The Campaign for Otterbein: Affirming Our Past/Shaping Our Future

Ken Van Dyne

William LeMay '48. *

The Campaign for Otterbein is officially underway, and I am privileged to serve as chair.

This is the second time I have headed an Otterbein campaign, and I look forward to the challenge. The Campaign will be part of the Sesquicentennial Celebration and will be the most ambitious fund raising initiative ever attempted by the College. In celebrating 150 years of successful enterprise it is appropriate to embark on a Campaign of this magnitude and at this particular time.

The Campaign will be comprehensive, consist of three components, and have a combined goal of $30 million.

One component that we consider to be especially important for the future health of the College is increasing the endowment. Currently, the endowment's market value is $22 million. We hope to raise another $10 million through outright gifts, planned giving, and bequests. Earnings from the endowment will be used to support scholarships, professorships and continuing education for the faculty.

A second component, also $10 million, will be for general programmatic support across the institution, including the Otterbein Fund and updating academic equipment, scholarships, and departmental support.

The third $10 million component will be for facilities and campus development. High on our agenda will be improving existing facilities and the restoration of Towers Hall. A new facility or facilities will be recommended by campus and trustee committees during the coming academic year.

We have much to celebrate: a respected academic program led by an exceptionally qualified faculty, a record enrollment, a loyal alumni body, and solid growth. The recent completion of Roush Hall, the purchase of 67 acres which doubled the size of the campus, and groundbreaking for our new student apartment complex all indicate a vital Otterbein.

The Campaign for Otterbein will strengthen a robust college and assure our place in the future. We hope you will join us and participate in this exciting adventure.

Otterbein New Students Plunged into the Community this Fall

New students entering Otterbein this fall had the opportunity to "plunge" into the community with a special service project on Saturday, Sept. 10.

For the second year, this Community Plunge was a part of Otterbein's New Student Weekend, held the weekend before classes began. About 100 new students joined Otterbein's Academic Dean Patricia Frick as well as faculty and staff members and returning upperclassmen in this day of community service.

The program, sponsored by Otterbein's Office of Student Affairs, is aimed at helping students make the connection to community service early in their college careers. Otterbein officials hope this early involvement will encourage students to continue volunteer work throughout their college years.

Students and faculty donated their time and energy to 10 organizations in the Columbus and Westerville areas from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Some of the projects included preparing and serving lunch at the Faith Mission for the Homeless, helping with home construction through Habitat for Humanity, planting a garden at Avalon Elementary School, painting at Indianola Middle School in Columbus, visiting residents of Mann Nursing Home and sprucing up facilities at the Child Diocesan Center and Columbus Colony, a residential facility for deaf students.

Transportation to the various sites was provided by COTA. Bank One and Polaris Amphitheater donated t-shirts for all participants.

Sesquicentennial Plans Continue

The theme of "Affirming Our Past/ Shaping Our Future" has been announced by Co-Chairs of the Sesquicentennial Coordinating Committee, Sylvia Carlson Vance '47 and Norman Dohn '43. Plans for the celebration are well under way, and responsibilities have been divided among three subcommittees: events, publications and the campaign. These three working subcommittees are now meeting and making plans in their respective areas, all reporting to the Coordinating Committee.

The Events Subcommittee, chaired by Becky Fickel Smith '81, has been working to determine a timeline of events for on-campus activities. They are also working closely with Alumni Relations to bring the Sesquicentennial celebration to those unable to return to campus.

The Publications Subcommittee, chaired by Tuesday Beerman Trippier '89, has plans for a complete pictorial history book well underway. The group is also preparing for work on the next comprehensive Alumni Directory (due out in 1997).

The Campaign for Otterbein Subcommittee, chaired by Campaign Manager Jodie Barnes, continues work on campaign plans and is $5 million on the way to the $30 million campaign goal.

Any questions, ideas or suggestions for the Sesquicentennial may be directed to Sylvia Vance, Norm Dohn or one of the subcommittee chairs, c/o College Relations, Otterbein College, Westerville, OH 43081.

Artist Series Announces Season

The 1994-95 Otterbein College Artist Series will offer a colorful and lively mix of music, dance and comedy before ending with a nationally-renowned author and syndicated columnist.

The season opened with the return of Nightnoise on Thursday, Sept. 22. This four-member group weaves a unique melding of Celtic, jazz, classical and pop music to create a signature sound that is all their own.

The music will continue with the Dallas Brass performance on Thursday, Oct. 20. Consistently praised for their showmanship and spectacular virtuosity, this talented group plays many styles of music with a repertoire that spans from classical to jazz.

The Artist Series will begin 1995 with the Ko-Thi Dance Company on Thursday, Jan. 26. With an electrifying, stimulating blend of whirling colors and soul-filling music, this professional dance company and music ensemble combine forces to create an extravaganza of African and Caribbean dance and music.

Judith Sloan will present her own unique perspective on the world on Thursday, April 6. Sloan, an actress and comedienne, creates a theatrical collage of personalities and social commentary.

The Artist Series ends with author and syndicated columnist Molly Ivins speaking on Thursday, May 18. Ivins is the bestselling author of Molly Ivins Can't Say That, Can She? and Nothing But Good Times Ahead. One of the nation's wittiest and best-known political pundits, Ivins writes a widely syndicated column for the Fort Worth Star-Telegram and for 10 years was a political columnist for the Dallas Times Herald.

For ticket information, call (614) 823-1600. The Otterbein College Artist Series is sponsored in part by the Ohio Arts Council.

Professor Has the Write Stuff

J. Patrick Lewis is at it again! Three of his recently released titles, pictured here, will appear in local bookstores this fall: The Frog Princess, a retold Russian folktale; The Fat-Cats at Sea, a narrative adventure in nonsense verse; and The Christmas of the Reddle Moon, a 19th century tale set in Thomas Hardy's corner of England.

FACULTY/STAFF ACHIEVEMENTS

GORDON L. FORWARD, lecturer of speech communication, attended the Central State Communication Association annual convention. He presented a paper entitled "Organizational Assimilation in an Era of Change and Instability: An Identity Perspective." It was ranked as a "top four paper" in the Organizational and Professional Communication Division of the conference.

Instructor of English DEBRA MASON was elected to the board of the Central Ohio Chapter of the Society of Professional Journalists. She also attended a regional conference of the Society for Newspaper Design and the annual meeting of the Religion Newswriter's Association.

Assistant Professor of English MONA NARAIN attended a meeting of the American Society for 18th Century Studies where she presented a paper entitled "Performing Virtue and Pleasure: Conflicts for Femininity," based on the works of Aphra Behn. She also attended the Popular Culture Association's annual meeting. She chaired a panel on "Visualizing Women: Film and Television" and presented a paper entitled "Victims of Power?: Women Psychoanalysts in Hollywood Cinema."

Lecturer of Foreign Languages ANDY SPENCER received a $3,500 research grant from DAAD (a German academic exchange service) which enabled him to spend the summer in Dresden and Berlin. Through this research he will complete a book on the cultural responses to the bombing of Dresden in 1945.

Assistant Professor of Foreign Language JAMES CARR attended the Conference on Language/Communication for World Business. This annual conference, international in its scope, deals with teaching business administration, management, marketing, etc. Otterbein currently offers "Commercial Spanish," introduced this spring and taught by MARJORIE DEMEL, and "Commercial French," offered since 1984 and taught by Carr.

Assistant Professor of Life and Earth Sciences SIMON LAWRENCE and two Otterbein students each presented a paper at the 103rd Annual Meeting of the Ohio Academy of Science hosted by The Medical College of Ohio. Professor and Chairperson MICHAEL HERSCHLER, Assistant Professor MICHAEL HOGGARTH and Lab Supervisor JUDY CHRISTIAN also attended the three-day event. Otterbein, along with Ross Products Division of Abbott Labs, will be hosting the 104th annual meeting on campus in 1995. Lawrence was the invited guest speaker at the monthly meeting of the Wheaton Club, an organization formed by individuals interested in natural history. He gave a talk and slide presentation entitled, "Conservation of Intraspecific Genetics Biodiversity."

Assistant Professor of Mathematics SUSAN ENYART, Associate Professor of Mathematics JOHN HINTON and Lecturer SUSAN SCHROEDER, from the Learning Assistance Center, accompanied seven education majors to the 72nd Annual Meeting of the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics.

Costume Shop Supervisor MARCI HAIN, Assistant Professor DANA WHITE, Assistant Professor ROB SHAFFER and Associate Professor KATIE ROBBINS all attended the national conference of the United States Institute of Theatre Technology. They were joined by 15 Otterbein design/technology students in attending discussions, seminars, presentations and workshops dealing with all areas of technical theatre, including new product demonstrations, displays of design work and seminars with international theatrical designers.

At the personal invitation of the Prime Minister and Minister for Cultural Affairs of the Grand-Duchy of Luxembourg, Equine Science faculty member MARIA S. CALDERONE was a dignitary at the inauguration of the permanent installation of the photographic exhibit of "The Family of Man" at the Chateau de Clervaux, a 12th-century castle in Luxembourg. This exhibit of 503 photos from 68 countries was originally conceived in 1955 for the Museum of Modern Art in New York by Edward J. Steichen, Maria's maternal grandfather. It provides images that are even today timeless in their depiction of humankind from birth to death. Some may recall the book of the same name by Steichen with a prologue by his brother-in-law poet Carl Sandburg.

This summer former Director of Physical Plant JOHN WATHEN assumed the position of Director of Construction for Otterbein. In this part-time position, John will oversee the construction of the student apartments on campus. Upon their completion in September 1995, he will retire from Otterbein. KEVIN MINER, from Knox College in Illinois, was hired as Otterbein's new Director of Physical Plant.

Executive Director of College Relations PATRICIA KESSLER presented a session on "Controlling Negative Situations" at the Ohio School Board Association workshop on "Building a Positive School District Communications Program" in June. ■

Attention Theatre Subscribers

Otterbein College Theatre has prepared another excellent season filled with comedy, drama, music and something special for the younger audiences.

The season opened with the Cat Among the Pigeons, (Oct. 5-9) written by Georges Feydeau, who is considered to be the originator and master of the "French Farce." In this story, a young man, engaged to the daughter of a Baron, hasn't the gumption to tell his long-time lover of his impending nuptials. In the grand style of farce, he runs himself ragged trying to keep the two women in his life apart when his lover unexpectedly shows up at his engagement party.

True West, authored by Pulitzer-Prize winner Sam Shepard, will be performed Oct. 26-30 and Nov. 2-5. This dark, bizarre comedy concerns sibling rivalry and the artistic bankruptcy of the New Hollywood. Austin, an aspiring screenwriter, is upstaged by his brother Lee, who cons a producer into buying his script — a contemporary "true western."

This year Otterbein will present the children's musical Androcles and the Lion, one of the most popular children's plays ever written. It will be performed Nov. 18-20. Written in the style of Italian Commedia dell'Arte, a group of strolling players set up their stage and give a performance.

The classic, modern drama, The Cherry Orchard, presented Jan. 25-29 and Feb. 1-5, is set in Russia. The play is a compassionate chronicle of a family on the brink of ruin. They have heedlessly mortgaged to the hilt their estate which contains an ancestral home and, most cherished of all, a cherry orchard renowned for its beauty.

The Central Ohio premiere of Six Degrees of Separation will be presented March 1-5. It follows the trail of a young black con man, Paul, who insinuates himself into the lives of a wealthy New York couple by claiming he knows their son at college. Paul tells them that he is the son of actor Sidney Poitier and that he has been mugged and all his money is gone. Captivated by his intelligence and his fascinating conversation, the couple invite him to stay overnight. In the morning they discover him in bed with a young male hustler from the streets and the picture begins to change. The comedy probes the tensions that discolor contemporary life — racial friction, homophobia, homelessness, the gulf between the generations, alienation and the desire to belong.

This year's musical, Sweet Charity, co-sponsored by the Department of Music, will be performed April 27-30 and May 4-6. This Bob Fosse extravaganza was one of the biggest Broadway hits of the mid-1960s. It is the story of an incurably romantic dance hall hostess and her indefatigable search for true love. With a witty, racy script by Broadway legend Neil Simon and a jazzy, tuneful score by Cy Coleman, Sweet Charity is a tour-de-force dance musical.

The season will end with a newly commissioned play. Last year Otterbein College Theatre successfully mounted the original production of Anthony Clarvoe's The Brothers Karamazov. This season marks the second annual staging of a world premiere play. Details on the author, title and subject are still being determined but it will be performed May 24-28 and May 31-June 4.

For more information on the upcoming season, call (614) 823-1657 or (614) 823-1209.■

Get a TEAMLINE Season Ticket and be at every game this year—even if you live 2,000 miles away!

No matter how far away you live from your favorite team, you can always hear the live play-by-play by calling TEAMLINE®. Now with the TEAMLINE Season Ticket® you can hear the games you want cheaper and with faster access.

The TEAMLINE Season Ticket is a pre-paid telephone calling card designed to ease access to your favorite team's games by eliminating the need to use a Visa or MasterCard each time you call. Name Correction

In the Summer 1994 issue of Towers we misspelled Jesse Engle's name as "Jessie" in the story "A Glimpse at Student Housing Through the Years." Mr. Engle was a professor of religion and Engle Hall bears his name.

Setting the Record Straight

In the Summer 1993 issue of Towers in the article entitled "Of Africa, Academics and Airplanes: The Many Adventures of Rev. Lloyd B. Mignerey '17," we only mentioned his one daughter Elinor. To set the record straight, there were three children: Elinor Mignerey Brown '45, Eileen Mignerey Kiriazis '49 and Robert B. Mignerey. Our apologies to the family.

Renaming Baby

Our apologies to Heide Matzke Kellett '86 and her husband for renaming their third son Daniel Walter "David Walter" in his birth announcement in the Winter 1994 issue of Towers. ■

We want to hear from you! Please send letters intended for publication to Letters to the Editor, Towers, Otterbein College, Office of College Relations, Westerville, Ohio 43081.

Remembering the Thomas House

The article about "Student Housing Throughout the Years" [Summer 1994 issue] brought back some fond memories, but I was disappointed to find that the two Co-op houses which existed when I was there from 1940-44 were not mentioned. I lived in Thomas House for three years and to an only child it was quite an experience. My closest college friends were the 'girls' who lived there. I can't remember the name of the other Co-op which was just across the road which then went into the football stadium. They were both torn down when the new building was built on that parcel.

There were 10-12 girls in Thomas House along with the housemother, Mrs. Winegardner, and her daughter, Muriel, who was also a student at O.C. With her help, we planned our meals and cooked them, did the dishes, cleaned the house, etc.

Very truly yours,
Phyllis A. Reinheimer '44

Our apologies for the oversight. According to the '41-'42 Student Handbook, the other Co-op house was called the Clements House. —Editor

Golf Team of '67 First to Be Invited to NCAA Tournament

I typically read the magazine from cover to cover as soon as it arrives. I did find a correction that needs to be made. The Summer 1993 issue carried a short note regarding the golf team. The article states: "...received the school's first berth in the NCAA Division III...". Unfortunately for the 1993 team, they do not have the distinction of being the first team. That honor goes to the 1967 or 1968 team. They played in the NCAA Division III championships at Paducah, Kentucky. Members of that team included Dick Beckner '69, Ricky Pinson '68, Tim Konfal '69, Terry Harnish '69 and myself. The coach at the time was Kent Morgan.

Actually, he was the assistant to athletic director Moe Agler '48.

We did not win, but we represented Otterbein College rather well. If my memory serves me right, the college gave us money for meals, but we paid for our lodging as well as getting there. We carpooled and caravanned to Paducah - we hadn't even ever heard of Paducah before! We brought Otterbein into national limelight! And we had a great time doing it.

Sincerely,
J. David Kline '68

We checked the records and you are right! The 1967 golf team was invited to participate in the NCAA tournament. However, the 1993 team was the first to be invited to the NCAA Division III Championship (Division III national competition began in 1975). A matter of technicality. Thanks for bringing it to our attention! —Editor

New Land Purchase Has Otterbein History Of Its Own

I was delighted to read the article in Towers (Spring '94) on the acquisition of the West St. farm. Congratulations to the administration and the trustees for this purchase.

This property holds many happy memories for my sister (Janice Bean Hahn, '42), my brother (Harry '43), and myself. Our grandparents, Alfred and Annie McCombs, purchased this property in the early 1900s.

Grandfather's farm was the location of many memorable occasions, as I grew up in Westerville. Watching the annual wheat threshing was a real treat. A large horse-drawn steam engine was brought in to supply the power. A huge belt was then run from the steam engine to the threshing machine. Other memories include swimming in Alum Creek and being chased up a tree by the resident bull. An unpleasant memory was being run over by a frisky colt and rendered unconscious; this probably explains some of my later school grades.

I am very pleased that this beautiful property will now become a lasting part of Otterbein history. My grandparents, uncles, and mother must be smiling, knowing that their home will become a part of Otterbein.

Thank you, "Dear Otterbein."

NOW THAT'S ENTERTAINMENT!

BY WENDY PETERSON '95

*T*ake each new opportunity that comes your way, is sound advice when coming from Keith Malick '73.

In fact, taking the opportunity as a high school student to teach summer choir camps on the Otterbein campus is what led to his decision to attend Otterbein.

"I was most impressed with the Otterbein campus and the people," comments Malick.

As an entering freshman, he noticed a theatre bulletin announcing auditions for student-directed mini scenes. Having enjoyed participating in theatre in high school, Malick "took the opportunity" and it changed his life forever.

He immediately dropped his business and economics major, and became a theatre major. He has been involved in the entertainment business ever since.

Upon graduating from Otterbein, Malick attended Penn State University, where he received a master's degree in technical theatre. Then he pursued his lifelong dream of teaching, first at Tufts University in Boston. After one year, Keith moved to Michigan and taught technical theatre at Grand Valley State College.

Due to the harsh Michigan winters, he decided to apply for a teaching position at Rollins College in Florida. It was another opportunity for him.

What he never realized was that it would be this chance that would eventually lead him to work for the Walt Disney Company.

Malick said he loved teaching, but wanted an additional challenge in a more professional setting.

Upon visiting Walt Disney World, Keith had a premonition that it was someplace he would like to work. He applied and was hired for the opening of the Epcot Center.

"I was getting a chance to work for a billion dollar entertainment project," he says.

At Walt Disney World, he held various managerial positions all around the park. As the convention entertainment manager, he served as project manager for activities including the Disney stockholders' meeting in Boca Raton and Walt Disney World's 15th birthday celebration.

"There were lots of great opportunities there," he says.

While at Disney, Malick met a long list of famous performers including Michael Jackson, Bob Hope, Lee Greenwood, Amy Grant, and Robin Williams.

"The hardest part was keeping a balance between work and home. I enjoyed working so much, my family got neglected," he says.

His last position at Disney was entertainment manager for Pleasure Island, a nighttime entertainment complex. He managed a department of 125 people with an annual budget in excess of seven million dollars.

Malick remained at Disney World for ten years, then another big opportunity struck. He received a call from a friend he knew from Disney who asked him to apply for a similar position at an all new theme park in San Antonio.

"I saw this position as a stepping stone to bigger and better things," Malick says.

It seems he has found the best of both worlds as the entertainment manager at Fiesta Texas in San Antonio.

"Having wanted to be a teacher all of my life, I have found this to be the perfect blend of business and teaching to help train young professionals. I am still guiding young people in a different way by being a positive influence," he says.

Fiesta Texas is a theme park which prides itself on its philosophy of providing all live entertainment, meaning no tapes and no sweetener. The entire entertainment staff works hard to train and teach young performers.

Opryland in Nashville is a sister park to Fiesta Texas, and both parks are managed by Gaylord Production Company. Many of the performers, from both Fiesta Texas and Opryland, have stayed at the park for two to three years, and then left to audition in New York where a large majority of performers have at least had a call back.

"We don't intend for our performers to get here and stay forever. We teach our performers so they will be successful when their opportunity comes," says Malick.

"I encourage Otterbein performers to come to our auditions. Fiesta Texas is a good place to hone your craft," he says.

In his capacity as entertainment manager, Malick is heavily involved in the production and planning of all the shows in the park. Eighty-five shows a day are produced at Fiesta, all of which are original. He is also responsible for scheduling, special events, the budget, and costuming.

"I am healthy, happy, and love my job. I am doing all of the things I have always wanted to do in my position. Each day I get up and my only worry is making people happy," he says.

Malick adds, "Another reason I took the job at Fiesta was because I knew I would have more time to spend with my family. I am most proud of my two kids. They are both special individuals."

In the off-season Malick is busy planning for the future and working out special fall and Christmas season shows. When he is not at work, he can be found skiing, traveling and touring Texas, golfing, or at a Spurs game with his family.

He lives in San Antonio with his wife Ruth (Ruggles '75) and his two children, Carolyn 12, and Paige, 5.

His two favorite moments at Fiesta are the day the new cast opens its show live for the first time, and the day the cast closes the show for the season.

"It is rewarding to see the performers grow as individuals. I'd like to be remembered for all the help and guidance I have given young people. I am most proud of the quality of the entertainment we produce," he says.

He plans time out of his schedule each day to go out in the park and support the performers.

"I enjoy keeping track of the performers. It reinforces why I work so much. My biggest satisfaction is the response from both sides of the stage," Malick says.

"Having wanted to be a teacher all of my life

*I have found . . .
the perfect blend of business & teaching to help train young professionals."*

Does he miss the technical side of the business?

Every once in a while Malick admits it is not unheard of for him to put on some old clothes and climb up a ladder to help focus a light or two.

"Learn to balance the technical side with the performance side. Get to know the entire industry of live entertainment, and never pass up the opportunity to perform. There is a lot more out there than theatre and film," says Keith with advice to all upcoming theatre majors.

"I would be very happy to work with Otterbein to develop an independent study or internship exchange program," he says.

In the future Keith plans to be a part of the industry and continue to grow with Fiesta Texas. He also wants to work hard to make San Antonio a major destination for tourism. Keith currently presides as chairman of the board for the Texas Music Association, San Antonio chapter. The association works hard to promote Texas history through music.

"San Antonio is a beautiful city. History is important to the people here. There is a real diversification of culture here," says Malick.

"I still think happily of my Otterbein days," he says. "I enjoyed the associations I made and think fondly of the people there. I would love to have my kids go there. It seems to be growing in a positive way." ■

With Eyes To the Sky

One of the big events of the summer, at least for those in the astronomy community, was the collision of comet Shoemaker-Levy 9 on Jupiter between July 16 and July 22. Discovered in 1993 by David Levy and Carolyn and Eugene Shoemaker, the comet actually consisted of 21 fragments, remnants of a single object that was torn apart by Jupiter's gravity.

Like much of the country, Professor of Astronomy Philip Barnhart kept tabs on the event and continues to monitor the data that is still being collected and analyzed.

However, Barnhart admits that he didn't have his eye glued to the telescope at the time of the comet crashes.

"I am inherently lazy," he admits. "I knew with all the other observatories recording this event there would be plenty of opportunities to watch it later. This has been a thoroughly studied event. Of course there will be months of debriefing and analyzing the data and images that have come in."

He says he was pleased that the astronomers' predictions actually proved to be underestimated. Too often in the past, astronomers have predicted dramatic events and have been disappointed by near misses or missed opportunities.

"There is always room for the unexpected in observations of this sort. I was surprised by the underestimate of the intensity of the collisions," he says.

Because the comet fragments were shrouded by glowing gases, no one was able to accurately tell their size.

Barnhart says most people were surprised by the size of the plumes created by the fragment crashes. "In fact, they predicted we wouldn't be able to see any result of the impact until the planet rotation brought the impact site to the visible side of the planet. But the plumes thrown up extended beyond the edge of the planet and we were able to see them at the time of impact."

Now questions remain about how long disturbances caused by the comet fragments will last. Barnhart says Jupiter's famous red spot is actually a storm that has been going on for more than 340 years. "We'll have to see how long it takes Jupiter to absorb this kind of impact. It will take months to begin to assess that."

In addition to assessing the long-term effects of the comet, Barnhart says scientists are only beginning to learn what happens when chunks of frozen gases encounter an atmosphere at high speeds and how that energy is dissipated.

For instance, the large chunks of ice flattened out like pancakes when they hit the atmosphere, which meant they lost energy much faster. "That's an important awareness,"

Barnhart says. "It's another thing we've learned when considering what a comparable collision with the Earth might do."

He says more people have started to wonder about that issue and Congress also has addressed that concern. The House Subcommittee on Science and Technology added an amendment to the NASA appropriations bill requiring the space agency to create, starting immediately, a plan to locate and catalog all objects that cross Earth's orbit.

"I think they've awakened to that possibility and will put more effort into surveying for potential encounters with Earth," Barnhart says.

On a personal note, Barnhart was watching the hard work of a colleague come to fruition with this event. In the early sixties, Barnhart met Eugene Shoemaker, one of the discoverers of Shoemaker-Levy 9.

"I met him when I was at Lowell Observatory and got to know him back then," Barnhart explains. "Then he was with the U.S. Geological Survey and trying to find places for the astronauts to land on the moon. I've seen him in NASA films over the years. That was part of the interest for me — seeing the work of people you know."

Barnhart is already using this event in his classroom. In fact, he presented a Sharon Woods program the weekend before the crashes took place to talk about the predictions. He plans a follow-up presentation this fall to talk about what actually occurred and how many of the expectations were surpassed.

As more information is collected and processed, he will continue to share it with his students. However, this is his last year at Otterbein. He will retire in the spring but plans to be around encouraging students to look toward the stars.

He himself will continue to look to the sky or perhaps it would be more accurate to say listen to the sky. Barnhart maintains his interest in searching for extraterrestrial life. He continues to work with Big Ear, the radio telescope located in southern Delaware County that is listening for any artifacts of advanced technological civilizations other than ours.

As he has enjoyed this summer's once-in-a-lifetime comet crash, Barnhart is still hoping for that once-in-a-lifetime first sound from space. ■

Student Volunteer Snapshot

Most students find it tough to juggle classwork and a part-time job. Most don't work 40 hours with a full class load. Most wouldn't consider giving away 40 hours in volunteer service.

They aren't Jason McGlothlin. In his first year as a volunteer with the Suicide Prevention Hotline in Columbus, Ohio, Jason volunteered more than 1,000 hours. Now he has logged more than 1,400 hours. He was volunteering 40 hours a week when he began but has now cut back to 10 hours a week.

"I guess I'm a big overachiever," he laughs. "But I can't say enough good things about the experience."

"We haven't had one like him in a long time," says Mary Brennen-Hofmann, Director of Suicide Prevention Services, a program of the North Central Mental Health Center (in Franklin County). "He's an extremely dedicated and mature young man and we're thrilled to have him. He has a terrific attitude and is very thoughtful."

Jason, a psychology major, decided to volunteer for personal reasons and says the issue of suicide has touched his life. Following 50 hours of training, he started answering crisis calls.

"He has worked really busy shifts and taken a real range of calls," Brennen-Hofmann says. "He stays calm and can handle anything he gets."

He says one of the early challenges was that he was somewhat shy when he began answering calls. As he gained confidence in the job he was doing for Suicide Prevention, he came out of his shell.

"Knowing you can make a difference is very rewarding," he explains. "It's unbelievably rewarding."

Another reason it has been a rewarding experience are the other volunteers he has met and worked with. In fact, this summer Jason became engaged to fellow volunteer Laura Jordan.

Brennen-Hofmann mentions that Jason doesn't limit his volunteer time to taking calls. He also does office work, has computerized some of the office systems and even helped with fundraising. "He's taken on project after project to make the office more efficient," she praises. "He's just that kind of person —very giving."

Jason adds that his volunteer work has definitely helped him in the classroom. In his class on abnormal psychology, he could relate textbook material to his encounters with people with schizophrenia and borderline personalities. "I have first hand knowledge of the things being discussed," he says.

Jason, a senior, is planning on a career in counseling after he graduates. ■

VISUALLY SPEAKING

The Visual Arts Department's contribution to the College has a large visible impact on campus—despite it being one of the smaller academic departments (in terms of numbers of full-time faculty.)

Three years ago, Joseph Ansell became chairperson of the department, upon the retirement of Earl Hassenpflug, who had held the position for 20 years.

Ansell's goals for the department when he came to Otterbein from the University of Maryland were to increase its visibility on campus and in the community, and to build enrollment in the department. He also planned to review the curriculum. The existing strengths of the department allowed his goals to become reality.

"One of the most significant strengths of the department is its diverse faculty and the way we complement each other," says Ansell. "Al Germanson brings knowledge of non-Western art. He is a scholar of African art and has a passion for collecting it. He also has a talent for encouraging students to look within to find their inspiration."

"Joanne Miller Stichweh '67 is a wonderful role model for women students," he says. "She is the most active producing artist among the full-time faculty, which shows students the balancing act between being a producing artist and a full-time teacher."

Ansell's special strength is in the area of illustration and graphic design. He also has national and international connections through the numerous associations to which he belongs. Currently, he chairs the Education Committee for the College Art Association (a national professional association for academic artists and art historians). Ansell also writes and lectures on aspects of the history of graphic design and illustration.

In addition to three full-time faculty members, there are six adjunct faculty who teach photography, graphic design, figure drawing, art education and computer art.

The faculty recently reevaluated the core courses required of all majors to better sequence student learning within the department. The curriculum revision added graphic design/visual communications and illustration courses. The additions are in response to expressed interest from current and prospective students.

A visual arts minor, which was approved in February 1992, has brought many new students into the department. In addition to a revised curriculum, new equipment, such as easels, drafting tables, and updated computer hardware and software, has also been added each year.

"To bring more students into the department, we have encouraged a re-shifting of finances to allow for more talent awards to recruit talented prospective students," says Ansell. In addition, the department became a sponsor for the Ohio Governor's Young Art Exhibition in 1992. Scholarships are given to students competing in the show. Last year one of the top 25 award winners in the state (Mark Nagel '98) chose to attend Otterbein, notes Ansell.

All of the faculty are actively involved in recruiting students. A new recruiting brochure and an exhibits/lectures brochure were also developed to aid in reaching prospective students. At present the department has 41 majors, up from 17 in 1987.

Efforts to recognize current art major students include five endowed awards: the Bale-Roof, Frank-Hassenpflug, George R. Raica Fine Arts, Hassenpflug, and Dorothy VanSant Awards. Two honor emeritus professors and past department chairpersons; one honors the mother of the vice president for Student Affairs emeritus; and the others, friends and alumni.

Detail of the Malcolm X quilt by Penny Sisto.

A big undertaking for Ansell and the department was to increase the number of exhibits from six to nine per year, and adding a visiting artist lecture component to each exhibit. Each month a new exhibit is on display in the Dunlap Gallery at the Battelle Fine Arts Center. The attractive Fisher Gallery of Roush Hall provides a new home for displays of Otterbein's permanent collection.

"The lectures have been very well received," says Ansell. "Next year we are looking forward to holding them in a larger space to accommodate the growing attendance. Our aim in increasing the number of exhibits was to highlight the diversity of approaches to art, to the artists' backgrounds, and we've made sure there is gender parity as well as minority representation. We want to show the students and community the incredible range of what is going on in contemporary art."

The exhibits have ranged from three large-scale sculptures by artist Joseph Mannino from Carnegie Mellon University to one site-specific installation by African-American artist Andrew Scott, a Columbus resident who teaches at Central State University.

Artist Penny Sisto, who creates large fabric collages, drew a large crowd to her emotionally charged lecture about her life and how her work reflects it, as well as her commitment to broader social concerns. One of the most powerful pieces of the show, "Malcom X and the Great Fire," was acquired for the permanent collection and now hangs in the Fisher Gallery of Roush Hall.

"Occasionally the College purchases a piece from an exhibition to include in its collection," explains Ansell. "We try to acquire items that broaden the representation of styles and techniques and that we can use in our classes. For instance, in Sisto's case, though we don't teach fabric classes we can discuss the social content of a piece. Students can see that art is not for art's sake alone, but also can carry a social message."

The Otterbein Collection is growing in many directions, from Hassenpflug's notable contributions expanding the West African art collection, to Japanese holdings donated by Lillian Frank and some of the contemporary pieces now being added.

"Earl made significant contributions to the department," says Joanne Stichweh, who has taught at Otterbein since 1979. "He left a legacy of excellence in teaching and concern for individual student development."

She cites the production and publication of a catalogue to document each piece of the collection as one of his crowning achievements. She points out that both Hassenpflug and Ansell are committed to helping students understand the value of the visual arts in realizing their own potential as socially responsible human beings.

With all of this as a foundation, Ansell is looking toward further building of the department in terms of faculty (a new faculty member will be added soon to enhance the art education component), and in terms of the number of majors and students enrolled in art courses, as well as increasing the vitality and visibility on campus. He aims to keep the exhibitions lively and provocative, keep pace with technology in the design/computer laboratory and photography darkroom and, along with the faculty, will consider adding a few courses to strengthen department offerings. One possibility is a new art history course on women artists, which grows out of Joanne Stichweh's sabbatical research. All of these improvements have made a positive impact on campus. ■

Otterbein Ranked Fourth Among Liberal Arts Colleges in Midwest Region

U.S. News and World Report this week released its rankings for the "1995 America's Best Colleges" guide. In the category of regional liberal arts institutions, Otterbein is ranked fourth in academic reputation and eighth overall out of 137 schools in the midwest region.

This is the second time in eight years that Otterbein has been included in the guide. In 1987, Otterbein was ranked eighth in the category of "smaller comprehensive colleges."

After that ranking, U.S. News and World Report changed the categories in the guide and dropped "smaller comprehensive colleges." Otterbein then was judged against a much broader range of schools. This year there were 433 institutions surveyed in the regional liberal arts category covering the four regions of the nation.

U.S. News and World Report surveyed college presidents, deans and admissions directors asking them to rate all the schools in the same category as their own institutions. The resulting reputational rankings were then combined with educational data that had been provided by the colleges themselves. These include statistics that measured student selectivity, faculty resources, financial resources, graduation rate and alumni support.

The complete rankings for regional liberal arts institutions in the midwest are: St. Mary's College (IN), Hillsdale College (MI), Marietta College, Ohio Northern University, St. Norbert College (WI), Millikin University (IL), Taylor University (IN), Otterbein, Mount Union College and Augustana College (SD).

The full survey appears in the Sept. 26, 1994 issue of U.S. News and World Report available on newsstands now.

Janet Gurney Welch retired from teaching secondary physical education after 21 years in CA. She taught for a total of 27 years.

Larry Willey completed a six-year term as district superintendent of the Council Bluffs District in the Iowa Conference. He is currently serving the Estherville United Methodist Church in Estherville, IA.

Brenda Dall Andrews continues to work as a flight attendant for United Air Lines with trips mostly to London and Alaska. She was awarded the Civilian Desert Shield and Desert Storm Medal for Outstanding Achievement in 1993 for flying U.S. troops to and from Saudi Arabia during the war.

Barbara Bennett Le Chaix and husband Joe just returned from their second trip to Russia. They escorted 45 seniors on a 15-day river cruise from Moscow to St. Petersburg.

Bernice Glor Pagliaro accepted a new position as director of special events for the athletic department at the University of California at Santa Barbara.

1962

Kaye Koontz Jones works as a liaison with Summit Institute Louisiana, long-term acute care and physical rehabilitation hospitals. Her hospital is located in Sulphur, LA, although she still lives in TX.

Kelley Boyer retired in 1992 from the Circleville City Schools after teaching math for 30 years.

Jean Poulard received the 1994 Teaching Award from Indiana University for "exemplary teaching." Both he and wife Regina Fehrens Poulard '64 are on sabbatical this fall and will be in Europe doing research for the next seven months. Both of their sons will accompany them. Johannes will study at Moscow State University in Russia, and Roger will stay in Berlin and plans to enter Otterbein in the fall of 1995.

1964

Sally Banbury Anspach joined American Greetings Card in Cleveland after 18 years in education. She is the manager of new product prototyping and catalog photographer in graphic design resources.

Harvey "Doug" Douglas has expanded his company "Information Insights" into international waters recently. He regularly assists major companies in getting market information they need to meet and understand customer needs.

John Peters was awarded the 1994 Presidential Youth Service Award for his work as the Rotary Advisor to the Daniel H.S. Interact Club. Interact performs community service projects in the Clemson community. John is working as a program coordinator in the National Dropout Prevention Center at Clemson University.

Shelia Leonard Pratt became a first-time grandmother on March 17, 1993. Her grandson's name is Bryan Matthew. She lives in Dayton, OH.

Charles Ross was promoted to director of psychological services and counseling at Oberlin College in Oberlin, OH.

Sue Drinkhouse Ward lives in Marquette, MI, with husband Ken. She is a substitute teacher and volunteers in a domestic violence shelter. She has published some interviews in the local papers.

Tom Heisey will do antique shows this summer and fall in Gates Mills, Fairhaven, Hudson and Indian Hills, OH, and be involved in other shows in Mass., Penn, and FL. His son Geoffrey recently graduated from Indiana University, and daughter Jennifer is a junior at the University of Cincinnati.

Ronald Marks, judge for juvenile and domestic relations for the District Court of the City of Virginia Beach, was re-elected chief judge for an additional two-year term.

Brent Wilson was appointed assistant vice-president/area sales manager in the company's regional office by Lawyers Title Insurance Corporation. The regional office is located in Westerville.

PROFILE

Two Alumni Have Much to Celebrate

On July 25, 1994, the Reverend Howard Ruby James '43 and Catharine Robertson James '44, celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary. Their association with Otterbein has been long and loving. Howard's 50th anniversary for graduating from Otterbein College was last year and Catharine's was this year. They met at Otterbein.

In a letter to Towers, daughter-in-law Nanci Gray James '88 says of her in-laws. . . "During their years of marriage, they have affected the lives of many and sacrificed much so all five of their sons could have a college education and some sort of musical ability, and an appreciation for sports. Three of their five sons are also Otterbein graduates, Thomas '68, Michael '71, and Robert '75, as well as two daughters-in-law, Linda '72 and myself. Tom is even a faculty member in the Mathematics and Computer Science Department."

Mike and Linda met at Otterbein, as did Tom and Nanci. It must be a family tradition. Howard and Catharine's oldest granddaughter Tammi is currently enrolled as a senior.

Howard's ministry built a new church and called him to many churches throughout Ohio. Says Nanci, "He has always believed in the basic goodness of people and that everyone has a purpose in life. After retiring from a lifetime of service to the Methodist Church, he participated in the creation of The Resource Center. The Resource Center is a place for free counseling for the chronically unemployed. Catharine's vocation has been more subtle, though no less noteworthy. Her attention to those who need a good listener, good counsel, and personal, one-on-one time has always been constant and positive.

"All the while, these past fifty years, these two people have loved and cared for each other and their family without thought of personal reward or gain. Their loving example has inspired and guided all of us in the immediate family as well as countless others whose lives they have touched." ■

Edward Bradel was promoted to associate professor of biology. He has been a biology faculty member at University of Cincinnati, Raymond Walters College since 1987.

Dale Creamer was elected to the state board of control for the Ohio High School Athletic Association. He will serve a two-year term representing the Southwestern part of Ohio.

Michael Fensler completed 10 years as senior buyer for Applied Intelligent Systems, Inc., an Ann Arbor, MI, artificial intelligence computer company.

David Holl retired after 28 years of teaching mathematics at Thomas Worthington H.S. He and wife Margaret and their children, Willy and Tatiana, live on a farm near Sunbury, OH.

Alumnus Retires His Jazz Band Baton

Phil Bovenizer '79 has stepped down as Otterbein's Jazz Lab Band director, after ten years of leadership. New faculty member of the Department of Music Jeffrey Kunkel will pick up the baton as director of the Jazz Band.

Phil took over the Jazz Lab Band in 1984 when Gary Tirey, director of bands, asked him to join the music faculty. Gary encouraged Phil saying it would be a good experience for him, and because Phil enjoyed Jazz Lab Band so much while at Otterbein, he would be a good asset.

According to Phil, the Jazz Lab Band has come a long way in the past ten years. "You get a real mix in caliber of musicians every year," he says. "Sometimes we have a strong brass section and a weak sax section, and other times we have the opposite."

Band tour has always been the highlight of every year for Phil. "We get to tour around Ohio and other states with the Concert Band. The audience is really receptive and we get to show off the band as well as Otterbein," he says.

Bovenizer said he will definitely miss band tour, especially the years the tour hits Toronto. "I will also miss working with the students and with Gary Tirey. He is the reason I've done this so long. He has always been there to support both myself and the band, to give me guidance, and to help get things done," he added.

He joined the College's Admissions staff in 1980 and served as the assistant director of admissions. He later moved to the Financial Aid Office, where he now serves as the associate director of financial aid. He is a member of the Ohio Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators, the Midwest Association of Financial Aid Administrators, and the National Association of Financial Aid Administrators.

PROFILE

Alumnus Spends Time on "The Hill"

Doug Babcock '93 spent the first half of this year rubbing elbows with the power elite of Washington. Well, there was more elbow grease than elbow rubbing.

Babcock, who is pursuing a master's degree in public administration at Ohio University, worked from January to June as an intern for Vice President Al Gore. He was in the office of Gore's Chief of Staff Jack Quinn. "I saw the vice president a couple of times a week and got to talk to him every couple of weeks," Babcock recounts.

His duties included research on various legislative issues. One of Babcock's main areas of study is resource development and management. "The vice president is very big on the environment and that was right up my alley in resource management," he says. "My experience opened a couple of doors for me in that area."

Babcock also was involved in writing speeches for Gore. He was on hand when Gore delivered one of the speeches he authored to a group of fourth graders at the Smithsonian. In addition to his speech writing duties, Babcock worked with Thurgood Marshall, Jr., son of the late supreme Court Justice, who is Gore's liaison on Capital Hill.

"Working in that office I got to run faxes to Ted Kennedy and (Representative Frank) McCloskey," he says.

Overall, Babcock says working on Capitol Hill helped him see that the process of government is much different than what is commonly depicted in the press.

"It's amazing how when you read the paper about different policies, you can question what they're doing up there. The press can make politicians seem like real demagogues and I found they were very ordinary people who really believe in what they're doing."

Following his experience on Capitol Hill, Ohio University has tapped Babcock to be a teaching assistant so he can relate his experiences through the classroom.

He hopes to return next year for another internship but hopes to find one that pays! ■ —Patti Kennedy

GATHERINGS

■ Greg Masters '87 served as alumni host for the third annual reunion of former Otterbein baseball players. The players and their families enjoyed a cook-out at Coach Richard Fishbaugh's on Friday, June 24. The following day, the players hit the links at Blackhawk Golf Course. This event continues to grow in popularity and many thanks go to Greg for his leadership in making it a success.

■ Alumni College was bigger and better this year with the highest attendance ever. More than 90 alumni and their families returned to the College July 22-24 to continue their education with 12 intriguing courses being offered.

For the first time, Alumni College included a field trip. Participants in the "Canals of Ohio" class traveled to Franklin and Fairfield counties and toured the remnants of the Ohio and Erie Canals.

Nationally renowned guest speaker, Dr. Ronald P. McCaffrey, enthralled the audience with an after dinner lecture on Friday evening. McCaffrey, professor of medicine at Boston University and chief of the medical oncology section of Boston University Medical Center, discussed the "Potentials of Gene Therapy."

Many thanks go to Lillian Frank H'68 for hosting a reception for Alumni College participants at her lovely home on Saturday evening.

On Sunday, about 15 people made the trip to historic Roscoe Village near Coshocton, Ohio, to round out the fun-filled weekend.

Plans are already underway for next year's Alumni College. Also, Alumni College events will be held in Florida Feb. 17-18 and at the St. Mary's Otterbein Home on April 22, 1995.

ORDER NOW FOR CHRISTMAS!

This 14-count cross-stitch kit (and one of Towers) is available through Puckerbrush Inc. (Valparaiso, IN) for $10. To order call Greg Johnson at 823-1400 or cross-stitch chair Janet Ramsey '42.

Oregon Otters frolicked in Portland in early August. After a delicious dinner, Executive Director of Development Jack Pietila '62 updated the group on the Otterbein of today and shared its vision for tomorrow through a video entitled "The Campaign for Otterbein." Those who enjoyed the festivities and fellowship were (pictured l. to r.): Jack Pietila '62, Dorothy Ward, Robert Ward '40, Millie Miller, Jim Miller H'75, Elanor Boucher Smith '56, John Smith, Mary Jean Barnhard Pietila '61, Judith Lovejoy Foote '58, and Wendel Foote '60. Many thanks to the Footes, who served as alumni hosts for the event.

COMING UP

■ Alumni College at the Otterbein-Lebanon Retirement Community

will be held on Saturday, Oct. 1. We hope many of the residents will take advantage of this on-site, lifelong education opportunity. Vice President for Student Affairs Bob Gatti will discuss "Look Who's Coming to College: A New Understanding of Today's Students" and Professor Philip Barnhart will talk about "Discoveries in Astronomy: What It Means for Us." All are welcome to enjoy these two informative sessions.

■ Louisville area alumni are invited to attend an evening with Otterbein President C. Brent DeVore on Oct. 3. The event will be held at the home of Dr. Roger Bell '59, who will serve as alumni host.

■ The annual James V. Barnhard II Scholarship Golf Outing is set for Monday, Oct. 10 at the Lakes Country Club in Westerville.

■ This winter, Florida residents are invited to watch the Lady Cardinals take on area teams. They will travel south to take on Eckerd College in St. Petersburg on Nov. 28 in a 5:15 p.m. game. A game against Florida Southern University in Lakeland follows on Nov. 29 at 7:30 p.m. The tour will be complete with a game against Rollins University in Orlando on Dec. 1 at 7:30 p.m. Plan now to cheer the Lady Cardinals to victory.

■ Take a trip to London this Christmas! The London Experience will travel to Great Britain from Dec. 6-20. The cost is $1795. To check for available space, contact Dean VanSant, 823-1305.

Experience the Thrill and Peacefulness of Russia

Barb Bennett Le Chaix '61 and Joe Le Chaix (whose three children attended Otterbein) just returned from their second trip to Russia with Bolshoi Cruises. Their first trip was for a personal experience and determining if this trip was right for the community (Ahwatukee) for which they organize host tours of all types. In July, 1994 they hosted a group of 45 from their small retirement community in Phoenix, AZ, on the Bolshoi Cruise which includes three days each in Moscow and St. Petersburg and seven days cruising various Russian waterways with stops in small villages and towns along the way. Following is a narrative of their experience and an idea of what you can expect on this exciting cruise.

"It was a true experience for everyone. This certainly is not a luxury cruise (like Caribbean-style); however, the M/S Dostoyevsky is a very clean, comfortable small ship with all the necessities. Each cabin has a private bathroom and there is a doctor on board for general sickness and emergencies. The food is Russian cuisine, which no one considered gourmet; however, it was tasty. Even our most finicky eater was satisfied.

"An outstanding feature on this cruise is the entertainment. We were able to see the Moscow Circus, a ballet in Moscow or St. Petersburg, and a folk performance. In addition, on the ship in the music salon while cruising the river, entertainers from the Bolshoi Musical Theater presented concerts every evening. Seven classical entertainers including the top balalaika artist in Russia thrilled our audience. A folk musical group also entertained in the lounge.

"This trip is an easy trip for the adventurous traveler who wants to experience all they can of a country that is in a state of change. Everything is not beautiful. The country is trying to rebuild and revive in every way. It is a definite thrill seeing Red Square, Moscow's Kremlin, the Hermitage Museum, and the spectacular cathedrals and palaces. Cruising along the waterways is calm and beautiful. With all these great sights, the most memorable and exciting experiences are visiting the small villages and towns. This is where you get to be with the beautiful Russian people. Being invited into a family's humble home for tea and crepes and conversing in limited English makes you realize that they are as interested in meeting Americans as you are to meet them. It's a definite that the cold war was between governments not between people."

Join Dr. Pat Lewis, Otterbein professor of business and economics and leading authority of Russian history and affairs, in July 1995 for a Russian cruise and adventure!

In Honor of our Upcoming Sesquicentennial. . .

Richard Glass '55 has agreed to provide Otterbein alumni with some exercises for the brain.

Richard has prepared a series of six Otterbein Sesquicentennial crossword puzzles which will appear periodically in Towers over the next three years (until our Sesquicentennial year of 1997). We hope these puzzles provide you with some entertainment, information, nostalgia and intrigue as Otterbein prepares for its 150th anniversary.

Richard, a Westerville resident, is a retired minister of the East Ohio Conference of the United Methodist Church, and a former member of the Five College Commission in Ohio.

His interests include cycling, gardening, classical music, photography, foreign travel, and more recently, creating crossword puzzles. He prepares the puzzles on his computer at home.
