FOOTBALL FEATURE

Muskies look for success from offensive line

By Hank Alfman '00

Muskingum College sports information student assistant

Despite being overlooked, one of the most important facets of the game of football depends on the offensive line and how they hold up. From containing a blitzing defense, to pass protecting, or run blocking, the offensive front doesn't get as much credit as they should game in and game out. Without these punishers up front at the line of scrimmage each and every play, the quarterback and running back would be picking up their remains off the ground all the time. So, needless to say, they're actually pretty important, huh?

Just three games into the '99 season, the Muskie offensive line has looked in mid-season form. The pass protecting has been superior as quarterback Jeff Morris has been able to buy time to throw downfield to open receivers and rank fourth in the Ohio Athletic Conference in passing efficiency. Additionally, the running game averages nearly 454 yards per game (second in the conference) as holes have opened up very nicely. So who's being counted on to do most of the unappreciated work in the trenches for Muskingum this year?

A pair of seniors are going to be looked upon for that responsibility with Brian Petruska and Dan Filtz leading the way.

Senior tri-captain Brian Petruska who starts at left guard, is the most experienced veteran on the line. Petruska, who is from Poland, Ohio, is a three-year starter in his final season. He will be counted on to anchor the inexperienced line through his leadership. Petruska, reflected on what it has been like to grow through the years.

“Coming in as a sophomore starter, I was obviously a little bit younger and I tried to learn as much as I could from the guys that had been playing before me because they were a little older than I was,” Petruska said.

“Over the previous years I’ve tried to learn from experience, he added. “As far as being the most experienced player on the line and being a leader, I’m not real vocal with the guys. I lead by example. I go out and do my job and I trust in the line that I’m with and I know they’ll do the same.”

Meanwhile, senior Dan Filtz has been in a different situation over the years. Filtz, is a first-time starter on this year’s team after waiting in line for three years for his chance to contribute. Filtz, who is from Steubenville, Ohio, will be counted on to start plays at the center position and help aid the middle of the field with solid blocking. Filtz, explained his feelings on getting the chance to start after waiting in the wings as a backup.

“I’m proud to be starting now. Everyone wants to start. I’ve put in my time here, I’ve worked hard for four years and I’m just grateful to have the opportunity to still be playing and be able to start.”

Filtz also believes that it’s been a valuable experience to wait his turn.

“I think the three years previously waiting behind Eric Curtis and Scott Will made me learn a lot. I watched them play and I worked hard to be as good as they were. I’m going to try to do the best that I can on the field.”

As the season progresses, continue to look for the Muskies to score points, gain yards in chunks, and the offensive line to keep playing strong in helping the offense to succeed led by Petruska and Filtz.
