Graduate School News Highlights

From Bridget M. Newell, Ph.D. Interim Associate Provost for Graduate Studies Welcome and Welcome Back!

While most graduate students do not have to start their graduate education in the fall semester, fall continues to feel like the “start of school” for many. For faculty and students this time of year is filled with hope, excitement, and perhaps a bit of nervous energy. Below I offer a snapshot highlighting themes we are focusing on this fall. Allied Health Change is a Constant...

The Master of Science in Allied Health (MSAH) Program is continually evolving to meet the needs of our students, alumni, and the marketplace. This spring, changes to the exercise and health science track (MSAH program) were made to address issues of equity across the program as well as enhance student opportunities. The new curriculum requirement is 30 credit hours, which highlights the importance of behavior change in health promotion and builds on the strong foundation of the undergraduate Exercise and Health Science Program. The main goal of one of our professors and the previous MSAH graduate director, Erica Van Dop, was to add value to the MSAH program and create an opportunity for alumni and current exercise science and health promotion students to engage in new graduate-level coursework.
