LRC technician Carl Scott caught Old Man Winter as he covered Alum Creek with snow early one March morning. Thin layers of ice bedecked the trees until the sun rose and melted the wintry scene.

Frederick Frank, Dean of Students at Washington and Jefferson College, Washington, Pa., was hired as a consultant by the Task Force Committee. He reported to the Committee at their March 29th meeting results of the housing questionnaire and student interviews, and suggested some alternate solutions to the student needs.

Task Force Committee Studies Housing Patterns

For quite some time students at Otterbein College have felt a need for "greater opportunities for social interaction between men and women and for individual and small group privacy in residence hall life."

Last June a visitation proposal designed to answer this need came through the Campus Regulations Committee and the College Senate to the Board of Trustees. The proposal was not accepted, however, because the Trustees felt that the proposal showed "inconclusive evidence of the ability of visitation to achieve stated goals and inconclusive evidence of its impact on areas vital to sustaining the College and its programs."

Upon the Executive Committee's recommendation a Task Force Committee was appointed to study Otterbein's housing patterns and to recommend to the Board of Trustees at its June, 1974 meeting, a long-range plan for housing. Provisions were made to hire a consultant who would lead the Committee in a thorough study of visitation and/or alternative solutions to the existing problem.

The Committee, chaired by trustee Robert B. Bromeley, includes Edwin Roush, alumni trustee; Richard

Questionnaire Survey

Frederick Frank, Dean of Students at Washington and Jefferson College, Washington, Pa., was hired as a consultant. He devised a questionnaire to be sent to parents, students, alumni, ministers, faculty/staff, and administration. The questionnaire tested attitudes in the areas of visitations, College rules, and coeducational housing. Frank made his report to the Task Force Committee at their first meeting on March 29th.

He stressed that the questionnaire could not be used to indicate what type of visitation program would work, but it could give the Committee an indication of what the majority of the respondents' attitudes were.

Analysis of the questionnaire indicated all groups rejected complete denial of access to rooms by a student of the opposite sex, and all groups agreed that a limited visitation program where the College plays the significant role is acceptable. It also showed that students, faculty-administration, and recent alumni rejected the statement "There are very limited circumstances where a college might permit visitations," while parents and older alumni accepted it. On this item ministers had no prevalent point of view.

In concluding his presentation on the questionnaire Dean Frank commented, "there seems to be more agreement among the constituencies than disagreement. The strongest agreement is in principle; the strongest disagreement is in practice."

The Task Force Committee is made up of representatives from the Board of Trustees, administration, faculty, students and Parents Committee. Shown above are Chairman Robert Bromeley, trustee; Bill Smucker, student trustee; and Pam Pauley, student. Listening in the background is Elmer N. Funkhouser, Jr., Chairman of the Board of Trustees.

Student Interviews

Dean Frank personally interviewed twenty-five students from those filling out the questionnaire to learn their attitudes and opinions on social issues and living situations. Equal numbers of students said they thought College rules governing dorm life were fair and unfair.

Frank also questioned them about living in suites (where four students share three rooms — two bedrooms and a joint living room) or the present dorm rooms with nearby lounges shared by many students. Seventy-five percent of those asked indicated they preferred the suite system.

The Task Force was interested in exploring alternative solutions to the need for greater opportunities for social interaction between men and women and for individual and small group privacy in residence hall life, including adding more date rooms in the dorms or altering dormitories to set up suite systems. Presently studies are underway to determine costs for the alternatives. Once these figures are available, the Task Force will meet to discuss them so that they can make their recommendations to the Board of Trustees in June.

Dean Frank was questioned about Washington and Jefferson's visitation program, and his responses were favorable and encouraging. He added that from his observations and discussions with Otterbein students during his appointment, he found them to be good students with standards and high goals. "You can be proud of your students," he stated. "There will always be a small number in any group who will abuse the system. But the largest part of your student body is worthy of your confidence and trust."

WORLD CAMPUS AFLOAT OFFERS SUMMER GRADUATE PROGRAM

Teachers and other adults who want to do graduate study or upper division undergraduate work can do it this summer aboard World Campus Afloat, a fully accredited shipboard collegiate program operated by Chapman College through its Division of International Studies. The 35-day cruise will tour the Pacific area with stops at Honolulu; Pusan, Korea; Hong Kong and Manila.

Participants can earn up to six hours of credit, according to Dr. Chester L. Addington, chairman of Otterbein's Education Department and visiting faculty member for the WCA summer program. Doctor Addington will teach two sections of "Teachers and schools around the World," one for beginning teachers with less than one year experience, and the other for more experienced teachers.

Courses in International Education and Special Instruction with special emphasis on comparative education systems, speech pathology and language disorders, early childhood education, and learning disabilities will be offered in conjunction with the usual WCA course offerings.

World Campus Afloat emphasizes international and cross-cultural affairs within the context of a liberal arts education. Field experience at each port enhances classroom work and includes seminars and tours with foreign educators, students, artists, governmental representatives and the common citizen.

The ocean liner was converted to a fully equipped campus including classrooms, laboratories, a library, audio-visual equipment, theater, dining room, student union, offices, bookstore and medical facilities. The floating campus also has many recreational facilities to augment the academic program.

Participants will depart from Los Angeles June 17 and return July 24. Prices are as yet indefinite because of the oil shortage, but they can be obtained by contacting Dr. William Amy, coordinator for WCA, c/o Otterbein College, Westerville, Ohio 43081.

OTTERBEIN HOSTS WOODROW WILSON FELLOW

Henry H. Patton, noted international businessman and financier, became Otterbein's first Woodrow Wilson Senior Fellow during the week of April 1st. With this special program, sponsored by the Lilly Endowment, the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation hopes to "establish better communication between liberal arts colleges and the world of practical affairs, including business, industry, the professions and government."

Mr. Patton met with classes of various disciplines, student associations and several informal groups. On April 4th Henry Patton and William Carr, Huntington National Bank International Finance Director, held a panel discussion for students, faculty and the general public.

Currently Mr. Patton is a semi-retired director of Anglo Co., Ltd.; Geokinetics, Inc.; Robert Garrett & Sons, Inc.; Straus Exploration, Inc.; and United Nuclear Corp. From 1962-1969 he was vice president of Deltec Panamerica S.A. and Director of Deltec Securities Corporation. Prior to 1962, he was associated with a number of major investment banking concerns. He received his degree magna cum laude in 1935 from Princeton University.

New Departmental Scholarships Offered

Almost fifty departmental scholarships from departments not presently awarding scholarships will be offered to new students entering Otterbein beginning this fall. Each department will select three recipients for the four-year scholarships within thirty days of the students' applications.

"The scholarships are meant to recognize high school achievement and to encourage early admissions," explained Morris Briggs, Dean of Admissions. "They are not based upon financial need."

Each scholarship is valued at $800 and will be awarded in yearly grants of $200 providing the student remains in good academic standing.

Classes To Include Area Golden-Agers

Golden agers, 65 years or older, will be attending classes free of charge starting this spring at Otterbein College, according to a recent announcement by Academic Dean Roy H. Turley.

The senior citizens will choose from twenty courses in the area of politics, history, science, literature or religion on a space available basis.

"We have set no geographical limits, and the registration form requires only name, address, age and phone number with a space for comments about background and interest," commented Dean Turley.

Individuals interested in participating in this new community service offering of the College should contact the Admissions Office as soon as possible.

New Director of Development Named

The board of trustees and president of Otterbein College recently announced the appointment of Kenneth L. Hoyt as director of development.

Mr. Hoyt, in his newly created position, will be primarily responsible for the College's annual fund and corporate development program, according to Vice President for Development, Elwyn M. Williams.

A graduate of Baldwin-Wallace College, Hoyt served his alma-mater in a variety of capacities the most recent being assistant to the vice president for administration and director of placement. He has done graduate work at Kent State University in journalism and public relations.

Current Students Aid Admissions

Twenty-five students have been selected to serve on the newly-created Host and Tour Committee, a group organized by the Admissions Office to assist prospective students when visiting the College.

Selected on the basis of their enthusiasm, involvement in campus activities, and communications skills, Host and Tour members attend a one-day workshop where they are familiarized with current admissions procedures and necessary information about academic departments and programs.

"The Host and Tour committee will provide the opportunity for prospective students and their families to meet Otterbein students on an informal basis," commented program coordinator Susan Dykes.

Twenty-Year Employees Reminisce About Years At Otterbein

by Zoe McCathrin

Twelve of the fourteen Otterbein College administration, faculty and staff members who have been employed at the College for twenty or more years gathered at the home of Otterbein College President Thomas J. Kerr, IV, on Sunday, February 24, to share a commemorative dinner. Program for the evening was a discussion of their years at Otterbein.

“You, and others like you, are the heart of Otterbein,” Dr. Kerr said, addressing the group. “Through you, we have realized the stability of the College and have experienced long-term growth.” Calling the employees a vital part of the history of Otterbein, Dr. Kerr asked that each of the assembled guests comment on his/her Otterbein experiences.

Dr. Harold Hancock (29 years of service), senior professor and longest term employee on the active faculty told of coming to Otterbein in 1944. “I took a train to Columbus and a bus to the campus — there was a gas shortage then, you know — history repeats itself. My starting salary was $2400, but then, top salary was $3000. I stayed in a rooming house for $4 a week, and for $1 extra, had my laundry done. How much do you suppose student expenses were? About $541 a year, or, if you were extravagant, you could spend as much as $608. The student body had 285 members and there were 35 faculty members, with five of them part-time.”

Marilyn Day (21 years of service), who was in Dr. Hancock’s class, referred to her own experiences in “Dr. John’s” (as students have long called the professor) room. “I fell out of my seat in his class one day, and he didn’t let me forget it,” she laughed. “I came to Otterbein to teach for two years, and in those days I thought the Association Building was very large. We also thought panty raids were terribly significant!”

Dr. Walter Stout (28 years of service), second in seniority as an Otterbein employee, came to Westerville in 1946 to join in Dr. Putnam’s practice. “At the end of the first year,” Dr. Stout explained, “my nurse and I found we had a little money left in the budget and she suggested we order an extra carton of cotton balls. I agreed, thinking of a carton as being about one foot by one foot. Well, some weeks later I received a frantic call that a “semi” truck was outside our office our office delivering our office delivering our cotton balls in a carton six feet by four feet by two feet. In the old health center, the whole top floor was cotton balls. It took us five years to get rid of them.”

Dr. James Grissinger (24 years of service) told his fellow employees that the snowy evening reminded him of a Christmas story and he thought of 1964 when, on the 100th anniversary of the Ben Hanby song, “Up on the Housetop,” it was decided to light the campus Christmas tree for the first time. Special guest for the occasion was the niece of Ben Hanby who was to give the signal and the tree would be lighted in honor of the beloved songwriter. “All went perfectly,” Dr. Grissinger said, “but the real story was what didn’t happen. I had tried to arrange to have the signal that would light the tree travel all around the world, just as the songs of Benjamin Hanby did. I called the phone company and explained ‘I’d like to talk to myself around the world.’ I explained that a call could go from here to — Hong Kong and maybe then New Delhi and then Rome and Paris, etc. The engineer said, yes, they could do that. ‘Good,’ I said, ‘then let’s send the signal around the world.’ ‘Can’t be done,’ he replied. We haggled for weeks and I tried and tried to arrange it. It’s one of my saddest experiences — it would have been just beautiful, but they couldn’t figure out how to do it.”

John Becker (20 years of service), college librarian, said “it was the middle of May, 1957, when I heard it was going to be Senior Night Out. The oldtimers know that’s when the pranks occur. I prepared. I immediately go home and I get a good nap. I come back to the library at 10 pm, closing time. I am going to guard our wealth of knowledge. At the same time, I will prepare my annual report for the Trustees. Fine! At about 6 am, with the first rays of light, I look out the window and there’s Tink Sanders, Marion Morris, Don Busic and the others rolling the logs back into place in the parking lot and getting everything ship shape. The library is beautiful, and I congratulate myself.

“I go out and talk to several of the seniors who tell me of their antics of the night before. They generously offer to take me home and John Howe, John Freeman, Al Koepke and others drive me to my house. I have a good breakfast and a nice warm bath and at 8 am, I am back at the library. Everyone is smiling at me and when I walk into the library, there it is! One hundred and twenty-eight place settings at the old library tables — napkins, all the china, silver and they've even got the salt and pepper shakers. The students had really taken care of me — they let me know they could have done anything they wanted to."

Peter B. Baker (24 years of service) came to Otterbein as a ministerial student in 1946. "I had a job washing dishes in the dining room, which was in a girl's dorm. I was washing pots and pans one evening and I was very bored — so I took one of the pots and put it over my head. I was singing at the top of my voice when I heard a knock on the pot. When I removed it, there was Mrs. Gilbert Mills, the housemother, who explained they could hear my singing on the third floor!

Ann Davis (26 years of service) remembers the 1959 flood when she went to work in the basement of Towers Hall, and with Red Moreland, sloshed in the water-covered office with her boots on and went to work. "The heating plant had been built in 1957 and Sanders Frye wanted to arrange it so that it wouldn't get water there. When we had that flood, the water was six inches from the door!"

Helen Clymer (21 years of service) says that her most memorable moment was the same flood. "I had taken my son to school and was almost flooded out in the car. I hurried over to the College and some people had already begun to bring their children in. I decided that we wouldn't be able to manage pre-school that day, so I called as many mothers as I could and told them their children had best stay home. Others who were still there took their children with them and I was left with two little fellas. I loaded them into my car and drove and drove up and down and back and forth to get through the streets until I finally got them to their door!"

Forest "Red" Moreland (27 years of service) said "There hasn't been a story tonight that hasn't reminded me of another story. But one thing that happened to me at Otterbein really floored me. It was back in 1969. Mrs. Moreland told me several weeks before the annual alumni luncheon that she thought we should go. I replied, 'certainly not' because 'I'm not an alumnus.' Charma, our daughter, came home with new clothing for both of us, and when I asked why, she said it was for the alumni lunch-ly,' he slurred. 'But why didn't you back up off the grass when you realized you were on the campus?' I asked him. 'Madame,' he said sternly, 'did you want me to hit something?'"

Robert "Moe" Agler (21 years of service) recalled the night when a small Kentucky church school which he understood had been scheduled for a JayVee practice game, arrived in several busloads with fans and cheerleaders.

eon. Well, finally I agreed to go, saying that as soon as we could, we would leave, because I felt conspicuous. All of a sudden, the speaker called my name. I stumbled up and they made me an honorary alumnus. It was a great honor, and my highlight at Otterbein."

Joanne VanSant (26 years of service) laughed as she recalled being called by the Westerville police one night about 3:30 am because a very drunk man had driven all over the lawn of the main campus in his car. Down she went to the police station. "I had already seen the tire marks all around the grass in a crazy pattern and I asked the fella why he had kept on going when he realized he was on the lawn. 'Madame, I would not do harm intentional-

We had to grab up a team and referees because we thought they were playing the JayVee in practice, but they came for a full-fledged varsity game!"

Bert Horn (22 years of service), an Otterbein grad, remembered when John Wells was still on the faculty and they ordered some testing forms from O.S.U. "The girl who took the order asked John how to bill the tests, and he said to bill the treasurer. We got the invoice addressed to 'Bill, the Treasurer.'"

In spite of the many humorous memories, each of the twelve honored guests at the dinner emphasized that the most significant experiences have been the relationships with people that they have established over the years at Otterbein.

Spring Sports Squads Underway

OTTERBEIN sports teams are getting into the "spring" of things as all four squads are in the thick of Ohio Athletic Conference play.

The baseball squad of Coach Dick Fishbaugh, which was rained out of its first four encounters, opened the season with a 2-0 victory over Ohio Wesleyan University. The diamond squad is enjoying its initial season of play on an innovative new baseball field.

Designed by Head Coach Dick Fishbaugh, the diamond was excavated with a sand and tile base under the sod as well as a one percent grade from dead center field to home plate for increased drainage — something it looks like the Cards may need this year. The field, which also has a one percent slope from the middle of the field to the foul lines, takes on a "turtle back" effect.

In tennis, if Head Coach Frank Dustman has a puzzled look on his face, it's probably because he's wondering where many of his returning lettermen have gone. Coach Dustman has been forced to rebuild his squad after a mass exodus of three singles players and a solid doubles performer left with only three returning singles starters and one doubles unit.

Although two of last year's three All-OAC performers have graduated, sophomore honoree Gary Condit returns to the golf squad with three other lettermen to make the links outlook bright. Under the guidance of Head Coach Moe Agler, the Cardinals will shoot to improve on last season's fifth place regular season finish.

On the track scene, Dr. Bud Yost returns at the helm of the Otterbein unit after last year's impressive 9-2 dual meet record. Returning to the squad are 22 lettermen and 14 performers who placed in the conference last year.

Cardinals End Basketball Season On Upswing

After a disappointing beginning which saw Otterbein's basketball record sink to 2-8, the squad rallied to win nine of its last 13 games.

The Cardinals registered an impressive defeat over "giant" Wright State University, 70-64, and narrowly missed knocking off Ohio Athletic Conference co-champion Muskingum, 62-61.

In the OAC tournament, Otterbein edged arch-rival

Capital, 57-56, in the first game, but fell to eventual tourney champ Wittenberg, 66-65.

Otterbein's two outstanding junior forwards, Mike Hays and Bob Deckard, both received all-conference honors for their efforts. Deckard, a 6-4 native of Gahanna, led the squad in scoring with a 16.3 average and was named to the all-conference second team for the second straight year. A 6-4 Columbus Northland product, Hays led the squad in rebounding with a 9.0 average and appeared on the OAC honorable mention list for the second straight season.

Elsewhere on the winter sports scene, Otterbein's track squad shattered six indoor records. Three were broken by senior Guy Dittoe in the 1,000, 600, and 880 yard runs, while senior Jack Lintz and sophomore Roger Retherford set marks in the two-mile and 50 yd. high hurdles, respectively. The Student's Perspective

by Bernadette Zingale

OTTERBEIN is students — active, alive, involved. Otterbein is faculty — active, alive, involved. Otterbein is people. The College is a tiny melting pot of people coming from different backgrounds, colors and creeds.

In talking to present day students about religion in their lives, one finds that they are not so different from past students. Some of the issues have changed, some students still question religious beliefs, some do not, some try other religions. But most, have a need to put their faith into something bigger, more secure than anything on earth can offer. College students will always question their beliefs because they must flex their independence. Some don't ask questions because they haven't found the need to question yet. And some change religions because "variety is the spice of life" — or the dissatisfaction of it.

But the need is there, deep-

Macheras and freshman Dave Paul, eclipsed the record in the 50 yd. dash.

In wrestling, 190-pound Bill Spooner became the first Cardinal ever to place third in an Ohio Athletic Conference wrestling tournament. Spooner ended his Otterbein career with a brilliant 44-11-1 record. Also placing in the mat championships was sophomore Dan Doherty, who copped fifth place in the 167- pound class.

rooted, a tiny ache that moves all human kind to search for Something or Someone higher. Some Otterbein students believe that knowledge of a higher being comes through involvement with their fellow men. SCOPE (students concerned over people everywhere) is a community involvement program. Scope folks — all volunteers — visit the Westerville Convalescent Center, and the Columbus Juvenile Diagnostic Center. They give therapy to children afflicted with Cystic Fibrosis so their parents can take a break from the rigorous routine of caring for these children. We also have an Inner-city school cultural exchange-exploration program where students sponsor inner-city school children and take them places they otherwise would not get to see.

Evangelism is another path used by some students to get where they're going and bring other folks with them. The Campus Crusade for Christ, a non-denominational group, who seemingly regard the Bible as a "love-letter" from God have an inner urgency to foster their personal experiences with others.

People at Otterbein don't necessarily see religion as a Sunday church service. However, beautiful soul-moving services are important and respected. Who can forget an Easter service with the sun filtering through a stained glass window or a midnight Christmas service when candles are lit to welcome the Child you felt the whole world must see in those tiny points of fire.

Folks here wouldn't, couldn't abandon those time-honored rituals. They encourage people to link arms with each other. It is through each other that people find that path to Something or Someone higher. Brotherly love, you'll find alot of that around here — a deeply beautiful thing. Otterbein people — active, alive, involved.

Dr. Frank Oldt received the Alumni Association cane signifying his status as the oldest living graduate from the oldest graduating class. Doctor Oldt has led a very active life and his career is full of fascinating stories of courage and dedication. He received an Honorary Doctorate from Otterbein in 1947. His story is best told by his daughter, Mary Ruth (Mrs. David French, '31). The following is her story which he helped her compose.

Frank Oldt attended Otterbein at the time when the literary societies were in their heyday, and board and room cost $1.25 a week. He remembers the years (1891, 1893, & 1895) when Otterbein beat Ohio State in football. He was editor of Aegis and particularly enjoyed studying mathematics under Professor Miller.

Following graduation in 1901 he went to Ohio Medical College, later to become part of the Medical School of Ohio State. In addition to studying medicine he earned his board and room playing football. Although not fast he was a solid wall on defense and could figure out just where the opposing player was going to carry the ball and where he would choose to run with it. He played left end and was proud that when he was on the field no first down was made by opponents around his end.

Otterbein was still important to him and he returned frequently to the campus to attend the Student Volunteer meetings where he not only nourished his ambitions to be a medical missionary but cultivated the friendship of Ora Belle Maxwell, '06.

He went alone to China in 1905 but in 1906 Miss Maxwell met him in Japan where they were married by A. T. Howard who was later to become bishop of the United Brethren Church. Their children, Maxwell, Mary Ruth and Margaret, were born in China and all are graduates of Otterbein. Doctor Oldt's family now also includes eight grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

Mrs. Oldt died in 1938 in China but Doctor Oldt continued on in the mission field to complete six full terms and an abortive seventh when his work was finally cut short by the entry of Communist China into the Korean War. This turn of events made him an enemy alien and forced his retirement in 1951 at the age of 72.

Doctor Oldt's forty-six years as a medical missionary in China began under the regime of the Empress Dowager Tz'u Hsi and ended under the Communists. His first two terms were spent in the provincial town of Siu Lam in the delta region of the Pearl River between Canton and Hong Kong. It was a time of great political instability. Doctor Oldt was called upon not only to treat bubonic plague, smallpox and stomach-aches but political ailments as well. One overthrown governor whose execution was imminent came to him for help. Doctor Oldt led him out of town. Doctor Oldt went first in one sedan chair and the governor followed in another with the curtains tightly drawn. When they were halted at the edge of town and challenged, Doctor Oldt told the guards he was taking his patient to Hong Kong where there was a hospital and if he could not get his patient there quickly the patient "would never see again". Doctor Oldt, who has always been quick with a pun, still chuckles over this story and maintains he told the guards nothing that was not the gospel truth.

During these two terms, Doctor Oldt became convinced that much of the disease he saw could be prevented and that the greatest need was in the field of public health. Consequently, on his second furlough, 1919-1921, he obtained his doctorate in public health from Johns Hopkins University.

The three terms from 1921 to 1941 were spent in Canton applying this special training. He worked closely with the local government as well as the missions implementing many kinds of programs such as mass smallpox immunizations, maternal and child health clinics, and school health programs. He taught public health at the two medical schools in the city and also made time for research in the control of hookworm.

The program closest to his heart was the establishment of a way to practice medicine that

Pat Hingle Will Speak to Graduating Seniors

Broadway and television actor Pat Hingle will be the 1974 Commencement speaker on June 9th. Mr. Hingle's first contact with Otterbein was in 1969 when he appeared as Guest Actor in "A Man For All Seasons."

After graduation from the University of Texas in 1949, Pat Hingle went to New York and took up studies at the American Theatre Wing. His career began slowly, forcing him to take employment as a waiter at the Town Hall Club. The picture changed the following year, however, when he signed up with a year-round stock company on Long Island. After that came television, and eventually regular roles in famous Broadway productions, including his first, "End As A Man," and "Cat On A Hot Tin Roof," "Dark At the Top of the Stairs," "J. B.," "The Glass Menagerie," and "The Price."

He played Macbeth in "Macbeth" and Hector in "Troilus and Cressida" at the American Shakespeare Festival in 1961, and has appeared in such movies as "Splendor in the Grass," "The Ugly American," "Nevada Smith," and "Hang 'Em High."

would provide the population with total medical care of the most modern type at a cost within the means of the people served.

Beginnings were made and then wiped out by civil wars and by the Japanese invasion. Each beginning went a little further than the previous one. The fourth beginning, and the last to be set up, was in 1946 when Canton was reoccupied after the defeat of Japan in World War II.

As a part of the program of the Lingnan Medical School and under the city health department and experimental demonstration area was set up. Equipment was obtained from UNRRA (United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Agency), buildings and grounds were locally provided, and operating expenses were covered by the Chinese National Health Administration.

In an area of 75,000 population, district health nurses each responsible for a certain number of families had access to local clinics which could refer patients to a small local hospital which again could direct the most difficult problems to the two major hospitals in the city. Emphasis was on prevention of illness as well as its treatment. The district was used in the training of health personnel — Doctor Oldt's dream was finally coming true. He then went on his sixth furlough, 1948-49 during which time the Communists took over Canton. He hoped he could continue his work under the Communist regime and was asked to return by his colleagues in Canton. He was the last American allowed to enter Canton and was able to carry on his work for six months until the Chinese Communists entered the Korean War.

This desire to bring medical care within the reach of the entire population is an idea just now coming into its own throughout the world. Doctor Oldt was a missionary as well as a doctor. His motivation was not only that of bringing health but to contribute in his own way to bringing the Kingdom of God on earth.

Doctor Oldt likes to say that the Communists saved his life. On the routine physical check-up following his return to the United States an early cancer of the prostate was found and cured by radical surgery. During the years of his retirement his main occupation has been recording his experiences in China for his family.
