my equine science teachers completely understand."

She has found that other professors also are willing to work with her. "I look like I'm 15 and they assume I'm a traditional student and don't work 120 hours a week. But I tell them the situation up front and most of my professors have been very understanding. And I usually carry at least a 3.0 and keep up with my classes.

"It's a lot of work but my classes at Otterbein have really helped. I just took equine nutrition which was great because I have one horse with food allergies. I call him my 'walking vet bill' but I love him and he's a good carriage horse."

Add to the mix of business and school Brittany's four-year-old daughter, Sam. Brittany says her daughter is already a horse lover. "She wants a pony," she laughs. "She's been asking Santa every night for a pony."

Before she bought the farm, Brittany lived with her parents. Her mother watched Sam for her and she readily admits her parents, Larry and Leslie Buckholtz, were a great help in making it possible for her to attend school and operate the carriage business.

"I love my parents," she says. Her father, who owns Soccer Plus and is well known to Otterbein's soccer players and coaches, helps Brittany with accounting and business advice. "He is sort of my silent partner," she says.

Hers is a business with unique challenges, however. Recently the downtown building where she stables her horses was sold and Brittany had to find new accommodations. "It was hard. There are lots of buildings but I have very special needs," she says. "I need big bay doors to get the carriages in and out and I had to find someone who was willing to have a tenant with horses."

While graduation means the beginning of the job search for most seniors, Brittany, who will never question if she majored in the right subject, knows right where she will be.

"I love everything about this business," she says. "I have my horses, I can make money, live the way I want and meet lots of people. I enjoy being downtown in the big city during the day and I can go out to the farm at night. I have the best of both worlds." ■

The Incomparable DEAN VAN

Remembers How It Was...

Editor's Note: This article is a compilation of excerpts from Joanne Van Sant's talk at this year's Faculty Staff Welcome Back Dinner.

I said it wasn't necessary to honor me—I've been honored in so many ways and I can assure you I didn't come to Otterbein to set any record. In fact, I applied for one job teaching health and physical education, and over the years was asked to move into other positions. I really had no goals as such, but once told Dr. Turner, "I just want to be where I can do the most good." I hope it's worked out that way.

When I arrived in the quiet peaceful village of Westerville in the fall of '48, the population was less than 3,000. There were two traffic lights uptown and one policeman. I taught 21 contact hours, officiated all the intramurals, coached all the teams (who played a limited schedule) and served on eight committees.

My salary the first two years was $2400. When I was asked to be Dean of Women in 1952, it was $3100. I had a room with a bath in the house next to Cellar House for $5 a week.

Fifty years is a long time—18,250 days to be exact. Most of you were years from being born or else very young. That fall I was the youngest member of the faculty — an outstanding group of men and women, names which have gone down in the history of Otterbein College—the

My arrival coincided with the return of veterans and an increased student body to 990 (about two+ men for every woman). There were 7:30 a.m. and Saturday morning classes. Chapel was held four days a week, women had hours, and signed out and in. There were very few automobiles on campus. There was no campus security (you only locked your dorm room when you went home during Christmas vacation). No dancing was allowed on campus. And "no drinking" of alcoholic beverages, period. Until 1965, the policy read, "the use of alcoholic beverages is strictly forbidden."

Activities included homecoming, May days, jump week, scrap day, bonfire, religious emphasis week, coeds, formals. The all-campus Christmas party came a few years later.

Ninety-eight percent of the women belonged to sororities, and 83% of the men belonged to fraternities. All students ate in the Cochran dining hall (in shifts) or in fraternity houses. For years there was no selection—you had a plate of food, a salad, and dessert—you either ate it or you didn't eat.

Towers Hall was called the Administration Building (Ad Building). When the new library was built behind the Ad Building in the mid 50's, Carnegie Library (now Clipping) became the Administration Building and we had to rename the original—thus "Towers Hall." These two buildings—Towers and Clipping—plus three others—the part of the science building known as McFadden, Battelle Fine Arts Center (was then the alumni gym) and Dunlap-King (formerly King Hall) are the only ones still standing. Fifteen new buildings have been added.

Faculty meetings were held in the Philamathean Room, then later on the second floor of Towers to accommodate older members of the faculty. I can vividly recall how formal these meetings were, and how members of the faculty would engage in a very heated debate over some issue and then walk out together laughing and talking.

I remember when Dr. Howard was president and he and his family lived in what was later named "Howard House." (It had a sunken front yard, about three feet deep, and people who were not aware it was there would occasionally drive down into it and get stuck. A group of Capital students running across our campus to get away from security—not knowing it was there—all fell into it one evening.) All entertaining was done at Howard House and overnight visitors, including speakers and artists, stayed there. Mrs. Howard did all the cooking. Some of the early visitors included Carl Sandburg, Robert Frost (who insisted on poaching his own egg), Ogden Nash (whose wife combed his hair before he went to Cowan to speak), and a little later there was Marian Anderson, Ralph Nader, Lynn Redgrave, Tony Randle, Julian Bond, Dick Gregory, Jane Fonda, Bill Russell and Maria Von Trapp. Our earliest theatre guest artist was Hans Conreid followed by Ed Begley.

For years commencements were held on Monday morning following Baccalaureate on Sunday. For over 100 years it never rained out a procession — a very formal procession thanks to Dr. Gilbert Mills. The alumni gymnasium, Cowan Hall, the stadium and the Rike Center have been sites for the commencements I've attended. Over the years there have been some outstanding speakers; the ones I best remember were Jesse Owens, Margaret Chase Smith, Pat Hingle, and Brock Peters.

One of the funniest stories that centered around a commencement was when Dr. Arthur Fleming, past president of Ohio Wesleyan and then Secretary of Health Education and Welfare was the speaker. He was staying with the Howards. As Mrs. Howard described it, commencement mornings can be very hectic and in the middle of it all, the phone rang and she answered it to hear a voice say, "The White House is calling." Suspecting a college prank, she quickly responded, "Sure, and I'm Martha Washington!" and hung up. Sure enough, in a few minutes the White House called back, much to Mrs. Howard's embarrassment.

There was only one policeman in Westerville for years and a volunteer fire department. Several students were volunteers and they lived above the fire station uptown. When an alarm sounded, those in class often jumped out of a classroom window to run to the fire department. If the alarm sounded during chapel, they ran out, often with a few others following who were not volunteers.

Before Cowan was built in 1952, chapel was held in the college church. Attendance was mandatory with five absences allowed per semester. To miss more than five meant adding hours to your graduation requirement. There were lots of different kinds of programs — but it was strange to see a pep rally take place with the band and cheerleaders parading up and down the aisles.

The old student union (a World War II army surplus building) stood where the tennis courts are now located, northeast of the campus center. This building was considered “off campus” so some dancing was permitted there. According to Hancock, the trustees authorized dancing on campus in 1947 — the first time in its history — and the news made Walter Winchell’s radio news that evening (which would be like all three TV networks today). I recall when Barlow opened in 1952, (where the chapel and business office are presently located), dances were permitted but even then limited to two or three a year until the late 50’s.

During the 50’s I worked with a liturgical dance group that occasionally performed in Cowan for a chapel service. For that I was chastised in the Clean Life Educator for promoting that sinful activity.

I’ve had lots of creative opportunities. The second largest musical I choreographed was Oklahoma in 1958. Chuck Dodrill had arrived on the scene that year and he did the set....I’m here to say that neither of us was very good. As it turned out, Chuck was a marvelous director and I learned a lot from him during my 35-year, 40- show stint as a choreographer. The Philthy Phaculty Pfour—plus two or minus one—was organized in the mid 50’s with Jim Grissinger as our leader. He played the piano or the accordion, Lee Shackson (Music dept. chair) was on bass, Red Moreland, who ran the print shop, was on sax, and I played the drums. When Shackson left, Gary Tirey joined us on bass. Over the years we periodically performed at campus events or special occasions when they wanted to shock students by showing them what faculty could do. It was lots of fun.

Around 1969 the academic calendar went from semesters to the 3/3 program, later to a quarter system. About this same time, the college senate was formed combining the faculty, student council, and some administrators, trustees, and alumni.

One day in April of 1976, I made the most decisions I ever made in one day: It was the day of the Cochran Hall fire. There are many details still fresh in my mind but what stands out the most is the way the college community and the Westerville/Columbus communities joined in to help. One family took all the Cochran Hall girls’ clothes to their dry-cleaning establishment and for three days the people from their church cleaned them over and over and over to get the smell of smoke out. Students helped move articles of those living in Cochran (things that survived) to the pit in the Campus Center. Other students volunteered to share rooms in residence halls or rooms in their home. One male hall director approached me slightly embarrassed but said he was sure these young women would need some “personal essentials” so off he went to the local pharmacies and grocery stores to ask for contributions. I remember Schottensteins gave every woman a shirt and pair of blue jeans. I also remember the college chaplain at the senate meeting the following day, offering thanks for the students’ safety and he read the names of all the residents of Cochran Hall. One was his daughter.

Otterbein, for me, is and always has been a very unique place — an atmosphere one cannot describe. I remember a man walking into my office in the late 60’s. He held out his hand and said, “Lady, I want to congratulate you. I’ve been on more than 300 campuses around the country this year and I’ve not found a place like this. (He was surveying for a magazine). You have something here that’s indescribable — it’s so great. I’ve wandered around here all day just soaking it in.” I hastened to tell him it was the students who deserved the praise, not me.

I take great pride in hiring some good people — Marilyn Day, Becky Smith, Susie Long and Bob Gatti — to name just a few. Bob was about to leave in the mid 80’s and I asked what it would take to keep him here. He told me there was an old comfortable rocking chair in Davis—as far as I know, he still has it.

I sensed shortly after my arrival that you couldn’t tell the difference between a student who had a million dollars and one who didn’t have a dime. Otterbein has never been pretentious—people care and people share. And that caring has carried us through both happy and difficult times. An alumnus attending an alumni event a few years ago commented on what a great evening it had been for someone who didn’t usually go to alumni events. “I had forgotten how nice Otterbein people really are,” she said.

Change is constant and the changes that have occurred at Otterbein College have been made thoughtfully and carefully. The cast of characters will change as will facilities and programs but the heart, soul and spirit will stay strong...and live on as evidenced by those here now in the campus community.

I’m grateful to so many for so much...past generations of students, faculty, administrators, a wonderful group in Student Affairs, and the Office of Advancement.

Thanks to Brent DeVore, David Joyce, and Rick Dorman, I continue to have fun even after 50 years. ■

PLAYING & PRAYING

by Patti Kennedy

A '75 Alumnus and high school football coach is in hot water with the ACLU and school officials for advocating his Christianity and maintaining the tradition of a team prayer.

Dave Daubenmire '75 always knew he wanted to coach and has followed that dream until it landed him smack dab in the middle of controversy this fall.

Daubenmire, who wants to continue the tradition of a team prayer, finds himself pitted against those calling for the separation of church and state.

After graduating from Otterbein, he taught health and physical education at Mt. Vernon High School for six years before becoming the head football coach at Heath High School in 1981. There his record was 34-45-1. In addition, he coached the Heath girl's basketball team to the final four.

At Heath he also began to teach special education. Daubenmire has now been a special education teacher for 18 years as well as a football coach.

In 1989, he took the head football coach position in London, Ohio, where his record is 63-34. In the 1990s the London Red Raiders won five Buckeye Athletic Conference championships. They went to the state playoffs four years with a final four appearance in 1994. The following year the team was 10-0.

The Red Raiders were off to 0-3 start this year but Daubenmire promises, "We're getting ready to turn that around." At London, Daubenmire is assisted by another Otterbein grad, Mark Collier '88. Collier played quarterback for Daubenmire at Heath, played football at Otterbein and is now an assistant coach at London.

Daubenmire is a man who is enthusiastic about his teaching, his coaching and his Christianity. The last item is what has landed him in the sights of the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) and a group of parents calling themselves Citizens Advocating Responsible Education. The group

by Patti Kennedy

Chris Kapostasy Jansing '78 this spring faced a tough choice. For 17 years she had worked at WNYT-Channel 13 in Albany, New York. Eleven of those years had been as co-anchor of the evening news team. She was successful at her job and admired in the community. Her husband, Robert, is supervisor of a chemical lab for the state Department of Health and they have a comfortable home in Wynantskill. You might think she had found her niche and was settled.

Then came the offer from NBC.

NBC News President Andrew Lack saw her on the air while visiting The Sagamore Resort on Lake

George. It wasn't long before Chris found a message from NBC on her voice mail at work from the network, expressing its interest.

Chris says, "The most amazing thing to me was that Andy Lack, the president of NBC, saw me and offered me the position. He is a brilliant news manager and he saw me when he was on vacation and made the call. There was no job opening but he saw something that he liked. He told me that if I was willing to come and do a lot of different things, they would make a job for me.

"At first I thought it was a hoax. I didn't believe there was something called the talent coordinator office at NBC that would be calling me. My first reaction was that someday when I was old and gray that I would be able to say the president of NBC thought I was worthy of his attention; that after all this work and all these years that someone that high up in the business was interested in me. It was almost not necessary that I get the job."

However, she was indeed offered a four-year contract with NBC. Chris admits some people in her life thought she was crazy to leave a station where she had been so successful and a community where she was so well liked. "They asked why I would make such a move at this stage of my career and I thought, why wouldn't I? When you consider the whole caliber of the NBC news organization, it was too enticing. After 17 years at one station it was hard to leave, but the opportunity was too terrific," she explains.

In mid-June, Jansing began her new job at NBC News that includes reporting for Dateline-NBC news magazine, backup anchoring for the NBC Nightly News weekend editions and filling in as co-anchor on the Today show weekend editions. She is also a co-anchor for Morning Line, the morning news program on MSNBC, the 24-hour news and information cable network operated by NBC and Microsoft.

"The great attraction of the job is that I get to do so many different things," she says. "I always dreamed of doing great stories even when I was doing the news at WOBN. There was no doubt in my mind that if I worked hard, I would have opportunities."

At Albany, Chris had her share of great assignments including two inaugurations and two Olympic Games. Her coverage of the Olympic Park bombing in Atlanta earned her an Emmy. Other awards include "Best Documentary" from the NYS Broadcasters Association and a finalist honor at the International Television and Film Festival.

Chris looks forward to many more great stories and says, "The difference now is that I'm before a national audience on the fastest growing network in the nation and with the top news organization in the world."

Chris describes a week in her life at the network. On Saturday she co-hosted the Today show and conducted interviews on recent events in Northern Ireland. She also debriefed the cast members of The Scarlet Pimpernel. Sunday she was the news reader for the Today show.

Monday she appeared on Dateline interviewing the author of The Day Diana Died for the anniversary of Princess Diana's death. Tuesday and Wednesday she did special reports on MSNBC on the Clinton/Yeltsin summit. On Wednesday she got a call at midnight saying she had 15 minutes to pack and get on a plane to Nova Scotia where Flight 111 had crashed into the ocean. She then spent two days in Nova Scotia reporting on the aftermath of that tragedy.

"As with any network reporting position, I can go from doing a story on the president to an airline disaster to interviewing a celebrity," she says.

It's a fast-paced, tough job and it is all that Chris hoped it would be.

She admits, "I am having the time of my life and yes, I am tired all the time. It is a complete intellectual challenge because the news can turn on a dime. I can do a report on the Russian economy and turn around and interview the author of a book on women and home repairs."

Her new job also provides the opportunity to work with people she has watched and admired in the news; people such as Bob Hager, who she reported with in Nova Scotia, and Stone Phillips and Jane Pauley at Dateline.

"I'm working with the top people in the field. It's a thrilling ride to be on," she says. During the phone interview with Jansing, a rousing chorus of Happy Birthday could be heard in the background. "And it's a friendly place," she laughs. "It's like a family; a big family but a family."

Her hectic schedule hasn't allowed her to see much of New York beyond Rockefeller Center where

"Broadway Today" of the Today Show previews Cats, while one of Jansing's fans holds a sign above the crowd.

NBC News is headquartered. However, while living in Albany, Chris had many opportunities to visit New York City in the past so that the move to Manhattan "wasn't too terribly scary. It wasn't as much of a transition as it might have been." Her husband is looking for a job in New York City and hopes to join her there by the beginning of the year.

Chris has been able to see some of the great theatre New York has to offer. As part of an ongoing series, the Today show sometimes includes performances by, and interviews with, stars from Broadway's most successful shows. To prepare for those segments, Chris attends the Broadway shows that will be featured. And to prepare for an interview with actor Gary Sinise, she went to a screening of his new film Snake Eyes. "Those things are related to work but they are great fun too," she says.

Something that is not related to work but that is very important to Chris is her work with Big Brothers/Big Sisters, which began during her time in Albany. An organization near and dear to her heart, she was a very public supporter for 11 years as well as becoming personally involved with several children in the program. Her "Monday's Child" segment at WNYT resulted in hundreds of area children being matched through the Big Brothers/Big Sisters program. Her work with this program has earned her numerous awards, including "Honorary Big Sister of the Year." from both Albany and Schenectady counties, a National Award of Recognition from Big Brothers/Big Sisters of America, the New York State Assembly Outstanding Citizen award, and the NBC Community Service award.

"Now I'll continue to do fundraisers for them and be involved in those issues. That's something that won't change," she vows. "I'm still in touch with some of the people I met through Big Brothers/Big Sisters and they are my biggest fans. They really keep track of what I'm doing." ■

Movin' In...

Coming to the 'Bein for the first time....

How has that experience changed through the years?

by Patti Kennedy

The fall leaves crackle

beneath your feet as you walk across campus. There is a brisk edge to the air, it's autumn, and it smells like excitement as high school graduates across the country make that first trek to college.

Do you remember that first day at Otterbein? Your first impressions of the College? Were you excited and anxious for your parents to leave or scared and wanting them to stay just a little longer? Did you arrive with one suitcase or boxes of computer equipment? Was one roommate a relief after sharing a room with four siblings or was sharing living space a rude awakening after always having your own room?

The experience of arriving and living on campus has changed over the years. Students used to arrive with one suitcase by train. Now parents bring U-Hauls as students do their best to turn residence halls into a home away from home. Assistant Dean for Student Affairs/Director of Residence Life Joyce Jadwin '89 says she saw no less than four U-Hauls this fall.

And some things have not changed.

Small Town Friendly

"When you walked near campus, everyone spoke to you," remembers Jane Morrison Horn '50. "You felt welcomed." Jane did not live on campus and remembers the dorms hosting events for the "town" girls to help them feel more a part of the campus.

Mike Christian '61 concurs. "As I looked at the school and when I moved in (at Otterbein) I remember everyone saying "hi." In my hometown, people did not do that."

Christian says he thinks that tradition has faded away however.

"When I was here you didn't have to initiate that contact but now it only happens if I initiate it."

Jane agrees, "You have to be the one to make eye contact. I'm sorry it's not more contagious today."

"You were considered snobby in our era if you didn't speak. You just did that," Martha Troop Miles '49 adds.

Freshman Jason Kruger, from Londonderry, Ohio, maintains that Otterbein's tradition of friendliness is alive and well. "It was hard for me moving away from home but everyone up here is really friendly," he says. "The hard part for me is getting past the homesickness."

He says that friendliness extends into the classroom where he has enjoyed a lot of one-on-one time with professors. "They know our names and are willing to sit down and work with us," he says.

Bob Gatti, vice president for Student Affairs, also thinks the Otterbein culture still has that small town friendliness at its core. "When we ask students why they chose Otterbein, they always say it was the friendliness, that it felt right. I can give you an example. Students at Otterbein who are physically challenged don't have to go through a lot of procedures to get someone to help. Someone will always get the door or hold their tray in line at the cafeteria...whatever they need. Other schools have had to hire people to do things like that but here at Otterbein the students just pick up and help out."

Jack Pietila '62 remembers the story of his friend Gary Fields '62 arriving on campus. His father brought him with one suitcase. His dad dropped him off to talk to Coach Robert Agler '48 and when he came out of the coach's office, his father was gone. The suitcase was sitting on the sidewalk with some money tucked in the handle. His father later told Gary that he had wanted to avoid a long good-bye and knew he could depend on the friendliness and kindness of the people at Otterbein to take care of him.

The 'Bein Reaches Out

Bert Horn '49 also has an interesting story of arriving on campus. He was working in a factory reconditioning ammunition boxes because his family had no money to send him to college. Two weeks into the fall term he decided he couldn't stand the job any longer. "I said to myself, 'What am I doing here?' and called Otterbein Admission Director Morris Allton '36. He said, 'I'll help you all I can.' He met me at the train station, found me a place to live and jobs. He really made it possible for me to come to Otterbein."

Gatti says that sort of attitude is still true today although there is now an entire staff of people doing what Allton used to do single-handedly. He says, "I've always been impressed by the fact that at this school faculty and administrators work hard to get students enrolled and see that they stay enrolled. They work hard to hurdle the obstacles. People at this school do intervene to help. That may be why our retention rate is so high. And it's something that we sometimes take for granted but I think it is central to the fabric of this institution that we give students opportunities to succeed."

While many mention being impressed by the friendliness of Otterbein, others liken it to high school. Aimée Zerla '93 explains, "While Otterbein was three times the size of my high school, it still had a high school feel. Something would happen before lunch and most often by dinner, a distorted version of the story had been spread across school. Things like visitation and activities scheduling difficulties also lent themselves to a high school-like atmosphere."

However, she adds "The best surprise about Otterbein is the support network that I formed. Not only from a professional standpoint, but socially also. I treasure the friendships made at Otterbein which have withstood the test of time. A large percentage of my current friendships were started at Otterbein."

Most importantly, the people of Otterbein College are what makes the institution such a welcoming place. Associate Dean of Students Becky Fickel Smith '81, remembers being welcomed by Joanne Van Sant H'70, vice president for Student Affairs emeritus; Marilyn Day '53, HPEW chair emeritus; and Jo Ann Tyler H'95, Health and Physical Education professor emeritus. "They really took care of me," she says. "Now I'm able to do that for students. I can reciprocate by giving that to new students. I think that nurturing today is still maintained and is part of the culture of Otterbein."

Bonding Experiences

Many alumni remember wearing the Beanie when they came to campus. Christian says, "It was supposed to be a symbol of degradation that we had to wear those Beanies until Thanksgiving. But to us they were like a red badge of courage and I think helped build that bond among the freshmen. It helped us to find our peers."

Why did the magic spell sung by the fairy godmother in Cinderella end with the sequence “bibbidi, bobbodi, boo” (rather than “boobidi, bobbodi, bee,” for example)? Why do we say knick-knack, sing-song, flip-flop, ping-pong, dribs and drabs, and eeny-meeny-miney-moe?

Why do the Japanese adapt our “baseball” into the word “beesubooru,” or our “strike” into “suturainko”?

What leads a child to say, “You’re such a thinslo!” What is a student doing when he gives the meaning of indefatigable as “not able to take the fat off”?

In my more than ten years of teaching linguistics at Otterbein, I have taken great pleasure in our human use of language, and that joy has carried me well beyond the dictionary and the grammar book with which an English professor begins. Linguistics studies language but it draws our attention first to the spoken language, and then to the extraordinary, hardly-conscious language learning which humans are capable of long before they learn to read. The creative linguistic abilities we have as children are largely innate, and explain the lifelong pleasure we feel in language, as long as English teachers don’t drive that joy away!

The question about bibbidi, bobbodi, boo, for example, is not a question about spelling, meaning, or instructions in a grammar book. It’s a question about patterning sounds. In English, for phrases like hee-haw, spic and span, and tic, tac, toe, we put the vowels in a sequence. Meaning doesn’t control the sequence. The vowel sound spoken toward the front of the mouth comes first, then the vowel in the middle, then the back vowel. Say “tic-tac-toe”; feel your tongue moving backward and down as you speak the phrase? Did anyone drill you on this? Unlikely. This is one example of how our minds listen to and find the pattern in our language, projecting a “rule” that we continue to use when we invent a new magical spell.

The question about Japanese baseball, of course, is answered by saying that the Japanese are adapting our word into their language. But what’s the unconsciously held “rule” they use? Unlike English, Japanese must have a vowel alternating with a consonant to create syllables. So, to naturalize baseball, they insert two vowels; to naturalize strike, three. The word baseball is also affected by the absence of the l/r sounds and distinction in Japanese; many Asian languages don’t “hear” l and r clearly because they don’t use those consonants.

These first examples live in the territory linguists call phonology, or the study of sounds. The final examples illustrate how we combine elements to make words. Prefixes and suffixes are part of this side of language, which linguists call morphology. The child who said thinso, the son of a student in my class several years ago, used fatso as his model, unaware that this suffix hasn't (yet) been extended to other adjectives besides fat. The key unit of meaning for linguists is not words but morphemes: the smallest meaning-bearing units of a language. Indefatigable, with four morphemes, was analyzed by the student through the meaning of each morpheme he could identify—in, de, fat, and able; the third morpheme is fatigue, but pronunciation makes it hard for us to hear this clearly because of our stress pattern, indefatigable. So the student was using the right process to decode this unfamiliar word that really means incapable of becoming fatigued, or more succinctly, tireless.

Linguistics is also interested in syntax. This sounds a lot like the grammar classroom, but the focus is more often on the child's acquisition of syntax long before entering the schoolroom. As children, we hear, sort out, and analyze the patterns of our languages, from sounds to morphemes to syntax. We acquire the most regular patterns first, shrewdly going for the choices that let us generalize, before we learn the exceptions. The impulse to generalize is strong and usually productive, so sometimes children overgeneralize. Remember when your children said sentences like "I finded it," or "he hitted me," or "my feets hurt?"

In pursuing the linguist's interest in the spoken language and in language outside of school, I've lost none of my respect for historical study of language. Without the painstaking historical research into language, how could we describe the Indo-European language family, or know that Sanscrit, the ancient language of India, was a cousin of our own ancient languages, Latin and Greek. For those of you who've never looked at the multi-volume Oxford English Dictionary, you have a treasure waiting for you. Begun in the late 19th century, this dictionary records the earliest uses and meanings of English words, and then follows them forward in time, always giving quotations (and their dates) to show the changes in meanings.

"Nice," for example, seems to have begun in the 14th century as a word for foolish, stupid, and senseless, moved on to wanton or lascivious; slothful, lazy, or overrefined; then shy and unwilling! Only after four hundred years did it settle down, in the late 18th century, to mean agreeable and become a general adjective of approval. The editors of the OED were exasperated by the drifts in this word's uses: "The precise development of the very divergent senses which this word has acquired in English is not altogether clear. In many examples from the 16th and 17th centuries it is difficult to say in what particular sense the writer intended it to be taken!"

"Silly" went the other direction. An Anglo-Saxon speaker in 800 A.D. would have been calling you happy or blessed if she had called you silly (sælig); a medieval figure, Richard the Lionhearted for example, would use the word to mean innocent. And from the 16th century's silly, meaning deserving of compassion, we've now shifted this poor word (deserving of our compassion) all the way to foolish or empty-headed!

The study of the history of English shows change on many levels of language: the sounds of English have changed significantly, particularly when our vowels, once pronounced like French or Spanish vowels, moved forward and up in the mouth in the 15th century. The more than 150 complex endings or inflections that specified grammatical relationships on Anglo-Saxon nouns, verbs, adjectives, and pronouns have in modern English been reduced to a mere eight; as a result words have to be put in careful order in an English sentence, to avoid ambiguity. "Ingres enjoyed painting his models nude" would not be ambiguous in a highly inflected language like Latin or Anglo-Saxon. Nude would have an ending on it to show us who was nude: the models, or Ingres! And many standards for syntax were developed in the eighteenth century when English grammars and dictionaries were invented. Double negatives were not wrong in Shakespeare's day. But by the time of the American Revolution, grammar books taught rules, like the rule that you should never split an infinitive, and these rules were often based on Latin grammar rather than English language usage.

Yet somehow, I think, it is words we think of when we think of language. Just like the child who created "thinso," we know as speakers we can create words by drawing on our awareness of phonology and morphology. Comic Rich Hall's "sniglets" (words that do not exist but should) are one kind of creation: hozone—the location to which one sock in every laundry load disappears; charp—the green mutant potato chip found in every bag! A participant at the Otterbein Lifelong Learning Program that I did in May 1997 created "smatch"—the reddish crease marks on vinyl seats. Another participant's child, Carly, often said: "I feel pouncey, Mommy!"

Food for Thought

A Historical Menu (Partial)

The evolution of terms for food and drink is an interesting reflection of the history of cultural contact between English-speaking countries and the rest of the world. By David Crystal, from The Cambridge Encyclopedia of the English Language. (After G. Hughes, 1988.)

	Food	Drink
Old English	cucumber, mussel, butter, bread, fish	ale, beer, wine water
Middle English	meat, cheese, broth, cream, biscuit, toast, ham, veal, beef, mutton, sauce, oyster	muscatel, rhenish (rhine wine), claret
1500's	marchpane (marzipan), whiting, offal, melon, pineapple, mushroom, salmon	sillabub
1600's	omelette, tomato, curry, chocolate, scone macaroni, caviar, turkey, artichoke, litchi	coffee, tea, sherry
1700's	avocado, paté, muffin, vanilla, salmagundi yoghurt, mincemeat, pasta, kedgeree	gin, port, champagne brandy, sherbet
1800's	spaghetti, soufflé, bechamel, ice cream, jam kipper, sandwich, meringue, hors d'oeuvre	riesling, tequila, seltzer whiskey
1900's	taco, quiche, hamburger, schwarma, pizza paella, tuna, goulash, mousse, grapefruit	Coca Cola, soda water

(defined by her mother as, "I have more energy than I know what to do with—I'm almost annoying to myself I have so much energy; a blend of bounciness and pounce.")

Where do new words come from? People borrow them or make them up or, sometimes, misunderstand them. Glamour and grammar are originally the same word, misheard and shifted in meaning. Bridegroom was really bridguma, when guma meant man—hence bride's man; guma itself was dropped from the language and people thought the speaker must have meant groom, so bridegroom was created. Carly's pouncey is a creative blend of two existing words. Other blends you are familiar with: motel, brunch, jazzercise.

Shakespeare is famous for having created hundreds of words: manager, gloomy, radiance, backing, assassination, leapfrog, cold-blooded, skim milk, and puke, to name only a few. How did he do it? The same way we do. He created nouns or adjectives from verbs, added suffixes (assassin to assassination; remorse to remorseless), formed compounds (which we still like to do in English: crybaby, waterbed, Walkman, blackboard), or made up a word that just sounded right (as in "puke"—first used in Jaques' memo-table "All the world's a stage" speech in As You Like It). Of course, he didn't hit a winner every time. In the case of Shakespeare's "barky," "brisky," "tortive," and "vastidity," cooler heads have prevailed. Those words haven't stayed on our vocabulary lists.

New words do emerge at need: think of all of the computer terms which have entered the language in the last ten years. Sometimes they come from an entertainer, a product, a public event, or a social situation (couch potato, spreadsheet, gridlock, bag lady, disinformation). Sometimes a word that was once new, like cowboy, whose connotations were originally positive and specific to a situation in the cattle-herding West, drifts and shifts both its referent and its connotations. In British English a cowboy is now a reference to an incompetent or irresponsible workman or business. In American English it can mean an automobile driver who doesn't follow the rules of the road.

At the opposite end of language from our enterprising, creative efforts lie the fossils of a language. What does "kith and kin" mean? When the weatherman on the morning news says, "Here's what's happening in your neck of the woods," what does neck mean? The meanings of words like 'kith' or 'neck' have dropped away, and the words no longer survive except in these fixed phrases. Kith comes from an Anglo-Saxon verb which means to make known or familiar; kith is the country, place, or people that are known or familiar. Thus kith and kin means your friends or acquaintances and your relatives. Your "neck" of the woods means your parcel of land in the woods, perhaps a place where you could find your kith and kin.

English's long history of borrowing words from other languages and its rich array of prefixes and suffixes mean that our language welcomes word-smiths. If you have a favorite sniglet in your family, please let me know the word and its meaning! All languages are learned at a level just beneath your conscious mind, but if you can figure out the sound pattern in razzle-dazzle, (why not dazzle-razzle), hanky-panky, herky-jerky, walkie-talkie, wing-ding, or helter-skelter, let me know. If you have a story about how your child is learning language, I'd love to hear that. As an English professor, I value the teaching of the written language (a grapholect, to linguists), but I also love the discoveries of language outside the classroom.

Wendy Peterson '95 points to Integrative Studies classes as the bonding experience of her freshman year. "I.S. classes gave us all something in common. You saw everybody in those classes," she says.

Tuesday Beerman Trippier '89 says she was pleasantly surprised by how swiftly the women in her hall got to know each other. "We quickly bonded. By the end of fall quarter I felt close to the other women on my floor. And with all those friends you didn't feel like a green freshman. It helped you blend in quickly."

Smith says she remembers her first floor meeting with women all crowded together in the lounge. The resident assistant went over a list of dos and don'ts. Even that has changed. Now when the students first gather, they discuss what rules they would like to establish as their community standards. They are more involved in creating their living environment.

What to Bring?

Christian says he came to college with a typewriter and a radio. Pretty typical for those days. Van Sant says she remembers when a clock radio and toaster oven made you king of the floor.

Miles remembers that she brought to school three homemade skirts, all made from the same pattern, and three sweaters.

Bert Horn remembers the laundry boxes. There were no washer and dryers on campus so your laundry got sent home to Mom and you could depend on it coming back with some little goodie as well as clean clothes.

Now washers and dryers have taken the place of laundry boxes. Zerla remembers collecting enough quarters for laundry. She says, "I used to think that it meant you were grown up when you owned a couch. Having to lug laundry down four flights of stairs in Hanby Hall only to find all of the washers in use changed my definition that adulthood was owning a washer and dryer."

Jane Horn recalls a story her friend Judy Tardell '74 used to tell.

"Judy remembers her freshman year when the first year electric curlers appeared in Cochran Hall. They'd plug them in and the fuse would blow. Judy knew where the fuse box was and how to switch the fuses. Maybe that's why it burned," Jane laughs.

Today, students bring stereos, clock radios, televisions, VCRs, computers, printers, video games and more. Jadwin says a survey conducted a few years ago revealed 30 percent of students bring their own computer. She says that figure is probably now closer to 40 percent. All of the residence halls have computer labs available to students.

In terms of amenities in the halls, Jadwin reports that Otterbein is offering more these days such as Internet connections, voice mail and cable access. For the future she predicts Otterbein, like other institutions, will go to a one card system meaning students will use one card, sort of an Otterbein debit card, for the dining hall, laundry facilities, vending machines, the bookstore and possibly with some area merchants.

Jadwin points to the immediacy of communications as an important issue with current students. She says many, in addition to the phone in their room, bring a second phone such as cordless phone they can take to the lounge or a cell phone. Others have pagers and Jadwin sees much more of a virtual community evolving on campus where students e-mail each other frequently. She says roommates even e-mail each other.

Pietila recalls that he rarely called home. When coming back from a visit at home he would call collect and his parents would refuse the charges. It saved the cost of the phone call and they knew he got back safely.

Van Sant remembers when students listened for a series of long and short rings to decide who the call was for.

Today parents page or e-mail their children at college.

Technology has forever changed the way we communicate and Otterbein is no exception.

Other essentials many alumni mentioned bringing to college include a fan for their small stifling room and a shower bucket. Everyone who has lived in the residence halls remembers the importance of the shower bucket.

Home Sweet Dorm

In addition to decking out their rooms with electronic gizmos, some students get creative with the space they have — generally a 12 x 15 room. "They try to make it as close to home as possible," Gatti explains. That includes lofting the beds to bring in couches. Jadwin recalls one student who created a lattice work gazebo in the corner of her room as a reading/study nook.

Trippier remembers well her cramped quarters in King Hall, especially the tiny closets. "It gave us a chance to be creative. We stacked our dressers on top of each other and put the desks face to face in front of the window," she says.

One parent asked Jadwin for permission to have her decorator come in before the school year began.

Not only have room furnishings changed, so have the personnel that live and work in the residence halls. Today there is a system of residence assistants and hall directors. In the late 40s and 50s (pre-RA), there were junior counselors. And until the mid-60s, women's residence halls had housemothers who kept track of who was in and who was out. "They were the watchdogs," Jane Horn says. "The policeman," laughs Miles.

"But parents were appreciative of that," Christian adds.

Now students come and go as they please but Van Sant believes that's one reason the residence halls have lost some of their community atmosphere. "If you don't have to be in, there is less community in the halls," she explains.

Today, expectations of the residence halls are much different. Gatti explains that when he began at Otterbein, he would ask a group of students how many shared a room with a sibling and three quarters of the students would raise their hands. Today there are so few, he instead asks how many had their own rooms.

"Now they've had a room to themselves. More and more want their own bedrooms and bathrooms, air conditioning. Expectations are going up," he says.

Zerla admits, "Learning to become comfortable brushing my teeth with a stranger standing at the next sink was definitely a challenge. Also, I think the college tried to instill time management skills when they built the bathrooms with three showers for 16 women to share. I think one of the most valuable lessons I learned in the dorms was memorization. I was constantly forgetting the door code."

Pietila remembers living in a house with nine other men and a bathroom in the basement where you had to chase the mice out of the shower.

Peterson credits her experiences in the residence halls with teaching her to deal with a wide range of different personalities. She is among those who had never shared a room but today she shares an apartment with Stephanie Mizer '95, her roommate from her freshman year. "We're still roommates," she laughs. "We've been living together for seven years now. We were so lucky and to think we were matched by chance based on that postcard we sent in the summer before our freshman year."

Entertainment: Playing Cards to Playing Nintendo

Alumni who graduated in the 1950s and 1960s remember Coke dates, the two-mile and four-mile walks, scrap day, bonfires and the Campus Center as the place to be for fun and socializing. Women, who were required to be in by a certain hour, would gather in the lounges to talk and study. Christian remembers long evenings of playing cards after the women had retreated to the residence halls.

"We used to find entertainment within the campus itself. We would make our own entertainment," Pietila says. Van Sant adds, "Students used to create their own fun and now they expect that from the institution."

"They've grown up being entertained," Miles interjects.

Some changes are for the better. Gatti refers to panty raids of the 50s and 60s. "That would not be acceptable today. Society today would not tolerate that. Fads come and go."

The current trend is not to find entertainment within the campus but within the room. With televisions, VCRs, Internet, video games, etc. in almost every room, the students don't gather in the halls or hang out at the Campus Center as they used to. "Today they are very self contained in their rooms," Smith says. "I think they want entertainment and instant gratification they get with video games, Internet, television."

She adds that today's students are less likely to be comfortable or open with strangers. "They are more individualistic and stick more to themselves," Becky says. "But consider the background of their generation and all the issues they have to deal with that earlier generations did not."

Another factor is that students can go farther afield to find entertainment. In the past only upperclassmen were allowed to have cars on campus. Today all students can have cars. Cars have given the students the mobility to go home more often, get to jobs, go shopping or just get away.

Smith, who didn't have a car, spent her first five weeks on campus at the urging of advisors who thought students needed to make the break from home and have time to become part of the campus community. "My mother believed Dr. Day when she said not to let me come home for the first five weeks," she says. "Students now feel they have to be very mobile."

Gatti says more than half live within "laundry distance" of home and do frequently go home on weekends.

Zerla remembers cars as an essential element of college life. She says a car was needed "especially to go to 'campus.' I was amazed to find out that the word campus referred to Ohio State's campus. I can't recall students ever referring to campus and meaning Otterbein."

Trippier adds that she wouldn't have made it without her roommate's car. In the first week of school she and Janet Olson Gay '89 made many trips to the local department store for the "essentials" they had forgotten to bring.

While many things change — residence hall rules, rapid communication, electronic equipment — the most important things remain the same. It is still the people of Otterbein, their friendliness and willingness to help, that make this College an institution that students want to attend. That's why when the fall leaves crackle, it's autumn, and it smells like excitement, new students will be moving into the Otterbein halls for the first time. ■ charges that Daubenmire is mixing religion with his teaching and coaching duties.

They allege that Daubenmire is violating the separation between church and state by leading the team in prayer before games and the Thursday night team meal and that he has advocated his religion to the students. Some want him fired.

Daubenmire says, "For the people who knew me at Otterbein, I was your run of the mill wild and crazy guy. In 1987 I had a born again experience that radically changed my life. In 1987 I turned my life over to Jesus Christ and became an entirely different guy. I think the people who knew me at Otterbein would be surprised to find out I'm in trouble for praying."

Daubenmire thinks the complaints have more to do with last year's 2-8 record than any objections to the team prayer before and after the game. No complaints have come from the football players or their parents, he says. Daubenmire thinks the group asking for his termination are people more interested in a winning football team than civil rights.

"We don't do anything unusual or anything any other team doesn't do," Daubenmire says. But he admits, "I am very open with my Christianity. I am not ashamed of the gospel of Jesus Christ and the affect it had on my life."

Daubenmire, like many coaches, holds a one-year contract with the school system. His contract as head football coach will be reviewed immediately after the fall season ends as it has been in previous years. Daubenmire says there is no reason to believe his contract will not be renewed again this year.

He says these complaints have come up before and were investigated by the superintendent who found no basis for any of them. The first time the ACLU asked for an investigation, changes were made so that captains lead the prayer instead of coaches.

"I know I haven't done anything wrong and God will vindicate me," Daubenmire says. "Really this issue is about school prayer and not about me. It's about the right of students to assemble for prayer. Frankly, I'm tired of seeing the civil liberties of Christians stripped away. They talk about freedom of expression and first amendment rights but I also have those first amendment rights. I would never force my beliefs on anyone but I am entitled to the free exercise thereof."

Daubenmire admits this has been hard on his family—his wife, Michele, and three children: Zach, 16; Abby, 15; and Maggie, 10.

"I think this has been more difficult on my wife and my kids than on me," he says. "I'm in the battle everyday and I can find rest in battle but they have to sit on the outside and see people take shots at me. Overall, they are bearing up well."

Daubenmire's coaches at Otterbein say they are surprised by the controversy surrounding the former Cardinal athlete. At Otterbein, Daubenmire played four years of football and baseball and two years of basketball.

"He was a centerfielder," remembers baseball coach Richard Fishbaugh. "He played too shallow for my tastes. He always thought he could go get it and usually he could. He was a great team man, just a kid every coach would want on his team. He was not what I would call... I never knew he was that religious. For the life of me, I can't think he was forcing anything down anyone's throat."

Former Head Football Coach Robert "Moe" Agler '48 calls Daubenmire a "class A person. I couldn't think of a bad thing to say about him. He was a gentleman and very highly respected. He got along well with players and coaches."

Agler, of course, had heard about the controversy through the media. "That's a bunch of parents on the outside not too happy with whether a boy gets to play or not. This sort of thing goes with the territory of coaching," he says. "He was winning for quite a while and you never heard anything then about the team prayer. I'm sure there were prayers when they were winning and when they are losing it becomes an issue."

Director of Athletics and Men's Head Basketball Coach Dick Reynolds '65, who graduated from London High School, says, "Well, my take [on this] is that Dauby found God. He's traveled extensively with his preaching and is very much into that lifestyle. Whether Dauby stepped over the line in this situation, I don't know. He's had some good teams and now some not so good teams and I think it's possible that some people are using this to get the things they want. But Dave's a nice guy and he has the kids at heart. He's a positive young man. In this situation, I'd be surprised if he was infringing upon the rights of the students."

The controversy will continue to swirl. Some will believe Daubenmire is proselytizing while others see a long-standing tradition, the team prayer, being attacked by civil libertarians. Some will support a man they believe is a good coach while others will call for his replacement in hopes of bringing back winning seasons.

In the middle of it all is Dave Daubenmire who feels secure in the work he is doing for London High School and the work he is doing for God. He says, "I know there are a lot of old Otters out there who have fond memories of me just as I have of them. They know the fighting spirit I possess. My hope for this situation is just that God be glorified in the whole thing." ■

THE PATCH

Want One for Free?!

This attractive, two-color embroidered patch was displayed on Otterbein athletic uniforms in 1997 to celebrate the Sesquicentennial. Now you can have one just for the asking. If you are interested, please contact Greg Johnson, at 614-823-1956. (email: gjohnson@otterbein.edu)

Alumni College Keeps Growing

Alumni College continues to get bigger and better each year. Virginia Tyson '63 wrote in her Alumni College evaluation, "This was an outstanding weekend! It is a good way to meet new friends from the other classes. It is a nice "get away" in the middle of the summer."

This year, 142 people turned out the weekend of July 24-26 for a variety of classes including "Attracting Backyard Wildlife," "Caricature Portraits," "The Gifts of People with ADD/ADHD," "Gang Awareness: A Behind-the-Scenes Look," "Internet Search Engines" and "101 Fun Internet Sites."

Robert Henn '57 talked on his area of expertise, wildflowers of Ohio, and Civil War historian Jeffrey Yoest '77 presented "A Civil War Story." Former president Dr. Thomas Kerr IV H'70, Speech Professor Emeritus Dr. Jim Grissinger H'75 and Director of Church Relations Mike Christian '61 presented "The Giants of Otterbein" about individuals who have made important contributions to the College. All of the classes were well attended and received rave reviews from the "students."

In addition to those great classes, Henn spoke after Friday's dinner on "The 5,300 Year Old Man" about the mummy discovered on the Austria/Italy border in 1991. This fascinating archeological specimen provides a vivid and unprecedented picture of life in Europe more than 5,000 years ago.

On Saturday, Mary Miller Westfall '75 spoke movingly about her experiences with Canine Companions for Independence (CCI). Mary, who has Multiple Sclerosis, has been confined to a wheelchair since she was 23. She described her incredible relationship with her golden retriever, Maggie, who has made her active life possible. Maggie is a service dog trained by CCI to assist Mary in completing the everyday tasks of living.

The final part of Alumni College was a "field trip" to tour the Longaberger Company. Many thanks go to Longaberger employees Jennifer Slager Pearce '87 and Polly Moore '88 who served as alumnae hosts to make the day extra special. The group toured the corporate headquarters (a huge basket-shaped office building), visited the plant where the baskets are made and enjoyed shopping in the quaint village of Dresden.

Toledo Alumni Take Cruise on the Maumee

Toledo area alumni gathered for an afternoon outing on Saturday, August 22. Nearly 20 people enjoyed a waterfront cruise on the Maumee River with alumni hosts Susan and Mike Duckworth '64 who made the trip possible. It was a beautiful day for sightseeing as the group floated past historic landmarks complete with a guided tour from the captain.

Take Me Out to the Jake

Forty alumni traveled to Cleveland on August 29 to see the Indians take on Oakland A's. Everyone enjoyed the trip to Jacobs Field but the Indians didn't hold up their end of the bargain. There was no victory for the Tribe fans that night.

Otterbein Night at the Jake: Smiles from the Otterbein group despite the fact that the Tribe lost.

Dayton Women Hear About MBA

The Dayton Otterbein Women's Club hosted former Assistant Director of Graduate Programs Stephanie Souryasack Werth '93 on Sept. 15. Stephanie spoke to the group of 20 women about Otterbein's newest graduate program, the MBA. The event was hosted by Gracie Augspurger '39.

Stephanie Souryasack Werth '93 (seated left) spoke to The Dayton Otterbein Women's Club about the new MBA program.

Lifelong Learning Features Native American Religions

The fall Lifelong Learning programs began on Sept. 17 with Charles Zimmerman, associate professor of Religion and Philosophy, who spoke to an audience of 95 people on the topic of "Native American Religions."

He opened his talk by citing the reasons white Americans are becoming increasingly interested in Native American religions. However, he cautioned that this new-found interest is not always welcome and that those who want to learn about these religions must go very carefully, lest they do more harm than good and lest they add to the obstacles Native Americans face as they try to preserve their own cultures. He also talked about how Native Americans understand the concept of God as the great creator, their important religious traditions and ended by discussing some mythology.

Capital Wimps Out of Baseball Game

The annual alumni baseball game became a softball game after Capital University alumni declined the challenge. After four years of consecutive defeats at the hands (wings?) of the Cardinals, the Crusaders decided not to take up the challenge this year leaving the Otterbein alumni to organize an inter-squad softball game on Sept. 20. Special thanks go to Greg Masters '87 for organizing the event and Coach Richard Fishbaugh for hosting the gang at his home for a party after the game.

The date for next year's game has already been set — Sunday, Oct. 10, 1999. Mark your calendar now!

Alumni Gatherings in Colorado and New Mexico

Alumni in Colorado and New Mexico met in late September to celebrate Otterbein. Events were held in Colorado Springs, Denver and Espanola, NM. Otterbein was represented by Rick Dorman, vice president for Institutional Advancement and Jack Pietila '62, executive director of Development. In New Mexico, Dorman and Pietila also visited The McCurdy School (established by the United Brethren Church in 1912) and were greeted by Superintendent Joe Boguslawski and Tim Morrison '99, an Otterbein student teacher and senior from Monroe Falls, Ohio.

Tom '63 and Sigrid '63 Persson Sharp served as alumni hosts for the Denver event. Others attending included Sharon Allison, Kyra Robinson '90, Don Shumaker '63 and Bob Yakely '62.

A Colorado Springs event was hosted by Bill '57 and Pat Weigland Bale '58 and included Bill Nowland '63, Robert '56 and Emily Bale Warner '58, and Kim and Jane Blocher.

In Santa Fe, NM, Dr. Sam '36 and Isabel '40 Howe Ziegler hosted alumni.

Rain Fails to Dampen Homecoming Spirit

Rain was the order of the day for this year's Homecoming on Saturday, Oct. 3. But despite the gray skies, spirits were high and many alumni from the classes of 1983, 1988, 1993 returned for their reunions.

In addition to those returning classes, five tents were set up around campus to welcome alumni from various decades. Special thanks go to the tent hosts who welcomed the many alumni. Edna Zech '33 hosted the tent for those who graduated in the 1920s and 1930s. Bud Yuest '53 greeted returning alumni from the 1950s and 1960s. Graduates from the 1970s and 1980s were welcomed back by Dave Lehman '70 and Gary Tirey H'90. Those who graduated in this decade were greeted by Stephanie Souryasack '93 and Phil Barnhart H'90.

Twenty-three former presidents of the National Alumni Association began the Homecoming with a continental breakfast in Howard House. Current NAA President Cabot Rea '78 welcomed everyone and introduced the NAA secretary Carolyn Royer '60. Student Alumni Council President Jessica Coriale '99 also addressed the group as SAC members joined in the event.

In the evening, many returning alumni attended events sponsored by the fraternities and sororities. More than 30 attended the reunion party at Dick Clark's American Bandstand restaurant where the music and the atmosphere tied in nicely with the Homecoming theme of "Swingin' Through the Decades." Many alumni attended a gala concert in Cowan Hall, entitled "A Musical Homecoming," which featured performances of distinguished Department of Music alumni.

Carnegie Libraries Featured in Lifelong Learning

As part of the ongoing series of Lifelong Learning events, Mary Ellen Armentrout '66 spoke about her research on, and love of, Carnegie Libraries on Oct. 13 to a group of about 40 people. The head of Otterbein's inter-library loans, Mary Ellen became intrigued with the idea that America had no free libraries for people until Carnegie came along and began funding them.

As a result, Mary Ellen began a quest to visit all 115 libraries in Ohio. She began her trips as a simple architectural study of the Carnegie Libraries but it has since evolved into a study of the cultural and social history of the role these libraries played and often are still playing in their communities.

Mary Ellen hopes to publish a book on the subject by 2000. She also plans to organize a photo exhibit that can be shared with all 115 Carnegie Libraries. ■

Attention Broadcast Alums

Cabot Rea '78 is interested in organizing a reunion for all alumni involved in radio and TV broadcasting. If you are working in this field and are interested in a reunion, please send your information to Otterbein College, Howard House, Attn: Greg Johnson, 131 W. Park, Westerville, OH 43081. Look forward to hearing from you!

PHILANTHROPY AT OTTERBEIN

The annual Otterbein Recognition Dinner was held at the Medallion Country Club north of Westerville on October 16. The dinner recognized those that have supported the College throughout the year and also served to introduce the Annual Fund National Volunteer Council. A record 183 attendees were present at the gala event, and were treated to music from Otterbein's vocal jazz group, Opus One, directed by David Monseur.

What's new at Otterbein?

That's the question I'm asked most often when I visit with alumni or talk with the community at large. For this past year my list would include balancing the budget for the 43rd consecutive year, raising more money than in any previous year (over $5 Million), beginning the renovation of Towers Hall, starting a Master of Business Administration program, wiring the residence halls for computer technology into the 21st century, welcoming new faculty and staff, and working on a new strategic plan for the college.

This time around our strategic planning exercise is taking a different twist. We are concentrating less on numbers, e.g., goals for enrollment, endowment, faculty with terminal degrees and student retention, and concentrating more on six framing questions: What do we value? What do we do well? What do we need to improve? What are our unrealized opportunities? What distinguishes us? What are our external threats and challenges? The plan is still a work in progress and when it is complete I'll share the results. One of the themes that has come up in many of the discussions to date is our historic tradition as a College of opportunity. When pushed to elaborate on that phrase, the respondents have included our egalitarian traditions, being unpretentious (someone commented that we don't have the burden of elitism), being open to all students of potential regardless of their backgrounds, helping everyone succeed, being adaptable, having a visible and approachable faculty and having, throughout the College, a strong sense of community.

With all of the emphasis today on "what's new," it is heartening to find old concepts that are still fresh. Certainly the Otterbein campus of 1998 is different in appearance from past decades, but on any given day you will find students and faculty in and out of the classroom discussing, debating, questioning and challenging concepts and ideas. These are all the elements which contribute to a sound liberal arts education, provide the foundation for lifelong learning, and provide the foundation for intellectual, personal and spiritual growth.

All of us who serve the College on a daily basis are extremely grateful for the support provided by thousands of alumni and friends this past year, helping the College continue to grow while being forever aware of our proud tradition as a College of opportunity.

The Heritage Fellowship recognizes those persons whose gifts provide special leadership to the College. Through gifts already made, or with commitments to be filled through estates, those who participate in the Heritage Fellowship share a vision of Otterbein—a college that continues to make important, distinctive contributions to higher education.

Members of the Heritage Fellowship have made cash contributions or deferred gift commitments that together total at least $50,000. Within the Heritage Fellowship are four Circles:

Guardians Circle	$1 million or more
Benefactors Circle	$500,000 to $999,999
Leaders Circle	$200,000 to $499,999
Founders Circle	$50,000 to $199,999

Those named have made gifts and commitments to Otterbein that collectively exceed $23 million. We are grateful for the generous spirit of all who are members of the Heritage Fellowship, and trust that their generosity will challenge others to join them.

Student Profile

“It Just Felt Like Home.”

Jason Loughman, a fifth year senior majoring in secondary education, knows many of the miles around Otterbein. As a long-distance runner on the cross country and track teams, he runs an average of 40 to 60 miles a week and has come to know the scenery and streets of Westerville well. His favorite place to run in the area is Hoover Reservoir.

In his freshman year, Jason was a member of Otterbein's cross country team which was ranked eighth in the nation at the end of the season. Since then he has twice been named to the cross country all-conference first team.

“Hopefully, I'm going for a third year this year,” he says.

In track, he also has been named all conference twice. “For me track and cross country have been a major part of my experience at Otterbein,” Jason says. “I've enjoyed the success of the teams and being part of that.”

However, Jason knows he would not be part of Otterbein without the grants he has received.

“That's really the reason I can go here,” he admits. “I just want to say thank you very much to all those who have given to Otterbein. They've made it possible for me and other students to go here. Their help is greatly appreciated. I hope when I leave here, I can find a good job and someday down the road do the same thing for students.”

He adds that he feels fortunate that he will leave Otterbein and not have to face a staggering student loan debt.

Jason, a native of Galion, Ohio, came to know Otterbein through visits to his sister, Kelli, a 1996 graduate. “When I was looking at colleges, it just felt like home,” he explains. “And I wanted to come for the cross country and track. Otterbein had everything I wanted academically and I wanted a small college atmosphere.”

Outside of the classroom, in addition to running track and cross country, Jason is a member of Pi Kappa Phi fraternity. He has worked as a resident assistant for Student Affairs, a host and tour guide for the Admission Office and in the mail room.

This winter, Jason will do his student teaching and looks forward to a career in education. He will graduate in the spring and hopes to find a position that allows him to coach track and cross country as well as teach. “I love the school atmosphere and want to help kids,” he says.

“I just want to say thank you very much to all those who have given to Otterbein. They've made it possible for me and other students to go here. Their help is greatly appreciated.” - Jason Loughman, '99

Gift clubs allow the College to thank and recognize the many people whose giving funds scholarships, equipment and other areas that strengthen the educational opportunities provided to students at Otterbein.

These clubs exist to advance the College by giving donors options for contributions at various leadership levels. Individuals are invited to join one of these clubs each year as part of their total support of Otterbein.

Membership in Otterbein's giving clubs is extended to individuals who contribute annually to the furtherance of the College's activities.

Giving club memberships:

- May be initiated through a gift of cash or securities
- Include all contributions made within the July 1 to June 30 fiscal year
- May include matching gifts from a donor's employer

Otterbein's annual giving clubs are:

- The President's Club (gifts of $5,000 or more)
Robert & Annbeth Sommers Wilkinson, Chairs
- Towers Club (gifts of $1,000 to $4,999)
Susan Canfield, Chair
- Tan and Cardinal Club ($500 to $999)

Student Profile

“Everything on the list was exactly what I wanted.”

“Otterbein was definitely my top choice from the very, very beginning,” sophomore math major Tricia Johnson gushes. “I remember reading that ‘Otterbein in Brief’ and everything in that list hit me as exactly what I wanted. Then my dad looked at the tuition and said, ‘Tricia, you can throw that away.’”

But she wasn’t willing to give up on Otterbein that easily and after touring the campus, she was sold on the small town atmosphere. “The literature said, ‘We will make it happen for a middle class family. We will create a financial aid package to fit your situation,’” Tricia remembers. Her father opened the line of communication with the admission and financial aid offices. “He talked and worked with financial aid and persisted,” Tricia says. “I owe a lot to my dad and mom for going beyond what most parents would. If my parents wouldn’t have worked with the admission and financial aid people, who were so accommodating, I would not be here at Otterbein.”

When she entered Otterbein, Tricia, who came from Louisville, Ky., received a President’s Award, a Community Service Scholarship and a grant from the Math and Science department.

“I guess it never got a chance to soak in that the money from the Math and Science department didn’t just pop up. It came from somebody. I’m not sure who or how but I’m glad to be here,” Tricia says. “Right now Otterbein is the biggest part of my life and I would like to thank those who gave me a chance to be here.”

This year she has added a resident assistant scholarship to her financial aid package. Tricia has worked since arriving on campus; first in the Service Department and now in the Campus Center Office. In addition she works as a Host and Tour guide.

For the last two years, as part of her community service scholarship, Tricia has been the community service co-coordinator for the United Methodist Children’s Home. Each week she takes a group of nine Otterbein students to the children’s home to tutor students.

“Really, we’re more than tutors,” Tricia says. “They really do look up to us as role models.”

On top of her work, her community service and her academic load, Tricia is a member of Otterbein’s cross country and track and field teams.

With so much of her academic career still ahead, Tricia isn’t sure what she will do after graduation but the idea of joining the Peace Corps has begun to appeal to her. Following that, Tricia, who is going to get her teaching certificate along with her math degree, plans to someday teach high school algebra. Even further in the future, Tricia says she would like to get involved in the field of youth ministry.

“But I’m only a sophomore,” she laughs. “Tomorrow that could all change.”

“Right now, Otterbein is the biggest part of my life and I would like to thank those who gave me a chance to be here.” - Tricia Johnson, '01

Student Profile

“I can’t imagine not going here.”

Shannon Lord followed a family tradition when she chose Otterbein. Her father Oscar Louis “Lou” Lord III ’71 graduated from the College as did Shannon’s uncle Lance Lord ’69 and her aunt, Rebecca Elliott Lord ’68. Her grandfather, Oscar H. Lord, Jr. H’90 is now president of Otterbein’s “O” Club.

A resident of Westerville, Shannon remembers her father bringing her to athletic events at Otterbein since she was a little girl. Her father played football for the Cardinals and has continued to enthusiastically support Otterbein athletics.

While in high school, Shannon looked at Otterbein, Muskingum College and Butler University in Indiana. She admits money was a deciding factor for her.

“Otterbein had the best financial aid package and was the most affordable,” she says. “Without the financial aid I couldn’t afford to go here. I don’t know where I’d be.”

Shannon, a junior international studies major, admits she was a little leery of going to a college in her hometown. “I kind of wanted to get away when I went to college but I’ve ended up loving it,” she says. “I can’t imagine not going here. I really like the small classes where you get to know your professors and the other students in the class. And everyone is so friendly. I’ve met so many neat people here at Otterbein.”

A three-year member of Otterbein’s Senate, Shannon is also a member of Kappa Phi Omega sorority. This year she is the sorority’s treasurer. “It’s a really diverse group of women,” she says. “We are all so different but that’s one of the great things — learning about everyone’s differences and interests.”

During her three years at Otterbein, Shannon also has worked in the Rike Center office doing a variety of jobs. The little girl who used to come to Otterbein games with her dad is now the young woman selling the tickets.

Shannon, who is minoring in economics and political science, hopes to use her degree to work for an international corporation. As a high school student, Shannon traveled to Mexico and Puerto Rico with a church group and became entranced with the Spanish language. She also discovered a love of travel. She now hopes to combine her fluency in Spanish and her interest in travel to find a job in the business world.

Whatever the future may bring, Shannon knows Otterbein has prepared her for a wide range of opportunities and that it would not be possible without the support of countless donors to the College.

“Otterbein had the best financial aid package. Without the financial aid I couldn’t afford to go here. I don’t know where I’d be.”

Fiscal Year 1998 Corporate and Foundation Grants

American Chemical Society

The Petroleum Research Fund

Metal Clusters as Models of Micelles in Non-Aqueous Solution

Dr. Dean Johnston, Project Director

Department of Chemistry: $20,000

The funded research will examine the effect of distance on rates of long-range electron transfer and the relationship between structure and diffusion coefficients. The advantage of this study is that these relationships will be examined in an elegant system that closely models the structure and properties of inverse micelles.

American Council of Learned Societies

The John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation Program for Innovation in the Liberal Arts and Sciences
Integrated Learning for Seniors

Dr. Alison Prindle, Project Director

Department of Integrative Studies: $38,994

The grant will support the development and teaching of six Senior Year Experience courses which will link the liberal learning core, majors disciplines, and our mission to educate students responsible to the larger community. These team-taught courses will test interdisciplinary content and a contemporary issues focus as part of the College's four-year experiment in designing reflective, integrative learning for all seniors.

Ameritech Partnership Awards for Independent Colleges

Nurse-Net Education to Rural Ohio: An Otterbein College-Hocking College Collaborative

Mr. John Kengla and Drs. Judy Strayer and Barbara Cornett, Project Directors

Departments of Continuing Studies and Nursing: $25,000

This two-year innovative, replicable project will reduce disparities in access to education and health care/health promotion services. This project will support Otterbein's effort to deliver the Master of Science and the Nurse Practitioner program over the interactive television and the Internet at Hocking College to nurses residing in rural southeastern Ohio. Specifically, it will enable faculty to redesign their courses so they can be delivered over interactive TV and the Internet, and provide Otterbein nursing faculty training in using these interactive electronic models to deliver graduate nursing courses.

Bank One, NA

The Multimedia Classroom and The Otterbein-Bank One Community Service Van

Multidisciplinary

Office of Academic Affairs: $77,370

The Multimedia Classroom is a 21-computer station classroom for state-of-the-art teaching to produce technologically-literate MBA graduates and K-12 teachers. The classroom annually will serve nearly 600 students and 60 inservice K-12 teachers in 25 courses over six disciplines.

Ms. Rebecca Smith, Community Service Project Director

Department of Student Activities: $27,000

The Otterbein-Bank One Community Service Van will enable the expansion and enhancement of Otterbein's community service program by transporting increasing numbers of Otterbein and Columbus Public School students to and from campus for community service initiatives. The program primarily works with disadvantaged youth from four inner-city schools and provides services such as after-school care, tutoring, esteem-building, drug prevention, college preparation, and social/ cultural events.

Battelle

The Science Education Discovery Center

Drs. Paula Knight and Michelina Smith, Project Directors

Department of Education: $98,961

This two-year project will support the creation of The Science Education Discovery Center (Science 136), and will train 50 Columbus Public and central Ohio teachers and 150 pre-service teachers annually in the integration of technology into science education and mathematics curricula.

Child Development Council of Columbus and Franklin County

Project REACH Evaluation

Dr. Evelyn Luckey, Project Director

Department of Education: $46,800

Funding for the final year of this project will support the completion of the systematic evaluation of area Head Start programming.

The Kresge Foundation

Affirming Our Past, Shaping Our Future — Towers Hall Renovation

Institution: $700,000

This challenge grant, designated toward the restoration of Towers Hall, will stimulate new and increased giving to culminate The Campaign for Otterbein.

The Harry C. Moores Foundation

The Science Education Discovery Center

Dr. Michelina Smith, Project Director

Department of Education: $42,440

Funding will support the refurbishing of Science 136 into a modern learning environment reflective of current classrooms and conducive to the instruction of pre-service teachers of elementary and middle school students. Along with room renovation, funding will purchase chairs, computer stations, a large screen multimedia, television computer for whole-class instruction, and a full-size projection screen.

Ohio Biological Survey & Ohio Division of Wildlife

Partners in Wildlife Program

Freshwater Mussels Research

Dr. Michael Hoggarth, Project Director

Department of Life & Earth Sciences:

Summer 1997, $15,453 and Summer 1998, $8,000

This research will continue to examine the physical habitats of freshwater mussels in the Ottawa, Mohican and Walhonding Rivers, and studies of the Catspaw in Killbuck Creek.

The Ohio Board of Regents

Eisenhower Science and Mathematics Program

Technology Partners for Math and Science Integration

Dr. Patti Albaugh, Project Director

Department of Education: $34,282

This collaboration between Otterbein and McGuffey Elementary School (Columbus Public Schools) enables on-site, sustained support of teacher exploration and use of software. Teachers will learn the operation of the computers and software and how to generate a plan for integration of the technology into the curricula.

Ohio Campus Compact

Scholarship of Engagement Mini-Grants

The Organization and Administration of Health Programs

Ms. Patti Wilson, Project Director

Department of Health & Physical Education: $2,000

Project funding supports the enhancement of The Organization and Administration of Health Programs course which combines service with learning to enhance the education of future health educators. The course emphasizes a study of health programs in various settings including school, community, and worksite and will impact 75-100 community members with at least three health intervention programs.

Being Safe: A book of (H)ours

Dr. Nicholas Hill, Project Director

Department of Visual Arts: $1,835

This service project is in collaboration with the Children of the Future program, a city-wide arts and public safety program in Columbus, funded by AmeriCorps, the Greater Columbus Arts Council, and the Columbus Parks and Recreation Department. The project will require children to work together to create books that explore safety issues in their community. The children will learn printmaking and the book will be distributed to neighborhood recreation centers giving them a voice in defining their community. The entire process will be documented in photos and other media with an exhibition at a variety of sites.

Ohio Campus Compact

University as Citizens 1998 Summer Institute

Ms. Rebecca Smith, Project Director

Department of Student Activities: $1,500

An Otterbein team comprised of two administrators, three faculty, and one student will attend a conference to explore methods of integrating service learning into the Integrative Studies curriculum. The committee will define ways students can contribute as active and engaged citizens, and to design intensive training opportunities for I.S. faculty to integrate service learning into the core curriculum.

Ohio Department of Education

Goals 2000: The BRIDGE Project

Dr. L. Thomas Moore, Project Director

Department of Education: $135,500

This second-year funding will continue a multi-level, collaborative network of four area institutions of higher education united by their commitment to the facilitation of student learning in six school districts located in the Central Ohio area and the Central Ohio Regional Professional Development Center.

Ohio Parents for Drug Free Youth

Binge Drinking Prevention on Ohio Campuses

Ms. Rebecca Smith, Project Director

Department of Student Activities: $2,500

A survey and replicable action plan will be developed to reduce binge drinking on the Otterbein campus.

Ross Products Division of Abbott Laboratories

1998 Science Lecture Series

Dr. Lynn Taylor, Committee Chair

Multidisciplinary: $1,000

Funding supports the 1998 Science Lecture Series, Animals in Society: Exploring the Human-Animal Bond.

Charles E. Schell Foundation

Fifth Third Bank, Trustee

Revolving Student Loan

Institution: $25,000

These supplemental funds enhance a revolving, interest-free student loan program.

U.S. Department of Health & Human Services

Professional Nurse Traineeships

Drs. Judy Strayer and Eda Mikolaj, Project Directors

Department of Nursing:

Academic Year 1997-98, $28,724 and Academic Year 1998-99, $16,798

This support assists Master of Science in Nursing students in Adult Health Care to prepare for advanced nursing practice in a variety of rural and urban health care settings that serve diverse populations.

Otterbein "O" Club Report For Otterbein College Year End June 30, 1998

Executive Director

Rebekah M. Carlisle '81

Officers & Directors as of Homecoming 1998:

President	Oscar L. Lord, Jr., H'90
Vice President	David E. Lehman '70
Immediate Past President	Robert (Moe) Agler '48
Treasurer	William J. McLoughlin '83
Secretary	Jeffrey P. Yoest '77
Directors	Christopher J. Carlisle '80 Jack W. Groseclose '49 Ronald W. Jones '61 Paul S. Reiner '68

Established in 1955, the sole objective of the Otterbein "O" Club is to contribute to the success of the College's Athletic Department. Most of that assistance is financial, but the "O" Club also contributes many volunteer hours and a variety of in-kind services. Membership in the "O" Club is automatic for any male or female Varsity "O" athlete, after the athlete has graduated or is no longer a student at the College. Membership is also open to all who wish to support Otterbein athletics. Foundation members are supporters who contributed $1,000 or more over a three-year period.

The "O" Club and "O" Club Foundation received almost $80,000 in contributions from July 1, 1997 to June 30, 1998, the College's fiscal year. Immediate Past President Robert (Moe) Agler's challenge to supporters to pledge $300 per year for five years to increase the Foundation's endowment to $1 million by 2001 is meeting with success.

The primary fund-raiser for the "O" Club is the Scholarship Golf Classic held each year on Columbus Day. Other annual events include the Annual Meeting/Dinner, held the evening of Homecoming, and the Basketball Classic, held each year between Christmas and New Year's Day. Each year the "O" Club also presents the Outstanding Service Award and the Excel Award to deserving former Otterbein athletes, or supporters of the athletic programs.

The Officers and Directors of the "O" Club sincerely thank its many loyal benefactors.

"O" Club in Memoriam

The "O" Club is honored to have been remembered at the time of loss, and in memory of, the following loved ones:

Paul Askins	Dr. Hutch	Evelyn J. Sprout
Dwight (Smokey) Ballenger	Harley Karl	Willard Talbott
Norman Dohn	William O Lanker	J. Hutchison Williams
Karl Farnlacher	Donald R. Martin
Bob Hall	Charles Myers, Jr.

"O" Club Donations

July 1, 1997 through June 30, 1998.

Complete Endowed Descriptions

We again wish to highlight the contributors to our endowed scholarships, endowed awards and endowed special projects and funds.

Opportunities to establish Otterbein College Endowed Scholarships begin at $15,000.

Endowed scholarships provide funds for financial assistance to "incoming students". Eligibility decisions rest with the Admissions Scholarship Committee.

Figures with each endowed fund reflect the total of gifts received as of June 30, 1998. Those funds receiving no gift in the '97-'98 fiscal year are listed by title and gift total only.

History of the Program 1898—1998

The first endowed scholarship was established in 1898 by J. Wesley Welshans, who stated, "It is hoped that this gift may be increased and that many others of like character may be established." Welshans set up the scholarship in memory of his son and an Otterbein tradition, now one hundred years old, was born.

During the '98-'99 school year, there are 162 endowed scholarships providing assistance to 453 students.

Current Endowed Scholarships

A new feature of this Honor Roll is the listing of the 1997-98 recipients for each endowed scholarship receiving contributions in that fiscal year.

Student Profile

“That personal approach is the wonder of Otterbein.”

Mark Snyder, a native of Warren, Ohio, was working with a theatre group in Youngstown, Ohio, and a friend there encouraged him to consider Otterbein, calling it, “a great school.”

Mark adds, “That’s how it began. I took the tour and visited and said, ‘This is where I want to go.’”

Saying it and doing it are two different things however, especially when there are six children in the family. Mark was the first to go to college. “My parents are teachers and they recognize the importance of quality education and they were willing to make sacrifices,” he explains.

However, after Mark started at Otterbein, two other siblings began college and two more are in parochial school.

“I get significant financial aid,” Mark says. “Without the grants and financial aid, I couldn’t have come to Otterbein.”

He credits Otterbein’s financial aid office for making the process comfortable. “Some schools talk down to you and make it difficult,” he explains. “The people in the financial aid office really made it easy and effective for my family. And my mom is getting really good at all this financial aid stuff. She calls and talks to (Student Loan Specialist) Mary Neels anytime she needs to. When I come back to school she tells me to say hi to Mary for her. That personal approach, that’s the wonder of Otterbein.”

In addition to his financial aid, Mark has been working throughout his college career. Most recently he worked for publishing house McGraw-Hill in research and copy editing.

On campus, Mark has been an active student. He was a member of the Campus Programming Board, wrote for the Tan and Cardinal, coordinated the AIDS Task Force, organized the AIDS Benefit Concert, worked as a resident assistant and a summer conference assistant. In addition, he took advantage of Otterbein’s exchange program with the Roehampton Institute and studied in England for a quarter.

Mark plans to be a playwright. He will graduate this spring with a BA in English, a writing degree with an emphasis on playwriting. When he leaves Otterbein, he will have completed six plays and plans to apply to graduate school. He has applied to Yale, Columbia and New York University.

“What Otterbein does and gives is a means to do everything you want to do,” Mark says. “I am amazed at how much I have learned and how much I have changed in the last four years.”

He is also amazed at some of the people he has met at Otterbein from the world of theatre including, composer Marvin Hamlisch, playwrights Wendy Wasserstein, Anna Devereaux Smith and performer Priscilla Lopez, an original cast member from A Chorus Line.

Maybe someday Mark Snyder will be one of those names in theatre that college students mention with awe. Mark feels Otterbein has prepared him to take on and accomplish anything he dreams of doing.

“I get significant financial aid. Without the grants and financial aid, I couldn’t have come to Otterbein.”

Mark Kish, a junior broadcasting major from Bellaire, Ohio, is not the first from his family to attend Otterbein. Mark followed his sister Stacie, a 1996 graduate, to the College.

“That played the biggest role in choosing Otterbein,” Kish explains. “I was familiar with Westerville and comfortable with Otterbein. When I came to visit it was a good experience meeting her friends. You remember those things when you’re looking at schools.”

While Mark is a broadcasting major, he has decided he enjoys writing more than television or radio. At the College’s television station, WOCC, Mark appeared on camera as a sports anchor in his freshman year followed by a stint as programming director. He also tried his hand as sports director for the radio station WOBN.

During his sophomore year, Mark switched to print media as a sports reporter for the campus newspaper, the Tan and Cardinal. Now as a junior he is the sports editor.

“Coming into college, I had my mind on broadcasting,” Kish says. “Because I was able to dive in and try a lot of things as a freshman, I found out I didn’t like it as much as I thought I would. Then I moved on to the newspaper and started getting training for that. I think Otterbein has done very well in preparing me to write. I’ve learned a lot and I think my stories now are balanced and tight. After graduation, I would like to write for a sports magazine. That’s the only real vision I have right now.”

Kish is headed in the right direction and working hard to make that goal a reality. He is currently writing freelance articles for All Stater Sports magazine and looks forward to completing an internship with the organization in the near future.

In addition to his work in the campus media, Mark has worked in the mail room, the Campus Center and for the Student Affairs Office as a resident assistant and orientation assistant. He also has been active in Otterbein Christian Fellowship and the Otterbein chapter of Campus Crusade.

Mark feels he made the right decision following in his sister’s academic footsteps. “I can’t imagine being anywhere else,” he says. “I think the personal attention students get here is so important. I have friends at OSU and there the faculty/student ratio can be one to 100 in some classes. I don’t know how you can go through that. I love being on a small campus. Everything is right here.”

However, Mark knows he wouldn’t have had the opportunity to come to Otterbein without the financial support of others. “My mom and I pour over financial aid forms,” he says. “The help I’ve received is significant. It’s something you really consider when choosing a college.”

He adds, “To the people who have helped me, I would like to say thank you very much. I know they are concerned with the well being of Otterbein’s students and I’d like them to know they are investing in a worthy cause.”

“My mom and I pour over financial aid forms. The help I’ve received is significant. It’s something you really consider when choosing a college.”
