Science. It's About Time, Too!

Fifty third, fourth, and fifth grade teachers participated in a two-week workshop at Otterbein, entitled "Science: It's About Time, Too!" Workshop activities focused on the teaching of science, using the concept of time as a theme.

"Time is a great topic for third, fourth, and fifth grade children," said Project Director Karen Robinson. "Eight, nine, ten, and eleven year olds are beginning to understand time as an abstract concept. If presented with interesting, real information, children at this age can make exciting connections with the past, as well as the present. They can also begin to understand the importance of time as a variable in contemporary science."

The teachers explored geology, archeology, astronomy, and life sciences. One of the high points of the workshop was a field trip to SunWatch Archaeological Park in Dayton. There, the teachers saw a reconstructed twelfth century village. Like prehistoric settlements in other parts of the world, the natives of this site used the sun and its shadow as a calendar. Archaeological evidence at SunWatch suggests that poles were placed at strategic points in the village to determine when to plant and when to harvest. In preparation for the visit to SunWatch, the teachers measured the sun's shadow at different points of the day. Using compasses, they observed the movement of the earth during the day, in relation to the sun.

Patti Albaugh

When they returned to their classrooms this fall, the workshop participants worked with their students on a variety of time-related connections. The children made measurements of the sun's shadow and compared their September and November measurements with their teachers' data from June. All 50 classrooms will send their shadow measurements to Otterbein, via the computer.

"We've never done this kind of thing before," said Robinson. One of the staff members, Patti Albaugh, has created a web page and special data charts for the children to use this fall. During the workshop, the teachers worked in computer labs to get ready for the fall data collection, using spreadsheet and graphing software. Another staff member, Paula Knight, worked with the teachers on a Solar Car Race, using the Internet and weather information to determine how fast the teachers' "pretend cars" could get from Seattle to Columbus.

The workshop is funded by the Eisenhower Foundation for Professional Development, and administered by the Ohio Board of Regents. This summer's workshop is the sixth year that Otterbein's Education Department has worked with elementary teachers and collaborated on the teaching of science. The 50 participants were from public schools in Gahanna/Jefferson, Columbus, and Westerville, and the Diocese of Columbus Catholic Schools.

Otterbein in Top Three in Midwest

For the fourth consecutive year, Otterbein was ranked among the top ten liberal arts institutions in the midwest by U.S. News and World Report. Otterbein improved with a move from fifth place to third in this year's overall rankings.

These rankings were released by U.S. News and World Report for the "1998 America's Best Colleges" guide.

In the category of regional liberal arts colleges, Otterbein ranked higher than any other Ohio institution. Otterbein is followed by Ohio Northern University at sixth and Mount Union College at eighth. Otterbein was also ranked first in academic quality and second in student satisfaction.

Otterbein has been steadily moving up in the rankings over the past three years. In 1995, Otterbein was ranked eighth; the College moved up to seventh in 1996. Last year Otterbein was fifth in the rankings and is now third.

This is actually the fifth time Otterbein has been named among the top ten. In 1987, Otterbein was ranked eighth in the category of "smaller comprehensive colleges."

After that ranking, U.S. News and World Report changed the categories in the guide and dropped "smaller comprehensive colleges." Otterbein then was judged against a much broader range of schools.

This year there were 424 institutions surveyed in the liberal arts category covering the four regions of the nation with 136 of those in the mid-west region.

The schools considered for the guide were divided into categories based upon classifications maintained by the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching.

U.S. News and World Report surveyed college presidents, deans and admissions directors asking them to rate all the schools in the same category as their own institutions. The resulting reputation rankings were then combined with educational data that had been provided by the colleges themselves. These include statistics which measure student selectivity, faculty resources, financial resources, graduation rate and alumni support.

The full survey appears in the Sept. 1, 1997 issue of U.S. News and World Report, which has also published a new student guidebook containing important and helpful information about the institutions in the survey. The guidebook is now available in bookstores and on newsstands.

Equestrians Saddle Double Regional Championships

For the first time in Otterbein's history, both of its equestrian teams were crowned regional champions in 1996-97, with members qualifying for the Intercollegiate national competition last May.

Otterbein College competes in Zone VI, Region III (Michigan and Ohio) of the Intercollegiate Horse Show Association (IHSA) under the direction of head coach Lucy Cryan (hunt seat) and Debbie Griffith (stock seat).

This double regional championship is particularly special to Otterbein, as the awards are named in memory of A. Joanne Coyle, who was the coach at Otterbein from 1984-1990, where she coached three riders to individual IHSA national championships, and in 1986 coached the national champion stock seat team. She began a new job at Virginia Intermont College in 1990, and will always be remembered as a tireless volunteer, full of creative energy, and much loved by her students. A. J. died on February 23, 1994, after a courageous battle with cancer. She was 41.

Tragedy Strikes Members of the Class of '96

Three members of the class of 1996 were involved in tragic accidents this summer leading to the death of one alumna.

Shelly Whited and Tina Ciampa, were injured on June 18 at Camp Lazarus in Delaware, Ohio, when they fell 50 feet from a platform. Whited died a week later from her injuries.

Both women were instructors with Direct Instructional Support Systems, which oversees team-building activities at Adventure Education Center at Camp Lazarus. The company uses trails and obstacle courses to teach team-building skills and promote fitness.

The two women had been standing on a platform and fell as they attempted to descend a steel cable. They were wearing safety harnesses.

Whited graduated with honors from Otterbein where she majored in psychology. She was a member of the volleyball team, the Otterbein Gospel Choir and a volunteer with Habitat for Humanity. She researched, co-authored and coordinated "AIDS Knowledge Among Mothers Affected by HIV" for presentation to the National Psychology Institute.

Ciampa, who majored in Life Science at Otterbein, is at her parents' home in Sarver, PA, recovering from her injuries.

In a separate incident, Trevor Kielmeyer, also a 1996 graduate, had both legs amputated following an accident in which he was pinned against a wall by his vehicle. On July 1, Kielmeyer was injured when his Jeep rolled forward after he parked it at the Newark High School lot. He moved in front of the vehicle to try to stop it from rolling down a hill toward the gymnasium. The bumper caught Kielmeyer's legs about knee level, pinning him against the building.

Towers Staff Surrenders Peacefully to Historians

We're coming out with our hands up, fully aware that journalists should not feign to be historians. While we have received many compliments for the Sesquicentennial issue, many took issue with some of our historical references. And quite frankly, we just goofed on some of them. Read on.

Thanks for the Memories

Dear Roger,

You have outdone yourself! The Sesquicentennial issue of Towers is a delight — great stories, excellent photos, beautiful layout! It is a treasure — wonderful memories of a very special event.

Thank you and Patti and your staff.

Oh, That Perfect Season!

Dear Roger,

Congratulations on the Towers Special Sesquicentennial issue. It was masterfully done — I was especially impressed with your review of Robert Coles' "The Moral Energy of the Young." It was truly a great article.

Again congratulations!

Marching Cardinal Finds Mistake in Time-line

Dear Mr. Routson:

Could it be? Has Towers magazine resorted to "revisionist history" in the 1847-1997 time-line, found on pages 26 and 27 of the Spring/Summer issue?

So the Cardinal marching band was formed by Gary Tirey in 1968? When I was a freshman in 1964,

From the cover of the October, 1965 Towers:

Dawn Armstrong Farrell '67, left, models the new marching band uniforms while Arthur Motycka, band director, presents another to Naomi Weinert '66, band president.

Arthur Motycka was the new band director, and he selected me to be lead snare drummer in the percussion section of the Cardinal marching band. Our drum majors were Dale Fisher and Jerry Bishop (please see photos of band personnel on pages 64 and 65 of 1965 Sybil). Mr. Motycka was an excellent trumpet player, and had been a studio musician in New York prior to coming to Otterbein. He gave new life to what had become an ailing band. Clever with names, he called the concert band the 'Symphony of Winds,' and also started an ensemble he named the 'Brass Choir.' I played percussion in all of them.

I remember getting new uniforms by my sophomore year. From page 139 of the 1966 Sybil, it's clear that the band had been rejuvenated: "The Cardinal Marching Band, seventy-eight strong, in West Point uniforms and red plumes, blazed onto the field for every home game. The fans took great pride in this revitalized group."

Although I left the band in the fall of 1967, I know that there was a Cardinal marching band under the direction of Arthur Motycka that year, because the 1968 Sybil is full of photos of the band and its director.

Revisionist history of the Cardinal marching band? I hope not.
Dave Thomas '69

Thanks for setting the record straight, and apologies to all involved with the marching band before 1968.

Correction is Corrected

Dear Mr. Routson:

You gave in to Mr. O'Brien a little too quickly on the issue of "an historical site." Both a and an are common and acceptable in this phrase. See, for example, The New Fowler's Modern English Usage, The American Heritage Dictionary of the English Language, and Merriam Webster's Collegiate Dictionary.

Personally, I prefer "an historical site," because it's easier to get out of my mouth.

As to "12 p. m." meaning "midnight," Mr. O'Brien is momentarily confused. At the stroke of noon, it becomes p.m., as your schedule had it. Sincerely,
Ed Daniels '47

Another Remembers Dr. Day

Dear Towers Editor,

Dr. Day deserved every accolade you mentioned. Only one fact was missing: her constant faith in God. I belonged to the WAA and Epsilon Kappa Tau the year she began wearing a small pin: a yoke.

To all who asked about it, she told of her partner, Jesus.

I, too, feel fortunate for her strong, loving influence during my Otter years.

I was also glad for the Dee Hoty update and picture! She and Jayne Ann Augspurger were the J.C.'s on the first floor of King Hall. An awesome duo (the frosh they had to herd were all shorter than they).

Problem: The guest lounge separated the dorm rooms from the bathroom. Solution: Install a wall and door over break. Hitch: First morning back in January, a sleepy Dee walked into the new addition, stepped back and said, "Hello, wall!"

Behind her in the hallway, I stifled my laugh until she successfully exited the door in the wall.

Regards,
Kathleen Ronan '75

Reader Wants to See Professors in Towers Magazine

Dear Sir,

Our daughter teaches in your beautiful college. She shows me every one of your lovely magazines which I love to read.

We have a grandson and a granddaughter who graduated from your excellent college. We attend all of your activities in your college.

I would like to see pictures and names of all your teachers and professors in the Towers some day.

We know so many of them because we met them in the college and /or when they were visiting our daughter's home.

A great lover and admirer of your college,

Before the Ondreys There Were the Barneses

The last issue of Towers contained a story about the Ondry family and, to the best of the editor's knowledge, they were the only family to have four children attending Otterbein at the same time. Mary Barnes Smith '35 kindly called to set the record straight. Robert and Margaret Barnes had four children all at Otterbein at the same time — and no twins in this family. Even more amazing, they had seven children graduate from Otterbein in all. The four that all shared a common year at Otterbein were Ruth Barnes Wilson '66, Ann Barnes Packer '65, Tom Barnes '64 and Virginia Barnes Lehman '63. Apparently, one family sending four children to Otterbein at the same time was considered unusual at that time too. The four were featured on the cover of the 1963 issue of Towers.

Patricia Russell-McCloud Speaks at Artist Series

In her speech "Celebrate the Differences," Patricia Russell-McCloud eschewed the melting pot image of America and likened diversity instead to a salad bowl with an intact variety of differences held together by a salad dressing of values, ethics and morals. Russell-McCloud spoke before 400 students and community members Sept. 26 as part of the Otterbein Artist Series.

"Difference doesn't mean defective," she said in her strong oratorical style.

Patricia Russell-McCloud

Affirmative action is designed to give a level playing field, she said. In her speech she also asserted that diversity is not just about minorities, stating "There is a responsibility of any majority group to acquaint its members with those who are different."

During the question and answer period, when asked how to ease the tension between races in the classroom, she said an understanding has to grow that "minority doesn't mean minor."

She suggested that while overcoming racial tensions is an uphill battle, minorities also have a responsibility of dissolving the "we" against "them" attitudes through active discussions, becoming involved in activities and partaking of events on campus. ■

Women's Basketball Preview

Seventh-year head coach Connie Richardson sends a Cardinal squad featuring a blend of seasoned experience and youth into the 1997-98 campaign.

Four starters, led by junior post Jen Burns, from Plain City, Ohio, return from last season's team, which finished 11-15, overall, and 6-12 in the OAC.

Burns, an honorable mention All-OAC selection last season, averaged 11.8 points and 7.7

rebounds a game. She ranked third in the conference for shooting, making 51.0 percent of her shots from the field.

Seniors Keri Trout (7.6 ppg., 4.9 rpg.), a post from Zanesville, Ohio, Julie Good (9.2 ppg., 5.2 rpg.), a forward from Kingston, Ohio, and Jaime Steffen (7.4 ppg., 2.8 rpg.), a guard from Louisville, Ohio, round out the list of returning starters.

Those four will be called upon to pick up their output due to the graduation loss of all-conference forward Jen Lambert, from Dalton, Ohio, who led her team in scoring (17.9 ppg.), rebounding (10.3 rpg.), steals (2.8 a game) and blocked shots (1.4 a game) last season.

Other letterwinners expected to contribute include senior forward Renae Bexfield, from Mt. Sterling, Ohio, and junior forward Angie Wilson, from Caldwell, Ohio; and sophomore guards Angie Haynes, from Belpre, Ohio, Jen Russell, from Richwood, Ohio, and Melissa McAlister, from Columbus.

Richardson, needing to find a replacement for guard Ali Davis (4.1 ppg., 3.7 apg.), from Kenton, Ohio, may use a freshman at point. Possible candidates include Kara Grishkat, from Pickerington, Ohio, and Holly

Williams, from Bucyrus, Ohio. Freshman Mandy Simmerman, a forward from Westerville, should see playing time.

Men's Basketball Preview

Veteran 26th-year head coach Dick Reynolds feels he has the right players in place to get Otterbein basketball back on track and competitive in the Ohio Athletic Conference (OAC).

The Cardinals return seven lettermen, including all five who were starting at the end of last season.

"Last season was a good coaching year even though we finished with a bad record," Reynolds says. Otterbein, starting three freshmen and two sophomores, wrapped up the 1996-97 season at 7-19 overall, 3-15 in the OAC.

Juniors Kevin Weakley, point guard, and Ryan Roston, forward, should provide steady leadership for this still-youthful team. Both honorable mention All-OAC picks, Weakley (15.9 ppg.), from Lewis Center, Ohio, and Roston (15.5 ppg.), from Galion, Ohio, led Otterbein in scoring.

Weakley averaged 6.0 assists and 2.1 steals an outing, second best in each category in the OAC last season. Roston, averaging 6.8 rebounds, ranked seventh in the conference.

Sophomores Jason Dutcher (9.8 ppg., 6.6 rpg.), a post from Columbus, Trevor Younkin (7.3 ppg., 3.4 rpg.), a post from Lockbourne, Ohio, and Tony Reall (7.4 ppg., 1.8

rpg.), a guard from Nashville, Tennessee, round out the starting lineup.

Others who could contribute include returning lettermen Andy Pentello, a senior guard from Columbus; John Damschroeder, a junior post from Columbus; and freshmen Scott Elliott, a swingman from Sunbury, Ohio, and Jake Larrison, a guard from Columbus.

"Win or lose," Reynolds says, "we have good people who have a real interest in basketball."

Stark Selected for Burger King College Football Scholarship

Senior offensive tackle Jeff Stark, from Bolivar, Ohio, has been selected as a 1997 Burger King College Football Scholarship award winner.

Stark, who maintains a 3.761 grade-point average in English, was scheduled to be honored at halftime at Homecoming Oct. 25.

Burger King will make a $10,000 donation in Stark's name to Otterbein's general scholarship fund.

Burger King, working with the National Football Foundation, will select 80 scholar-athletes, 20 from each football division, to receive this award. One player from each division will be selected to earn their school an additional $25,000.

In December, Burger King will announce its scholar-athlete of the year at the National Football Foundation dinner and will donate a $100,000 scholarship endowment to the award winner's school.

Stark remains in the running for an $18,000 post-graduate scholarship from the National Football Foundation and the College Hall of Fame. He plans to teach English in high school and coach wrestling and football. ■

As student, teacher, administrator, and retiree, Lawrence P. "Pete" Fields '54 has never been far from either Central Ohio or baseball for very long. "Play ball" has been a constant in his life, first as player, then as umpire, for some 50 years, most of these in or near his home town of Worthington.

An African-American at Otterbein in the early 50's, Fields says he had little difficulty adjusting to the predominantly white campus because his home community and high school also were mostly white. But his college years were not without reminders of prejudice and discrimination in the wider society. For example, when he toured with the Men's Glee Club, his housing arrangements often differed from the others. A day on tour usually ended with a concert in a church. More often than not, Fields was assigned, along with the choir's director, Professor L. Lee Shackson, to the home of the church minister to spend the night, avoiding possible objections from church members to hosting an African-American.

He credits Professor Shackson, History Professor Harold Hancock, and Athletic Director and football coach Harry Ewing with making lasting contributions to his life during and after college. He majored in Physical Education and Biological Sciences and completed a minor in History – all with high school coaching as a career goal. In addition to singing in the Glee Club, Fields played both football and baseball. He was also a member of Pi Kappa Phi, known on campus as "The Country Club."

His student draft deferment ended with graduation, so he entered the armed services for a two-year stint. On his return, he discovered that for a young African-American to secure a baseball coaching job he would have to move to the South. Wanting to stay in Central Ohio, he went to work first for the Columbus Recreation Department, then began a 32-year career with the Columbus Public Schools – 12 years as a fifth- and sixth-grade teacher and 20 years as an administrator working with government grants. He retired in 1990.

Giving up his goal of coaching did not mean he gave up involvement with baseball. Indeed, starting soon after leaving Otterbein, he took up a "parallel career" as baseball umpire, one that continues some 39 years later. He has umpired both high school and college games, including OSU games at the Division I level and "a couple of Division III world series." Because he is one of the oldest umpires still working in Central Ohio, his colleagues have begun calling him "Dad."

Except for the time in the armed service and a brief residency in Columbus, Fields has always lived in Worthington. He and his wife, Rosanna, an artist and former teacher of commercial art in the Columbus Public Schools, have three children, one of whom, Brenda, will graduate from Otterbein next year and follow her parents into school teaching.

Last year, Fields gathered socially with other Otterbein football players from his era, and they so enjoyed themselves that they plan to do so regularly. Taking their name from the kind of helmets they wore in those days, they called themselves the "Leather Helmet Group." Go Cardinals!

Back When Football Players Didn't Need Face Masks: The Leather Helmet Group plans to gather regularly to reacquaint and remember old times.

Richard Glass is the Man Behind the (Cross)Words by Ken Goodrich

RICHARD GLASS '55

Reflecting on a life-long infatuation with words, Richard Glass '55, creator of the Otterbein Sesquicentennial crossword puzzles, says he has been "blessed with a facility for language." And he credits Otterbein with nurturing and encouraging this facility.

Glass's affection for Otterbein may seem surprising in view of the fact that he was a student here for only one year, 1952-53. After a freshman year at another small Ohio college, he transferred for a year to Otterbein. Then, lured by an appointment as "student pastor," he returned to his first college to graduate with concentrations in English and languages. Yet neither that college nor the several others at which he studied in subsequent years now seem as important to him as Otterbein. Professor Anderson's course in the Russian novel and Professor Wilson's course in New Testament Greek were particularly important to him. Otterbein not only reinforced a growing passion for words and writing; it convinced him that learning is a life-long endeavor. His need to keep learning has resulted (so far) in a Master of Divinity degree from Dayton's United Theological Seminary, two years of doctoral study at the Cleveland Psychiatric Institute, study at Emory University in church business administration, and a diploma in accounting—not to mention a self-taught facility with computers acquired since he retired in 1993.

Glass's interest in writing continued through 37 years of service to churches in Canton, Cleveland, and Bucyrus as a Methodist minister in the East Ohio Conference. During his years as a minister, he wrote more than sermons, including the "books" (texts) for two musical compositions – an oratorio, "David," by the Hungarian composer, Leslie Kondorosay, and a work based on the Book of Ruth. From 1987 to 1993 his weekly column in the Bucyrus Telegraph, "View from My Window," provided readers with commentary on current events and profiles of interesting people.

Glass's work with words and language continues in retirement, worked into a schedule that includes two part-time jobs. An article in Sacramental Life reported on the return of weekly communion to mainline Protestant denominations, and two human interest articles, one of which appeared in Towers, featured the founder and twice-president of Otterbein, Bishop Lewis Davis.

Retirement also has permitted Glass a new and unusual outlet for his love of words – creating cross-word puzzles. (He prefers writing them to solving them – the New York Times cross-words "are too difficult to enjoy.") Readers of Towers will have seen and, he hopes, solved six of his Sesquicentennial puzzles that appeared between 1994 and 1997. Using a software program called "Xword Creator" with his home computer, Glass is at work on a puzzle series based on the life of Jesus using only words found in the Bible. This has proved especially challenging, he says, because the Bible contains a remarkably limited vocabulary.

Pleased with the reception his puzzles have received by Otterbein alumni, Glass has agreed to write additional puzzles for Towers. Good news indeed.

PROFILE

'75 Alumna Keeps on Truckin' with Maggie by Ken Goodrich

Mary Lynn "Mem" Miller Westfall '75 and Maggie, the best of friends and coworkers, serve together on the board of directors of a non-profit corporation in Delaware, Ohio. What makes this worthy of mention is that Maggie has four feet and a wagging tail. She is, in fact, a "service dog" who enables Westfall, afflicted with multiple sclerosis for some 15 years, to carry on a vigorous personal and professional life from her wheel chair.

The non-profit corporation in question is a regional affiliate of Canine Companions for Independence, an organization that trains and provides, free of charge, companion dogs and service dogs to the disabled and the isolated elderly. Westfall reports that she and Maggie "graduated" four years ago from the Delaware program.

Not long before, she had resigned a longtime science teaching position at Triad High School in Champaign County because of increasing challenges to her state of health, a decision she says she might well have been spared had Maggie then been at her side. In 1993, now assisted at every turn by Maggie, Westfall resumed work with children and schools in a two-year grant-funded position as education specialist with the Champaign County Soil and Water Conservation District. Today she owns and operates a cosmetics franchise from her home on a farm near Kingscreek, Ohio. Maggie is her (usually) silent partner.

Growing up in Northern Ohio, Westfall chose Otterbein over the University of Michigan because Otterbein combined friendly size with good science programs. Professor George Phinney became a major influence in her life. Also important was "Dean Van" (Joanne Van Sant, special consultant for Institutional Advancement), with whom Westfall became even closer in the years after graduation. Perhaps the most life-changing experience she had while enrolled at Otterbein was a semester spent with Chapman College's "World Campus Afloat." This ship-board educational program furthered her interest in ecology and the environment, and persuaded her that her interest in the life sciences needed to be wedded to involvement with people. Her later decisions to become a science teacher and earn a master's degree in Education from the University of Dayton undoubtedly also had much to do with this insight.

Westfall has other warm memories of her Otterbein days. She was active in her sorority, Tau Epsilon Mu, and has many friends among her former classmates. She was elected Homecoming Queen in her junior year. And not least, she met her future husband, Michael, at Otterbein, also in the class of 1975.

In 1993, soon after acquiring Maggie, Westfall was appointed by Governor Voinovich to the Governor's Council on People with Disabilities. This State affiliate of the President's Committee on Employment of People with Disabilities, works statewide on ways to assist the disabled to participate more fully and equitably in society. In 1996 Governor Voinovich re-appointed her to a second three-year term. For the last three years Westfall has chaired the Council's Access Concerns Committee. She describes with enthusiasm the current work of the Committee with gasoline station owners to find ways to assist motorists with disabilities in refueling their cars.

Westfall lives an active life with verve and high spirits - one that others have called "inspirational."

Many Changes Made to Library

The Courtright Memorial Library now boasts one stop checkout and easier access to videos following a reorganization this summer to make the facility even more user friendly. Library Director Lois Szudy reports that videos, which were previously housed in the Instructional Media Center (IMC), are now shelved with books by subject and there is a single circulation desk for all materials. Videos must be checked out for use within or outside the library. Video playback units now will be available on the first floor as well as on the lower level.

The complete music collection has been moved to the lower level so scores and recordings are easily accessible in one place. The library continues to expand the third-floor curriculum collection and is incorporating more multi-media materials for education majors.

The reorganization of the library and IMC will enhance patron service by providing one point of contact for collection information and enable the IMC to focus on instructional technology support to the academic program. The IMC continues to offer design and production services for the creation of visual, photographic, audio and computer-based instructional materials.

In addition to this summer's reorganization, the carpet was replaced on the second and third floors of the library. This was done in response to problems which occurred after these floors were recarpeted in July 1994. Almost immediately some staff and others who visited the library began reporting an unpleasant odor and illnesses. The majority of complaints were about eye irritations and sore throats.

The College did everything possible to remedy the situation. Multiple air tests were conducted but nothing conclusive was discovered. Experts were consulted and several courses of action were pursued such as turning up the heat to "bake" out the smell. Different cleaners also were used on the carpet. The duct work in the library was cleaned and the air handling system was upgraded to improve air flow in the building.

Szudy says the smell and effects dissipated slightly over time but never disappeared. She describes it as "walking into a wall of unpleasant odor." She adds that it was very frustrating not to be able to determine the exact nature of the problem.

This year College officials decided to replace the carpet and Szudy says there has been an immediate improvement. The new carpet has no pad and was adhered to the floor with an "environmentally friendly" hypoallergenic glue.

The carpeting on the main floor and the lower level will remain in place. It also was installed in July 1994 but has a different pad and was adhered with a different glue than the carpet on the upper floors. Szudy says that carpeting on the first floor or lower level was never considered to be a problem.

After three years of discussion, tests, numerous cleanings and other efforts, Szudy declares, "The problem is solved."

The unveiling of the plaque at right highlighted the 25th anniversary celebration of Courtright Memorial Library. Recognizing English Professor Robert Price H'60, History Professor Harold Hancock H'69 and Library Director John Becker '50, the plaque was made possible through the support of Vernon Pack '50 and Mary B. Thomas '28.

FRIENDS of the LIBRARY FORMED

In 1996 a group of individuals devoted to the Courtright Memorial Library brought murder and mayhem to the Library, and in 1998 they will be bringing the stars — or at least their signatures — to campus.

Last year the group held its first event — a fundraiser featuring a murder mystery. The 113 attendees toured the library collecting clues and trying to solve the whodunit.

And now the group has become an official campus organization known as The Otterbein Friends of the Library. The group had its first meeting June 21, 1997 during Alumni Weekend with eleven people attending. Since that first meeting, 29 individuals have either renewed or joined as new members as of Sept. 1, 1997.

Following that meeting, the group also enjoyed the Courtright Memorial Library's 25th anniversary party which was highlighted by the unveiling of a plaque recognizing English Professor Robert Price H'60, History Professor Harold Hancock H'69 and Library Director John Becker '50. The plaque presentation was made possible through the support of Vernon Pack '50 and Mary B. Thomas '28 who made a donation to sesquicentennial programs to honor those men.

Szudy mentions that the idea of forming a Friends of the Library was first proposed by Becker in 1980. She has been working with the idea since 1990 before getting it off to a start last year.

"The Friends can help the library in many ways," Szudy explains.

"While monetary support is important and very appreciated, Friends can also help by volunteering their time, suggesting and designing programs, and through attendance at library events."

The Friends of the Library is taking on a big fundraising project for next spring. With the advent of the automated catalog, the old card catalogs were pushed out of sight—but not out of mind.

The cards were mailed to the authors or to prominent people mentioned in the books with letters asking them to sign and return the cards to the library. So far the library has received signatures from such notables as Robert Redford, Al Pacino, Maya Angelou, Gerald Ford, Gloria Steinem, Ray Bradbury, Ray Charles, Tom Clancy, Garrison Keillor, James Earl Jones, John Jakes, Robert Ludlum, James Michener, Chuck Yeager, Nora Ephron, children's author Eric Carle, and many others. Terry McMillan even sent a signed book.

During Alumni Weekend, a party will be held and the cards, books and other items given to the library will be sold in a silent auction. Szudy hopes also to involve the students in some sort of pre-auction before they leave for the summer.

The Friends of the Library welcomes volunteers and new members. Phil Barnhart volunteered to be the group's secretary and Szudy will serve as treasurer. The group still needs individuals to serve as president and vice president. Barnhart is collecting information for a newsletter which Melissa Lafayette Dardinger '95 will edit and distribute. Anyone interested in joining, becoming an officer, or who has information for the newsletter can contact Szudy at Otterbein College Library, One Otterbein College, Westerville, OH 43081. ■

Preserving the Land

Dr. Prindle is Studying "Suburban Sprawl" and its Effects on Farmland

by Tuesday Beerman Trippier '89 and Roger Routson

"America, America, God shed his grace on thee..."

"This is our history." Allen Prindle on his farm in Northern Delaware County. Below, Prindle's well-tended flowers front the surrounding fields.

When you hear the sweet refrains from "America, the Beautiful," you feel something rouse inside you. It's not about patriotism or government, not about national boundaries, certainly not about politics. It's about land—this beautiful land in which we live.

We are indeed a vast nation. Our United States, rich with natural resources, abounds with millions of acres of fertile soils prime for food production. But sometimes when something is in abundance, it can be taken for granted.

Economics Associate Professor Allen Prindle takes little for granted. From his 1857 farmhouse in Northern Delaware County and the pristine fields surrounding it, he surveys around him a world largely unchanged in the last hundred years. It's still too far from the big city (Columbus) to be chopped up into developments, to have fallen to the phenomenon known as "suburban sprawl." But he doesn't have to drive far from his sanctuary to see it. And he is concerned with what he sees.

On a crisp September morning covered with cloudless blue skies, the pastoral setting of his historic brick farmhouse seems a natural setting for Prindle, who himself grew up on a dairy farm in Wisconsin. The grounds are meticulously kept, the home restored (it is listed on the National Register of Historic Places) and the outbuildings well preserved. It becomes immediately apparent that Prindle and his family—wife Nancy and two sons, Justin, 16, and Edward 21—care deeply about the land, the community and its history.

It's still too far from the big city (Columbus) to be chopped up into developments, to have fallen to the phenomenon known as "suburban sprawl." But he doesn't have to drive

It becomes immediately apparent that Prindle and his family—wife Nancy and two sons, Justin, 16, and Edward 21—care deeply about the land, the community and its history.

It is this caring spirit that has driven Prindle to become involved in public issues in Delaware County and in Ohio. Prindle became actively involved in many land issues in his county. Through his research, Prindle discovered an astounding 120,000 acres per year of Ohio land, defined as farmland, is converted to other uses each year. This fact alone has captured Prindle's attention and motivated him into action. He has served on a Rural Zoning Commission for several years and his sabbatical leave in Spring of 1995 involved researching programs of farmland preservation in other states. He was also asked by a 21-member Ohio Farmland Preservation Task Force, appointed by Governor Voinovich, to submit two reports on farmland usage, tracing changes in land use and giving an assessment of the current situation.

"Information is power," says Prindle. "I am able to use my economic skills and teaching background and a large amount of research to make a difference in these land use issues."

To illustrate his point about what is happening to farmland, and particularly in Delaware County where about 2000 acres per year of farmland has been converted in recent years, Prindle conducted a driving tour around the northern part of the county. The tour meandered through back roads, crossing the Scioto River near Prindle's 14 acres. Along the way, he points out tidy farms where corn and soybeans are the predominant crops, along with dairy farms that have remained in the same family for over a century.

"These are caring farmers and it shows," he remarks, pointing to the well-kept fields. "These are farmers who intend to be farmers. This stretch of land is special because the owners have invested in their farm business and have not sold land lot by lot."

In other words, this part of Delaware County has avoided suburban sprawl, for now. Suburban sprawl happens when farmers sell off plots of land to families or developers who are moving out of the cities or other suburbs. This phenomenon happens for two reasons. First, farmers may have financial woes. By selling off an acre here and two acres there, they are able to support their families. Secondly, a lack of proper development and care of metropolitan areas can cause crime and other city problems—and cause families to migrate to rural areas.

"What is happening in Delaware County is the population is expanding rapidly and the county has had to cope with the consequences: high demands for more and better schools, improved roads, expanded services, better security, et cetera," explains Prindle. "While new development adds tax revenues to townships and county budgets, the growth also adds additional costs. For instance," he says, pointing to a new five-acre lot that was formerly part of the surrounding cornfield, "The tax collected from this site is now higher than it was when it was a farm field. But the expenses—the community's expenses—are also higher than they were because it now supports a family with a residence, instead of a field of corn. So the question that I've been asking community officials in Delaware County is, 'All right, it is a given that revenues are going higher as people move in, but expenses are, too. Which is growing faster?'"

Prindle points out the economics of the question is obviously his bias. He explains if expenses are growing faster than revenues, then public officials have a responsibility to say "Let's slow down. Let's be sure that when new development comes in to this community, it pays its way."

"Otherwise," he says, "We will have a bankrupt community in the future, a lower standard of living in

Should We Be Concerned?

So why should the general public be concerned about land use and farmland protection? Prindle cited several reasons, including:

Food for our future—For every acre of farmland that is being converted to industrial or residential use, that is an acre of land that is not productive for our national—and international—food supply. Our agricultural resources are our largest exporting product.

Use of public monies—Dense development is more efficient than sprawl development. Preserving good soils and productive farmland in some areas and using other, less productive soils for residential development makes more sense. Then the cost of supplying services to that community—water, electric lines, adequate roads, police/fire protection, etc.—can be done more efficiently.

A sense of heritage—Providing a sense of history for community raises awareness and community pride.

Emotional Value—The popular term in the 90's is green space. The aesthetic beauty of green space makes a drive in the country mentally healthy and refreshing.

this community, or we will have less environmental quality—all of which are real costs. Some of these costs can be hidden for a long time by pushing them off to future generations. We must find the balance.”

His point becomes clear as we drive through the small rural village of Radnor and out again into the countryside. Suddenly the landscape is dotted by new homes—all of which sit side by side or one in front of the other in sections of cornfields or soybean fields. The trend, he explains, is to sell off just over five acre lots because sales of more than five acres avoid the county bureaucracy. Unfortunately, he says, many times these lots end up being “too small to farm and too big to mow.”

Prindle points out his window to a field of soybeans and says, “Some officials will look at this field and say ‘Why isn’t this developed yet? This is just an empty field.’

“This field is supporting somebody. It is not just empty.”

Prindle says a problem with the system is that it does not value the land at its potential. “Today’s market prices only reflect what that plot of land is worth today, not whether it can be a useful food-producing field in 75 years. The economic term for that is the reservation price,” he says. Another issue is that the potential for development becomes a self-fulfilling prophecy. Prindle explains: “If a farmer believes his land is going to be developed in the near future, he won’t replace the drainage system he needs or put a new roof on the barn. If it [development] is expected to happen, then it will.”

In cooperation with the Delaware County Extension Office, Dr. Prindle helped plan a bus tour to Maryland and Pennsylvania for county commissioners, county employees, township trustees, and others. Fifty-one interested Ohioans, including six members of the Ohio Farmland Preservation Task Force, visited Franklin and Lancaster counties in Pennsylvania and also Howard and Carroll counties in Maryland. These four counties are leaders in conducting programs to preserve farmland.

“It provided a powerful message for the county commissioners,” says Prindle. “It was truly an exciting process. It was outstanding in terms of creating awareness in Ohio and a sense that there are some options and that we need to get started.”

Reporters from the Columbus Dispatch and the Delaware Gazette accompanied the tour and Business First of Columbus wrote a story about the tour and interviewed several Delaware County participants. Prindle attributes the rise in the level of public awareness (in Central Ohio) to these issues to a series by the Dispatch entitled “The Price of Progress.” He hopes that people were able to see their own communities in a different way after reading the articles.

Some critics of the farmland preservation movement contend that this issue is a scare tactic for those afraid of development and growth. Some, particularly those in the building industry, claim it is a phony argument. Dr. Prindle responds to these critics this way: "These individuals are attempting to narrow the focus to minimize the issues, but our statistics are well-founded. Many people know we can't continue to abandon cities and displace farmers forever. Some recognize public money is being used to reward some areas and penalize others. Many people are asking public leaders to fix the rules related to land use, before things get worse."

Prindle says young people are concerned, too. A sixth grader wrote a letter to the editor of the Delaware Gazette recently, expressing his concerns. He stated: "We must conserve our farmland or else we will have houses, weeds, and no land for food."

Prindle's sabbatical leave this fall will allow him to learn more about what other states are doing, including an idea called a land trust. "An example of a land trust would be the Nature Conservancy," he explains. "It is a non-profit organization that has the responsibility to protect some natural resource in some way. Normally they do that either by outright purchase, or purchase or donation of easements."

His hope is that a program like a land trust would allow farmers the option to donate an easement so they know their farm would always be farmland, even if it is not farmed by their family.

This fall Prindle will also have the chance to work with a new endowed chair at The Ohio State University who will deal with rural/urban interface. "It will be a great opportunity to work with someone who has a national reputation."

Prindle and many others are pleased that the Governor appointed a Task Force on Farmland Preservation. Last June the task force made a series of recommendations including the creation of an Office of Farmland Preservation in the Ohio Department of Agriculture, legislative authorization for state and local governments to implement protection programs, and new strategies to encourage reinvestment and re-development in Ohio's urban areas.

It is hard not to become impassioned as Prindle speaks about these issues. It is obvious that he cares about these communities and wants to protect them from haphazard, unplanned growth. He points out that Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Iowa have more than 50 percent of land area in prime soils. He says, "What we have is a unique environmental resource—probably unique in the world."

"This is our history," says Prindle. "We ought to be proud of it. We ought to protect it. If we don't, it won't be there for the next generation." ■

Some Facts on Farmland Use

These facts are taken from a fact sheet prepared by Allen Prindle for the Ohio Farmland Preservation Task Force with support from the American Farmland Trust (February, 1997)

- Harvested land globally is about half as much as in 1950; now about 0.3 acres per person.
- Projected to decline to 0.22 acres per person by 2020.
- Nationally, farmland loss was 1.4 million acres per year from 1982 to 1992.
- Four states have more than 50% of land area in prime soils: Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, and Ohio.
- Farmland losses (from 1954 to 1992) were: Michigan, 39%; Ohio, 24%; Wisconsin, 24%; Indiana, 17%; and Illinois, 7%.
- From 1982 to 1992, Ohio's land in farms declined 120,000 acres per year.
- From 1954 to 1992, several Ohio counties experienced more than a 50% loss of existing farmlands due to urban influences, including Ashtabula, Clermont, Cuyahoga, Franklin, Geauga, Hamilton, Lake, Mahoning, Medina, Portage, and Summit.
- Ohio's harvested cropland has declined from 46% of the state's land area in 1900 to 37% in 1992.
- More than 43% of farm operators are over 55 years old. Only 13% are less than 35.
- For every 1% increase in population, urban land use increased 4.7% from 1960 to 1990. This compares to a national average of 2.3%. New urban development in Ohio has seen low density.

THE GREAT POTTY PROTEST

photos by Roger Roulson

by Tuesday Beerman Trippier '89

“We joke about it now, but when it was going on, we were dead serious,” says Paul Reiner '68 about the infamous Potty

Protest of this past spring and summer. The protest helped keep his business, Acorn Farms, from literally going down the toilet.

Reiner, president and owner of Acorn Farms and Oakland Nursery, took on local government when it threatened to make his farm the site of a new sewage treatment plant. Located in southern Delaware County, Acorn utilizes more than 400 acres in producing everything from petunias to 6 foot shade trees.

When it appeared that efforts such as petitions and appeals to Delaware County Commissioners were not going to avert their plans to purchase some of his property, Reiner hit upon a novel idea—line the road running through his farm with toilets.

'68 Grad's Unique Protest Flush with Success

According to Reiner, as soon as the toilets went up, the local television news crews showed up almost immediately. Then Associated Press and United Press International picked it up and, before he knew it, the story went national. “We had radio talk shows from all around the nation calling us wanting to know who was crazy enough to line a field with toilets,” says Reiner, laughing. His laugh betrays him, revealing his boyish mischievousness, a youthful zeal that seems to be infectious to those around him.

His “protest in porcelain” even netted Reiner six minutes on The Today Show and a spot as “Picture of the Week” on Dateline NBC, as well as continued coverage by almost all of the local news media.

Phone calls from all across the country were coming in, not only calls of support to Acorn Farms, but calls of protest to the Delaware County Commissioners.

“They had a lot of pressure. It was firing up,” says Reiner. “People were going down the road past the farm honking their horns, flashing their lights.”

The first time that Reiner got wind of the commissioners actually picking his location was when they came to see him about 14 months ago and said that Acorn was their second and third choices because they had lost the battle with Westerville over the first site. He remembers, “I told them ‘That’s interesting, but I can tell you right now that it is not for sale—at any cost. You can forget it.’” However, Reiner recalls being reassured that his business would not be jeopardized.

Reiner’s issues with the county’s choice of locating a sewage treatment plant on his Worthington-Galena Road property were many: not only would it destroy a business and put more than 80 people out of work, but it would also jeopardize the preservation of farmland and greenspace in the area—an area already quickly becoming developed. And, as Reiner pointed out, the farm simply can’t be replicated because of its location with convenient access to the freeway, excellent soil quality found in the valley, and a unique rainwater recycling system they worked to create.

“If we were a manufacturing plant we could find another site and rebuild. But this cannot be duplicated,” said Reiner. He argued with the commissioner’s claims that the location was just open fields and undeveloped land.

“This is as developed as anything you’ll ever get,” he says. “When you think about how we operate and how we recycle, this is tremendously developed. A huge amount of effort goes into the development of these fields. If you stop and consider the cost per square foot spent on some of these acres, it's more intense than a condominium project."

The operation was started by Reiner in 1970 to help supply Oakland Nursery, the family business begun in 1940 by Reiner's father, which was having problems procuring necessary plants. Over the years, Acorn grew from its original 47 acres to its present size as Central Ohio's largest nursery. The operation ships its quality materials to thousands of landscape and development companies throughout the Midwest.

"It was actually gravity that made this valley an ideal site," explains Reiner of Delaware County's desire of his low-lying land. "The county commissioners claimed they wanted 25 acres, but we knew they would eventually want 50. But the land they wanted was the heart of our operation. Many of our acres are out on tangents, on leased property, but the land they wanted would have destroyed our business."

The real call for action for Reiner came in February of this year when he learned that his property had indeed become the prime target. He heard that at a Delaware County Planning Meeting, the commissioners announced that the future site for the sewer plant would be on Acorn Farms. So, without hesitation, Reiner joined the committee. "I figured I had a real interest since they were going to drive me out of business," he says.

Realizing he needed to act now or 20 years of hard work would go, er, down the drain, Reiner and his crew set to work. He says, "We started a flier campaign, asking the folks in the neighborhood if they would rather have sewage and sludge or trees and shrubs. We went door-to-door with fliers, then with petitions. We then began a public relations campaign including the newspapers."

Reiner credits the people on the farm with a lot of the hard work—they hit the streets with fliers and petitions. "My wife also did a tremendous amount of door-to-door work. She was the best known person in the area for about three months," he laughs.

One strategy in the Acorn campaign was having the commissioners out to tour the property to actually show them the value of the land and how the operation would be destroyed if they did what they wanted to do.

"But all of this time I kept thinking to myself that this wasn't really going to do it," Reiner says. Inspiration apparently hit one time when nature called. "I looked down and said, that's it! It might just be crazy enough to work. I had my wife call up a demolition company. That's where we got the first 20 or so toilets. Then the neighbors began to give us toilets. Then a couple of firms that sell toilets gave us some more. We had nurseries sending us toilets that were already planted with geraniums, trees and shrubs. At the end we had about 80 some toilets!"

And they worked. With all the negative feedback coming in from around the country, the commissioners found a home for the sewage treatment plant on a site which is west of Route 71 at the intersection of Powerline Road.

"I appreciate what they have to do" Reiner says. "I know they needed to complete this project. But they have to consider the consequences of the place they want to take."

Reiner, who is a member of the Otterbein Board of Trustees and is actively involved with The "O" Club, reflects on the protest and feels that people were behind his campaign mainly because the county's plan was just wrong. He says many people were sympathetic because it was just the idea of the government coming in and shutting down a business that was hard to take. "It wasn't so much the sewage plant," he recalls, "as it was the thinking of the government destroying someone else's livelihood."

But Reiner and his crew have not started celebrating yet. "We were going to have a potty-smashing party, but until we either see the ground work being done on the new site or the purchase of the land is complete and all of the engineering has been done, we are holding off," explains Reiner. As one of his favorite quotes by Yogi Berra goes, "It ain't over 'til it's over." ■

Acorn Farms was started by Paul Reiner in 1970 and is Central Ohio's largest nursery, serving thousands of landscape and development companies throughout the Midwest.

Memories to last a lifetime.

The opportunity to perform in such musical legendary places as Salzburg, Vienna, and Prague. And at such a young age! How did it come about that 43 young Kinderchor Chamber Choir singers plus 29 adults took off for the dizzying heights of Europe?

The Kinderchor European tour began with a conversation and a dream shared by Brent '69 and Amy Chivington '69, associate professor of music and director of Kinderchor. The challenges were clear—where to visit, how long a trip for young singers would be practical, and how to pay for this musical adventure.

Fortunately, other Kinderchor members and friends were willing to help make the trip a reality. Herb and Barb Hetzer, of Hetzer Tours & Charters, helped plan the itinerary and arrange performance venues. Herb was Amy's high school band director, and now is an international tour agent. Dr. and Mrs. Mel-lar Davis '74 offered to help financially support Kinderchor. Davis helped open the door to the corporate sponsorship of Rhone-Poulenc Rorer Pharmaceutical Company for a Chamber Choir benefit concert at the internationally renowned Mozarteum in Salzburg. The proceeds would benefit the young cancer patients at the Salzburger Kinderkrebshilfe, a children's hospital in Salzburg.

Community support was gathered through an ad campaign for business and personal greetings placed in the Kinderchor concert program. The Chamber Choir members chose to raise additional funds with a candy and sausage sale and through performances, including a Kinderchor European Benefit Concert. Grace Evangelical Lutheran Church hosted the spring performance, and Terry McCandless, adjunct faculty member in the Department of Music and organist at the church, helped with expenses and hiring of a Baroque string ensemble. The following are bits and pieces from the trip written by Amy Chivington.

Bright and early on Thursday, June 19, seventy-two travelers gathered to check-in at Port Columbus International Airport to begin our trip to Munich. After a short stop in Atlanta, we were off to Germany. Our first day and night blended together through a haze of conversations, card games, short naps, and movies enroute. We arrived in Munich at 9:30 a.m., Munich time, and began to enjoy our first day of alpine sights. We stopped in the village of Rattenberg, known for its beautiful Austrian crystal, and crossed Lake Cheimsee to visit "crazy" King Ludwig II's Herrenchiemsee Palace.

The children enjoyed the Hellbrunn Palace and the 16th Century Waterworks in Salzburg. The Archbishop definitely had a sense of humor. The choristers sat at the outdoor dining table the Archbishop used to entertain his guests. They were enjoying the view, and suddenly through the seats came sprays of water. We all learned quickly to beware of spraying water throughout the visit to the Waterworks.

The children and I had a new experience in rehearsal in the beautiful Mozarteum. The windows were opened and the birds in the surrounding trees sang their songs with us. We all enjoyed our added vocalists provided by Mother Nature.

The Mozarteum concert was very special. The Kinderchor Chamber Choir shared an international program, and sang in German for Schubert's "An Die Musik." The choir featured Nolan's, "I'll Lend You for Awhile," a composition with a text of consolation for families who have faced serious illness or loss. A gala reception for the choir was hosted by the Mozarteum and the Kinderkrebshilfe, and we truly ended the evening with songs in our hearts.

On our first Sunday morning, we sang at the Franziskanerkirche for 9 a.m. mass. To enter the church, we walked through a wooden door built during the Crusades. The Chamber Choir stood across the cathedral from the loft organ and Dr. Nolan, our accompanist. As we sang during the mass, the glorious sound rolled through the cathedral. Through the service, our audience especially enjoyed Nolan's "Ave Maria," the spiritual "Get On Board Little Children" and "Amazing Grace." It was very memorable to hear the Schubert "Mass in G" sung by the cathedral choir accompanied by an orchestra during this visit, and realize that every Sunday in this church the choral performance of a mass with orchestra is a reality.

Through the Danube Valley, past lush vineyards and through small villages, we enjoyed the bus ride to Vienna. We stopped at the Melk Abbey, visited the library with its Renaissance manuscripts, and then sang in the cathedral. Again the choir was surrounded by beautiful music and art.

Very special opportunities awaited us during our time in Vienna. We visited the Pensionistenheim Schmelz for a reception and concert. This was a residence for senior citizens through the week. On the weekends they returned to their families. We found a lively and receptive audience that made delicious pastries for us at the Pensionistenheim. When the choir sang Schubert's "An Die Musik," the audience sang along. They also joined us for "Amazing Grace," in English. We took a day trip to the resort town of Baden and presented an outdoor concert for the community. Baden is known for its healing waters, and summer concert season.

The final stop on our journey was Prague in the Czech Republic. We enjoyed the sights in the old and new city areas, dating back to the ninth century. We learned that the Charles Bridge crossing the Moldau River, is a haven for street merchants and artists. We met a delightful accordion player as we crossed this Bridge who played a Czech song for us.

In Prague we sang beneath the huge statue of "Jan Hus." Even in the blistering heat, the Chamber Choir sang beautifully. Perhaps we looked forward to our last night's celebration in a village just outside Prague. There, members of a Prague ballet troupe performed folk dances for us and instrumentalists accompanied them.

The trip took hours and weeks of time and the cooperation and support of so many friends, and yet it was over in the blink of an eye. Everyone had been healthy and happy throughout the trip, including three grandmothers who traveled with us. We watched as the children did finally sleep on the plane ride home, and Bill Longcamp, a Kinderchor parent piped up, "When do we go again, next year?" ■

Otterbein, the Telephone, and You

The scenario plays out nearly every night in most American households: you sit down to dinner when the phone rings with yet another telemarketer trying to sell you something. Eager to proceed with your meal, you either politely listen to the salesperson's pitch, try to conclude the call as quickly as possible, or register your annoyance and abruptly terminate the call. You silently seethe as you return to your dinner, hoping that you can conclude your dinner in peace.

"Junk calls," like junk mail, are seldom welcome additions to your household routine. But for years the telephone has been growing in importance as a way for companies to interact directly with you, the customer. The growing cost of postage is making direct mail less appealing to companies. A response rate of only 2% is considered good for direct mail. But as long distance phone costs diminish, the ability for a marketer to speak directly with a customer becomes more cost-effective. Hence, the growing use of the telephone as a means of reaching a consumer.

In recent years, thousands of non-profit charities have also adopted the use of telemarketing as a means of communicating with their past and prospective donors. Today, nearly all colleges and universities use the telephone as a means of reaching their alumni and friends. Like their for-profit brethren, colleges and universities have found it to be far more efficient to contact a graduate by phone than by direct mail.

At Otterbein, over 70% of donations to our annual Otterbein Fund come from our phonathon efforts, as compared to less than 15% from direct mail methods. Last year there were 4,324 donors to the Otterbein Fund, and of that number 3,041 made their gift to the College as a result of our phone solicitations!

But it is important for you to understand how our Otterbein Fund phone solicitation differs from the scores of telemarketing calls you receive each year. First, we always notify you in advance of a call through a post-card or letter. We believe this is a courtesy you deserve. Second, we are not trying to sell you anything at a profit to us. Rather, we are attempting to help meet the annual operating expenses of the College. Since most people make charitable donations of some type, we are contacting you in hopes that some of your philanthropic dollars can help keep your Alma Mater financially sound. Third, our calls help us update your alumni records so that we can continue to keep you informed of issues and events at the College through our mailings such as Towers magazine. You are a member of the Otterbein Family, and sharing in the growth, and, yes, maintenance of the College is an important role you can play.

So when representatives of Otterbein College call you at home some evening, we hope you will view that call differently than the traditional "cold call" of the telemarketing company. Your education at Otterbein provided the knowledge, skills, and experiences that, in part, helped shape your career and your life. The Otterbein Fund gives you an opportunity to help others realize that same benefit while contributing to the value of your own degree. And in addition to the benefits you give the College and the students, you help yourself through a tax deduction!

Best of all, you're contributing to an institution that continues to achieve an ever-growing academic reputation which reflects positively upon you as a graduate.

Otterbein Fund Facts

- Total income to the Otterbein Fund last year: $543,950
- Number of donors: 4,324
- Percent of alumni contributing to Otterbein Fund: 31%
- Most effective method of solicitation: Fall Phonathon

Gifts of Stock to Help the Otterbein Fund

Recent stock market gains provide an excellent reason to make a gift of stock. While many people equate the Otterbein Fund with cash gifts only, a gift of appreciated securities represents a smart way to increase your giving while providing important tax benefits to you.

You can receive two tax savings with a gift of stock. First, you avoid paying any capital gains taxes on the increase in the value of your stock assuming you have held it for at least one year. In addition, you receive a tax deduction for the full fair market value of the stock on the date of the gift. For income tax purposes, the value of such gifts may be deducted up to 30% of adjusted gross income with an additional five-year carry forward.

Example: If you purchased stock in a company 10 years ago for $1,000 and the stock is now valued at $10,000, an outright gift of the stock to Otterbein would result in a charitable deduction of $10,000. In addition, you avoid paying capital gains tax on the appreciated value of the securities, in this case $9,000.

You may transfer stock directly to us through electronic means in conjunction with your broker, or you may send the stock directly to us with a separate Stock Power under separate cover. The use of a separate Stock Power certicate prevents the security from being sold by anyone other than Otterbein College.

For more information, contact the director of annual giving at (614) 823-1400.

Don Glass to Direct the Otterbein Fund

A new direction for the Otterbein Fund was taken this past July with the addition of Donald Glass as director of annual giving at Otterbein College. Replacing Tracy Rush, who assumed the newly created position of director of advancement research at Otterbein, Glass combines his enthusiasm for annual support programs with a good sense of business, having received his Masters in Business Management from Antioch University in 1994.

Don Glass

"It is important to analyze the many methods used to keep in touch with our alumni to determine the best and most cost-effective way to keep them involved in the life of the institution," says Glass.

"We must utilize our scarce resources well to help attract new dollars to the College. This requires us to pay close attention to how we administer our annual fund so we can eliminate the programs that have really not been helpful to the College over the years and enhance those that have been helpful. Keeping good statistics, monitoring, and evaluating effectively are important functions if the Otterbein Fund is to be successful."

Having served as the director of annual giving at Earlham College in Richmond, Indiana before arriving at Otterbein, Glass relied on good planning and extensive reorganization of existing programs to yield significant increases in the Earlham Annual Fund during his tenure there. He also served in various development capacities with American Red Cross and the Easter Seal Society, both in Dayton. He is past president of the Miami Valley Chapter of the National Society of Fundraising Executives (NSFRE) and was active in the Centerville Area Jaycees.

Don will be looking at new methods of securing annual dollars to Otterbein, including a focus on enhancing reunion class gifts to the institution. Plans are also underway to develop a new volunteer corps which can assume a leadership role in securing lead donations to the Otterbein Fund in future years. Says Glass, "It will be important for us to identify and involve those alumni who can help move the Otterbein Fund to new heights in the years to come. We are beginning to see a plateau to our donations. If we are to remain competitive, leadership gifts to the Otterbein Fund will need to be increased in the years ahead. But in the brief period I have been here, I am impressed with the level of caring by alumni toward the institution, and I am sure the leadership is out there ready to help."

Glass is a 1991 graduate of Baldwin-Wallace College and resides in Grove City, Ohio with his wife, Shari, a research chemist. ■

ALUMNI NOTES

Compiled by Patti Kennedy

Linguistic Lifelong Learning

Alumni came in droves to learn about words, words, words at the Alumni Lifelong Education program on May 13. Professor of English Alison Prindle gave a presentation to 75 alumni and friends on exploring the history of words and phrases and new linguistic approaches to how words are created.

For example, where did the words scapegoat, anticlimax, fiddledeedee and gossip column come from? Why do children wonder if the past tense of sneeze could be snoze or if the past tense of kneel could be knole? Why can we say the teacher taught well but not the preacher praught well?

Prindle shared her enthusiasm for linguistics with an audience that left with a new appreciation for the English language with all its quirks, foibles and humor.

Dayton Area Alumni Happy as June Bugs

Nearly 100 Dayton area alumni turned out for an afternoon and evening of fun and festivity at the June Bug Jamboree on June 7. This tremendous turnout presented a wonderful opportunity for alumni living in the Dayton area to celebrate the Sesquicentennial — complete with a birthday cake. There were games of volleyball, badminton and horse shoes before the rains came. However, this lively group wasn't about to let a little precipitation dampen the spirit of the day. They also enjoyed a quartet from the Otterbein-Lebanon Retirement Community singing some favorite Otterbein songs.

Special thanks go to Jim '62 and Pam Moore for hosting the event at their Centerville home and to other members of the planning committee which included Ed '58 and Connie '60 Mentzer, Bill '48 and Helen '47 LeMay, Bob '50 and Barbara '51 Barr, Jack '62 and Mary Jean '61 Pietila, Jane '54 and George '52 Liston, Bob '55 and Gail '56 Arledge, Carl '49 and Millie '48 Schafer, Rev. Jim '56 and Mary Lou '56 Wagner, John '49 and Joan '50 Albrecht, Martha and Jim Shand '51, Sandy '63 and Bill Ralph, Grace '39 and Harold '41 Augspurger.

Alumni Weekend Wraps Up Sesquicentennial Celebration

Alumni Weekend, June 20-22, this year took on special significance as the final event of the year-long Sesquicentennial Celebration. The classes of '47, '52, '57, '62, '67, '72 and '77, as well as many who graduated before 1947, enjoyed reunion events and getting reacquainted with classmates.

On Friday evening, everyone enjoyed dinner on the lawn behind the Campus Center and entertainment by Guy Bishop '49.

Highlights on Saturday included bus tours of campus, department open houses, the Courtright Memorial Library 25th Anniversary party and a tour of historical sites around campus. At the annual alumni luncheon, hosted by the National Alumni Association, alumni award winners were recognized, and the Alumni Choir performed on two occasions. Also, a special style show with historical costumes from the College's collection of alumni clothing was shown by Petie Dodrill H'94, Liz Glor

Allen '64 (president of the alumni association), Mary Pat Knight and Jean Spero.

This year's alumni award winners are featured on pages 38-39. Class pictures are on pages 26-29, and yet more photos from Alumni Weekend can be found on page 40.

Alumni College Biggest Ever

This summer's Alumni College, July 25-27, was the best attended yet with 120 participants taking classes on navigating the World Wide Web, preserving records and artifacts for the future, the influence of television, building wealth, graphic design and bioethics.

Vice President of the National Alumni Association Cabot Rea '76, who chaired Alumni College '97, led a field trip to the WCMH-TV4 station where he is an evening news anchor. The group got a back stage look at how broadcast gets on the air. Rea also presented a class on the evolution of television news coverage.

On Friday, guest speaker Jimmy Crum, former WCMH-TV4 sports anchor, talked about "The Power of Communication." Joel Riley '86, a radio host for WTVN in Columbus, presented an entertaining and relaxing reflection on his Otterbein experience after Saturday's lunch.

Go South, Young Man!

Bill '56 and Sonya Stauffer

Evans '55 gave a fascinating presentation on the wonders of going to Antarctica, the unspoiled southern continent, on Aug. 5 to a gathering of 41 people.

The sights in this region cannot be seen in any other part of the world and they are unforgettable. Antarctica and its surrounding islands are among the few places in the world still relatively untouched by man. Ships are limited and visits can only be made during the short Antarctic summer.

The Evanses have traveled extensively, but their favorite trip was to Antarctica in 1996. Their presentation was enlightening, educational and persuasive. The audience members left ready to book passage on the next plane south.

All Aboard the Mary Day

For the third time, a crew of Otterbein alumni and friends set sail from the port of Camden, Maine aboard the 19th century style Schooner Mary Day. This week-long adventure, August 17-23, attracted 29 people.

During the week, the crew experienced a wide variety of weather — sun, rain, clouds and fog that created zero visibility conditions. The changing weather meant that each day the beauty of the Maine coast was reflected in a different manner.

The trip afforded all who sailed a chance to escape to a more simple life without the intrusions of television, telephones, schedules or deadlines while providing the comforts of a warm bed and good cooking. They visited a quaint coastal Maine town, explored an uninhabited island, observed new kinds of plant and animal life and enjoyed a delicious lobster dinner cooked over an open fire on a sandy beach.

President Brent DeVore is in the background.

Two local TV personalities participated in this year's Alumni College. Above: Jimmy Crum, in his trademark colorful sportcoat, gave a presentation on the power of communication. Below: Cabot Rea '76 (seated center) led a field trip to WCMH-TV4 where he is an evening news anchor.

Thanks to David and Sara Deeвер '61 for serving as our alumni hosts. The Office of Alumni Relations organizes this trip every other year. Another excursion is planned for 1999. Plan ahead to join the next voyage.

A bonus to this year's trip for the 13 traveling by van from Westerville was a visit to West Point Military Academy and a tour of the football facility guided by Mike Dietzel '85, offensive coach of the Army team.

Alumni Taking Otterbein's Message to Prospective High School Students

As competition for students among colleges has become more keen in recent years, many institutions have turned to their greatest resource — their alumni — to help in the recruitment process. This year, the offices of Admission and Alumni Relations are joining together to create a program known as OARS (Otterbein Alumni Recruiting Students) which is intended to expand Otterbein's recruitment efforts in specific geographic regions throughout the U.S. The program consists of a nationwide network of volunteer alumni trained to introduce Otterbein to high school students. The goal of the OARS Program is to remain competitive with other institutions in attracting incoming students.

The first training session was held in July for seven alumni interested in becoming part of OARS. They are Gar '74 and Linda '76 Vance from Winter Park, Florida; Keith '74 and Ruth '75 Mallick from Orlando, Florida; Nancy Bocskor '79 and Dr. Richard Runkle '58 from Washington, D.C.; and Fred DeBell '76 from Baltimore, MD.

Golden Cane Update

The Office of Alumni Relations has prepared a special plaque recognizing former holders of the Golden Cane Award which honors the oldest living alumni from the earliest graduating class.

Director of Alumni Relations Greg Johnson is in the process of determining who will hold this honor next. The most recent holder was Kathryn Manette Wilson '15.

1997 Alumni Award Winners

Claudia Lehman ~ HONORARY ALUMNA AWARD

Claudia taught first grade for 11 years in the Westerville schools. During this time she was named a Jennings Scholar.

Claudia married husband Dave in 1970 following his graduation from Otterbein College. Also in 1970, Dave was named men's Cross Country Coach at Otterbein, a part-time position that he still holds. Dave's coaching helped Claudia create a close association with Otterbein which has grown through the years.

In 1972 Claudia and Dave purchased a home on West Street next to campus and immediately started housing students in the upstairs. Claudia has enjoyed her role as substitute mom and confidant to the many cross country runners and boarders over the last 27 years. She has prepared spaghetti dinners for 25-30 people at a time, fixed lasagna for 75 each year at the cross country awards banquet, made warm-up suits for the team, washed uniforms, and made an "Otterbein Cross Country" banner that hangs from the Lehman porch on important cross country days.

Claudia has also spent many hours cutting branches and spreading mulch at the new cross country course, helped serve food at the "O" Club Basketball Classic, handed out student ID cards and allowed her husband to be a part-time coach for 27 years.

Carl Becker '49 ~ SPECIAL ACHIEVEMENT AWARD

A native of Miamisburg, Ohio, Carl Becker remembers growing up with his brother John, former librarian at Otterbein. Becker served in the United States Army for three years during World War II, nearly all that time in the Pacific.

On his return from service, Becker attended Otterbein College, graduating in 1949 after "three of the best years of my life." Becker earned a master's degree in history at the University of Wisconsin, discontinuing doctoral plans because of illness. After that he worked as a mail carrier, a social worker in the Montgomery County Juvenile Court, and a historian for the United States Air Force. Then he joined the faculty of Sinclair College and received his doctorate in history from the University of Cincinnati.

In 1964, he became a member of the Department of History in the newly-built facility of the branch campus of Miami University-Ohio State University in Dayton that soon was transformed into Wright State University. There he taught American history, specializing in the Civil War, for nearly 30 years. Along with two colleagues, he developed a master's program in public history. Near the end of his career at Wright State, he served for five years as the director of the university press.

He is the author, co-author or co-editor of five books, and has also written about 40 biographical essays on golfers and industrialists for national reference works. Currently he is working on a book-length history of semi-professional football in southern Ohio during the 1920s.

Richard Kissling '61 ~ Special Achievement Award

The life journey which brought Richard Kissling to his present position as Assistant Director of the University of Arizona Honors Center has included a trek to California where in 1968 he earned his Ph.D. in chemistry at the University of the Pacific. Before he and his family moved to Tucson in 1979, Richard held faculty appointments at Cal Poly at San Luis Obispo and Heidelberg College in Tiffin, Ohio. At Heidelberg he was the recipient of two NSF grants.

Then, in 1975 while enjoying the many fruits of his professional labors, the lights were literally turned out for

Richard. He had been diagnosed with juvenile onset diabetes at age 11 and although he had been able to manage his diabetes for nearly 25 years, he developed diabetic retinopathy and within two years became totally blind. As if this were not enough misfortune, Richard also had a severe bout with viral meningitis and in 1977 was diagnosed with a rare form of chronic leukemia.

Richard eventually returned to academe in 1980 when he was hired as an academic advisor in the College of Liberal Arts at the University of Arizona. During the next five years, he also became the university's pre-health professions advisor and was named the Assistant Dean for Academic Advising in what had become the College of Arts and Sciences. He later joined the UA Honors Center staff in 1986 and has been its Assistant Director for the past nine years.

He attributes his ability to overcome the adversity of his blindness to the loving support of his family and the computer technology which enables him to function in today's computerized workplace.

LANCE W. LORD '69 ~ Special Achievement Award

Major General Lance W. Lord is commander, 2nd Air Force, Keesler Air Force Base, Miss. He oversees operational aspects of basic, technical and foreign officer training in the Air Education and Training Command.

Lance entered the Air Force in 1969 as a graduate of the Otterbein College Reserve Officer Training Corps program. That was followed by a master's degree in industrial management at the University of North Dakota. In 1974 he completed Squadron Officer School at Maxwell Air Force Base in Alaska. At that same base he was a distinguished graduate of Air Command and Staff College in 1979 and Air War College in 1988.

During his time in the Air Force, Lance has completed a series of Air Staff and Department of Defense level assignments in strategic missiles. He has served as commandant of Squadron Officer School, and directed the Ground Launched Cruise Missile Program Management Office in Europe. He represented the Air Force as a research associate in international and security affairs.

His list of honors in the Air Force includes Legion of Merit with two oak leaf clusters, Defense Meritorious Service Medal, Meritorious Service Medal with oak leaf cluster, Air Force Commendation Medal with oak leaf cluster, Air Force Outstanding Unit Award, Air Force Organizational Excellence Award, Combat Readiness Medal and National Defense Service Medal with service star.

William E. LeMay '48 ~ Distinguished Alumnus Award

William E. LeMay has attained success as a researcher, scientist, inventor, businessman and entrepreneur.

World War II interrupted his college plans after one semester at the University of Dayton. Bill entered the Army Air Corps in January, 1943 and served in the European theater as a B-17 bomber navigator.

At the war's end, he joined his bride, Helen Hilt LeMay '47, who was then a student at Otterbein. Bill graduated from Otterbein in 1948 with a B.S. in Chemistry and then pursued advanced work in chemistry at the University of Colorado.

He launched his own company in 1953 called Ohio Sealer and Chemical Corporation. In 1961 he founded Dayton Flexible Products which he later sold to Baxter Travenol. He remained with the company as researcher and development manager. From 1967 to 1978, Bill served as president of the Dayton Flexible Products Division and vice-president for Baxter Travenol Medical Products Division. After his time with Baxter, Bill went on to found and head both Phoenix Medical Technology and Waytek Corporation.

Throughout his career, Bill also has actively supported his community, church, professional organizations and alma mater through many volunteer roles.

He served as chairman of the Otterbein College Board of Trustees and has been a member of the board for 25 years serving on a variety of committees. Now he serves as chair of the $30 million Campaign for Otterbein which will conclude next year.

Bill also spearheaded Otterbein's long-range strategic plan "Otterbein 2000" in 1987 which refined the College's mission and set the course for Otterbein to follow into the 21st century.

In the past, the College has recognized his outstanding contributions as an alumnus by presenting him with the honorary degree of Doctor of Science in 1973 and the Alumni Distinguished Service Award in 1983. ■

Honor Roll Spotlights

The thousands of names listed in this 1996-97 Honor Roll of Donors represent a wide spectrum of backgrounds and giving levels. Just as there are differences among our donors, so too are there differences in the ways individuals can support Otterbein. The Otterbein Fund, endowed programs, and planned gifts are just some of the gift types that can be made to help strengthen Otterbein's future.

This year we feature five individuals who represent a cross-section of the many people whose generosity makes a difference for our College. In addition to their differences in background, the methods and purposes of their gifts also vary.

Donors like you, and those featured here, represent the future of Otterbein College.

President's Message

What to do for an encore?

Last year was a very special year for our College with our Sesquicentennial celebration. Throughout all of the events, we paused to look back on our proud history, recognizing all of those who played a part in the establishment of the then Otterbein University of Ohio. It is, indeed, a wonderful history thanks to the sacrificial commitments of thousands of individuals and organizations.

With all of the hoopla of last year, I wondered over the summer what we could do for an encore. Well, we succeeded. It started with the Sept. 1 issue of U.S. News and World Report which included their annual rankings of America's best colleges and universities. Over the past years we have moved from 13th to 8th to 7th to 5th in our category of 136 midwestern liberal arts colleges. This year we moved up to 3rd overall, 2nd in retention of students from entering to graduation and—number one—in academic reputation. What a wonderful endorsement of the tremendous talents of and commitment to the educational process by the entire Otterbein community, especially our exceptional faculty.

Then the students began to arrive. They arrived as true freshmen, as transfer students from 33 countries. They arrived as older part-time students, and for the first class of Master of Business Administration students. When they stopped arriving we counted them and they totaled 2,722, which is 196 more than last year, another record enrollment.

Since our founding in 1847, Otterbein has been a college of opportunity for all students of potential. For most of our history that meant those 18 to 22 years of age. This year the students of potential range in age from 15 to 75. Life-long education is alive and well at Otterbein.

Yes, we are a College in transition, but we are firmly grounded in tradition. A tradition of excellence and high standards. A tradition of value-centered education to help our students be active learners and creative and responsible citizens. And, important for our future, a proud tradition of voluntary financial support from thousands of alumni and friends.

On behalf of our 2,722 students age 15 to 75, thank you for your support during 1996-97.

Honor Roll Spotlight

James and Kathleen Rutherford

Philanthropy has become a way of life for James and Kathleen Rutherford. They recently gave $50,000 to initiate an endowed scholarship in their name for first generation students at Otterbein. Awards begin the fall of 1998 and will be based on financial need and demonstrated leadership potential. The Rutherfords have been involved in other philanthropic ventures, including an endowed scholarship at Case Western Reserve (son Mark's alma mater), and a Columbus Foundation fund in their name.

"We used to give anonymously," Mr. Rutherford said, "until we realized a certain amount of leadership is necessary to encourage others."

Their connection to Otterbein is through their younger son, Keith, who is a senior at Otterbein majoring in business with a marketing emphasis. He is also a member of Zeta Phi fraternity.

Mr. Rutherford, founder of Goal Systems Inc., a computer software development and marketing firm, attributes his success to "being in the right place at the right time." After becoming a publicly-held company, Goal Systems was purchased in 1992. He is now president of his own holding company, Wingset Inc.

Mr. Rutherford is very modest about his success. "I've been more fortunate than I should have been, given my background and experience," he said. "I was lucky to get into the software business when it was starting to boom. When you achieve success you have to think about giving back to the community. To some extent you have to pay forward."

His good fortune means good news for charitable concerns, as giving has been incorporated into the Rutherfords' lifestyle.

Mr. Rutherford attended Denison and The Ohio State University.

For information about the Rutherford Endowed Scholarship or other scholarship funds contact the Development Office at 823-1400.

*G*ift clubs allow the College to thank and recognize the many people whose giving funds scholarships, equipment and other areas that strengthen the educational opportunities provided to students at Otterbein.

These clubs exist to advance the development program by giving donors options for contributions at various leadership levels. Individuals are invited to join one of these clubs each year as part of the Otterbein Fund.

Membership in Otterbein's giving clubs is extended to individuals who contribute annually to the furtherance of the College's activities.

Giving club memberships:

- May be initiated through a gift of cash or securities
- Include all contributions made within the July 1 to June 30 fiscal year
- May include matching gifts from a donor's employer

Otterbein's annual giving clubs are:

- The President's Club (gifts of $5,000 or more)
Robert & Annbeth Sommers Wilkinson, chairs

Honor Roll Spotlight

Janis-Rozena Peri

Music professor and performer Janis-Rozena Peri '64 returned to campus last year to serve as a commencement speaker. Sharing her wisdom and experience with graduates about to enter the "real world" is just another example of her generosity.

She will grace the campus again with her presence and incredible soprano voice this school year when she presents a guest recital sponsored by the Department of Music in February, to help celebrate Black History Month.

"I think Otterbein is an extraordinarily good school and I am proud of being an alumna," Peri says. "I would like to help more students have the opportunity to go there and especially those who might be denied access because of their financial situation or the inadequacies of their high school and secondary education."

To that end, she recently made a special commitment to the College. Peri signed a declaration of intent stating her plan to make an estate gift of $50,000 to Otterbein's Linmoor Scholars Program.

The program is a partnership between Linmoor Middle School, located in the Columbus neighborhood of South Linden, and Otterbein. Centered around a series of summer academic experiences and mentoring relationships, the program selects at-risk youths, motivates them, helps prepare them for college and offers financial aid to attend Otterbein College.

"I am very concerned about diversity at Otterbein," says Peri. "I think the Linmoor program is a good way to address not only ethnic diversity, but also social and economic differences. I think those of us who fancy ourselves in the 'middle class' think only the disadvantaged profit from something like this and the truth is we all benefit. We all live in the world together and no matter what social, political and national arena we find ourselves in, eventually we all rise together or all fall together."

After graduation Peri went on to receive a master's degree in music from Miami University. She pursued further studies in opera, theatre and voice at the Manhattan School of Music and Oberlin College Conservatory of Music.

Following a year of study with Richard Miller at Oberlin, she was awarded the Kate Neal Kinley Award which enabled her to begin performing and studying in New York.

She made her Carnegie Hall debut as the "mater gloriosa" in Mahler's Eighth Symphony with the Hartford Symphony Orchestra in 1971. A specialist in works of women composers, her debut recital at Carnegie Recital Hall featured the first New York performance in 50 years of Alma Mahler's early songs.

Peri has made guest appearances and performed recitals throughout the United States, Germany, Holland, Switzerland, Bulgaria, and the former Yugoslavia. She frequently performs music composed by her mother, Zenobia Powell Perry.

She was appointed to the voice faculty of West Virginia University in 1985 where she is now an associate professor. She was the winner of the Mary Catharine Buswell Award for service to women at West Virginia University.

Honor Roll Spotlight

Dave Lehman

Few people believe more in the importance of annual support to the College than Dave Lehman. Each year Dave and his wife, Marsha, contribute to Otterbein in a number of areas including the Otterbein Fund, the general endowment fund, the "O" Club, and many other areas. Lehman began his history of giving to the College shortly after his graduation.

A Westerville native, he has never completely left Otterbein. Following his graduation, he was named men's cross country coach, a part-time position he still holds today. Since taking over as cross country coach in 1970, he has had 25 winning seasons and seven OAC championships. He has taken his teams to the NCAA Division III cross country championships ten times, finishing as high as eighth in 1994.

Lehman comments, "I guess I'm a jock at heart and enjoy being around college age kids to help them reach their potential. I love athletics and being involved on that basis. And I get to exercise my philosophy on sports and get away from some unpleasant aspects we see in sports today, especially professional sports where there is so much money and greed. Division III is a breath of fresh air. The students run and compete for the love of it and that's what I've tried to emphasize over the years. Let's have fun, work hard and hopefully enjoy some success."

Lehman and his wife, Claudia, purchased a home on West Street just around the corner from the College in 1972 and immediately started housing students in the upstairs. For about 10 years the Lehmans provided housing, as well as guidance and friendship, to numerous boarders, many of whom were cross country runners, until their own children, twins Jason and Teresa, now 15 years old, and Ben, 12 years old, began to fill the house.

This year Claudia was named an honorary alumna of the college for her years of work on behalf of the cross country team as well as serving as a surrogate parent to the dozens of students who have lived in their home.

Lehman says he and his family have an annual debate on how much longer he will continue to coach. "As long as it's fun and doesn't prevent my involvement with my own kids, I certainly enjoy doing it." He adds that whether he coaches cross country or not, "I certainly don't see an end to my involvement at Otterbein."

He also has served as vice president of the "O" Club, a group of Otterbein graduates who oversee fundraising to promote the College's athletic programs. Professionally, he is the secretary/treasurer for Culver Art and Frame Co., Inc. in Westerville.

To say he is a loyal alumnus is an understatement; in addition to their other contributions, Dave and Claudia have been generous donors since his graduation.

They contribute annually to Otterbein in a number of areas. They have made donations to the Otterbein Fund, the general endowment fund, student financial aid fund, the Yoest Endowed Award, the "O" Club and the Win for Otterbein campaign which collected donations to renovate Memorial Stadium. Those who stroll down the Alumni Walkway between Roush Hall and Towers Hall can see the Lehman family brick which was purchased to help fund capital improvements at Otterbein.

"I suppose I stay involved with the College because I am more immediately interested, and living locally I appreciate what Otterbein meant to me and to other students throughout the years," Lehman says.

The Campaign for Otterbein

Progress by Program Area as of September 30, 1997
Cash and Pledges Combined

The "O" Club

Support for Otterbein Athletics through the "O" Club was nearly $64,000 during the period of July 1, 1996 to June 30, 1997. This generosity was largely due to the enthusiastic response to "O" Club President Moe Agler's vision to bring the "O" Club endowment to $1 million by the year 2001. President Agler has set a goal of 300 donors making a $1500 pledge over a five year period. To date, 42 members have pledged over $57,000 to the program.

Also encouraging was the response of members and friends to in-kind services that were valued at more than $22,000 for a 12-month period.

"O" Club grants and proceeds from the "O" Club Classic basketball tournament were provided to meet a variety of important needs: the purchase of two vans to replace old ones used to transport athletes; vehicle maintenance; support for the Cross Country program; upgrading the weight room with state of the art equipment and new flooring; the purchase of state of the art video equipment; the hosting of a picnic for men and women athletes in the fall; honoring the 1946 Otterbein football team; and hosting the annual Barnhard Memorial golf scholarship tournament.

The "O" Club and its leadership gratefully acknowledge the support of all those listed below whose contributions significantly enhance the quality of the athletic programs at Otterbein College.

Endowed Scholarships/Awards

*W*e again wish to highlight the contributors to our endowed scholarships, endowed awards and endowed special projects.

Opportunities to establish Otterbein College Endowed Scholarships begin at $15,000 and completion is to occur within five years of initiation. (Endowed scholarships established before January, 1993 begin at $10,000.)

Endowed scholarships provide funds for financial assistance to "coming students". Eligibility decisions rest with the Admissions Scholarship Committee.

Figures with each endowed fund reflect the total of gifts received as of June 30, 1997. Those funds receiving contributions in the 1996-97 fiscal year are listed with accompanying description and list of contributors.

History of the Program 1898 - 1997

The first endowed scholarship was established in 1898 by J. Wesley Welshans, who stated, "It is hoped that this gift may be increased and that many others of like character may be established." Welshans set up the scholarship in memory of his son and an Otterbein tradition was born.

During the '97-'98 school year, there are 163 endowed scholarships providing assistance to 411 students.

Honor Roll Spotlight

Robert Shawen

Robert Shawen, a Dayton resident, has proved to be a valuable friend to the College as he finds a generous and appropriate way to honor his brother and sister.

Shawen recently made a contribution of $31,977 to establish the Shawen Endowed Scholarship to honor his brother, C. Edward Shawen Jr. and his sister, Martha Jane Shawen Allaman, both 1930 graduates of Otterbein. It is also intended to honor their parents, Charles E. and Agnes B. Shawen.

Shawen explains, "My brother and sister were my best friends. We were born and grew to adulthood in a home where love and care abounded, where sharing was routine. Our age differences spread over eight years, our agendas and direction of interest varied. Nevertheless, we learned to care and to share, if not in unity at least by agreement. Our parents taught us by example and encouragement.

"Further, Martie and Ed were excellent students through the lower grades, high school and at Otterbein. Their intellectual self-improvement was ongoing. In my opinion, their achievements and standards for living are worthy of memory, and I am pleased to provide the means for that purpose."

Robert remembers them both as good students who maintained a lifelong interest in Otterbein. "Their connection to Otterbein was meaningful to me and I wanted to recognize that," he says. The Shawen Endowed Scholarship is intended for students in the top 15 percent of their class.

"To those who become eligible for scholarship funds from this grant, I offer the following admonition — learn to study, study to learn. The joys of life are too precious to waste. Go for it and give it your best try!"

Robert recalls how hard his own parents worked to make sure all their children received an education. "I enjoy being able to do what I can for Otterbein," he says. "A little bit of support always helps."

In his own life, Robert has had to overcome some physical impairments but considers them challenges, not obstacles. Following his graduation from DePauw University, Robert developed an illness that left all 24 lumbar vertebrae completely fused and created a hip deformity. Still he succeeds and with a positive attitude. "It put my plans out of shape for about 10 years but it hasn't interfered with my enthusiasm for life or work," he asserts. He is now 85 percent blind because of macular degeneration but adds, "None of that has diminished my joy and love for life."

His father was a medical doctor and Robert planned a career in medicine too. His illness derailed that idea and he tried a number of jobs until he began working for an accounting firm.

In 1959 he ventured out on his own and was instantly booked with former clients. He eventually earned his credentials as a certified public accountant. "I had a special group of clients I worked for," Robert explains. "I did special work for special people. Often it was more of a service than work."

Now he continues that tradition of service to others by establishing this endowed scholarship for Otterbein which will both honor his family and help future generations.

Honor Roll Spotlight

Lillian Frank

She is passionate about the arts. She can be seen attending cultural and educational events on campus, especially those in music, theatre or art. That connection inspired the first Artist Series endowment at the College.

Lillian Frank began her adventure in art at Otterbein in 1943 when she came here to teach in the Art Department. "At the time, I was the Art Department," she laughs.

The Art Department had existed since before the turn of the century but Lillian as the new chair set out to restructure and focus the curriculum to offer the courses art majors should be studying.

"It was unusual that they had started an art department so long ago, but I wanted to make sure the students were receiving a solid education in the visual arts."

Lillian and her husband, Paul Frank, were among Otterbein's premier artistic couples as he was a professor for 19 years in the Music Department. It was Paul who began the Artist Series, which started as a classical music series and has evolved into the variety now presented.

Lillian is an energetic and spunky individual involved in numerous projects besides those that are Otterbein related. However, four years ago, just before Christmas, disaster hit and for awhile it looked as if all the vitality would be permanently sapped from her. A freak accident occurred in a supermarket parking lot and a terrible fall resulted in a hospital stay and months of rehabilitation.

She survived this disaster and regained her phenomenal energy, so that she was walking unassisted five months later.

Of course the company paid her medical expenses and compensated her for her pain and suffering. She didn't feel as though the money really belonged to her and she wanted to do something special with it.

When the suggestion of endowing the Artist Series was made, she warmed to the idea as a natural fit for her tastes and interests. It was also an excellent way to remember Paul, who died in 1965.

The Lillian and Paul Frank Endowment for the Artist Series was established this summer and the proceeds are designated to go toward partial funding of an event until the fund reaches $100,000. The event is then named the Lillian and Paul Frank Signature Performance.

Lillian has numerous memories from her years of teaching at Otterbein. She is proud of the festivals she helped arrange that incorporated many disciplines around a common theme, such as the home, religion or the arts. These festivals served as a model to what is now the Integrative Studies Festival. In fact, she cites a course she developed with other faculty members called "Humanities: Exploring the Arts" as a kind of forerunner to our nationally recognized Integrative Studies Program.

The Art Department flourished under her leadership as did the Artist Series under Paul's guidance. She calls Paul, "a real intellectual, a Viennese intellectual." Paul left a strong arts legacy that Lillian continues with her involvement in the College. However, she has numerous interests beyond the arts, in service agencies such as Lifecare Alliance and Westerville Caring and Sharing.

She also has a strong connection to our Japanese alumni as one of the Japanese students Tatsuo Tsuda lived with the Franks. Over the years many students have lived with her and shared her home.

So respected is she by the Japanese alumni that last year they started a scholarship in her name to be awarded to an international student. Lillian became an honorary alumna in 1968, a Distinguished Service recipient in 1994 and last year became the first to receive the Alumni Ambassador Award.

Theatre Endowment

The Theatre Endowment was established in 1986. Since its inception, over $250,000 have been added to the College's endowment. The income from these funds is used to provide talent grants and support for special projects in the Department of Theatre and Dance. The figure after each fund indicates the total of gifts received as of June 30, 1997.

Here's a quick sample of what people are saying:

"I enjoyed learning about the College's history, how things have changed, yet haven't changed. The illustrations were really outstanding!" - Stephanie Mack '97, history/political science major from Cincinnati, Ohio.

"The book is beautifully put together—very factual and the photos are lovely. It is very entertaining for anyone who attended Otterbein, and even for those who didn't." - Jean Wyker Troop '49, Massillon, Ohio.
