College enrollments are expected to increase by 55% between 1964 and 1970. High school enrollments are expected to increase only 19% and elementary schools by 11%. According to the U.S. Office of Education, colleges now have 4.5 million students and will have 7 million by 1970; high schools have 12 million and will have 14.3 million, elementary schools have 34.8 million and will have 38.5 million.

Otterbein has already reached the maximum enrollment under the Ten-year Plan. Increased educational demands are challenging the facilities and resources of the college. Alumni and the Evangelical United Brethren Church have been most generous. This is vital for the future of Otterbein.

NEWLY-ELECTED TRUSTEE

George H. Dunlap

The executive committee of the Otterbein College Board of Trustees has elected George H. Dunlap, chairman of the board of Nationwide Corporation, to a five year term as a trustee-at-large. He succeeds Irwin L. Clymer, '09, of Evanston, Illinois, who retired from the Board last November after serving eight years as a trustee.

Mr. Dunlap lives in Sunbury, Ohio and operates a 212 acre farm in Delaware County. He is currently a member of the Board of Nationwide Mutual, Nationwide Mutual Fire, Nationwide Life, and Nationwide General Insurance Companies. He has been a Nationwide director since 1939, and, since 1941, chairman of the board of Nationwide Mutual Insurance, the country's fourth largest auto insurer. He is also a director of eleven other firms in the Nationwide Corporation and serves on the boards of the National Casualty Company and Michigan Life Insurance Company.

A native of Harrison County in Ohio, Mr. Dunlap was formerly president of the County Board of Education and was founder of the County Farm Bureau Cooperative Association.

MAGAZINE FEATURE

The November-December issue of Consumers Digest magazine includes Otterbein College as one of nine colleges in the nation which were classed as "unknown schools, less expensive than the average 'prestige' college, which should be classed as a bargain college."

In the section on college education, Otterbein was the only Ohio college mentioned in the category of bargain colleges over $1,000 per year. The article pointed out that "the fact is, in the long run, a student will get out of college only what he puts into it and, if he is really determined to learn, he does not need a highly expensive, ivy league college with piped-in music and wood panelled dining rooms to show him the way."

The article continued, "This may best be seen by checking the listings in Who's Who in America, where graduates of state universities and small little-known, relatively inexpensive schools, overwhelmingly outnumber the ivy league and other so-called prestige institutions."

Otterbein's newest dormitory, Mayne Hall, officially opened at the beginning of the second semester as a Junior-Senior Women's Dormitory. The third new women's dorm to be built in the past eight years, Mayne Hall brings Otterbein's housing accommodations to 1,000. Official dedication is planned for Alumni Day, May 30.

"One of Our Big Problems is —

HIGHER EDUCATION

ANNUAL ALUMNI GIVING IS THE ANSWER

During 1963, all gifts to Otterbein, unless otherwise designated, were counted on the million-dollar Focus on Achievement goal. In 1964 we must resume our gifts for operating purposes.

With a record breaking enrollment of more than 1,200 students, and with each one requiring at least a $300 subsidy, we must secure from sources other than student fees approximately $360,000 for operating purposes.

The operating budget for this year is slightly over $2,000,000 with the total to be higher next year. Yes, higher education is a big problem, especially in our private colleges.

1964 CAMPAIGN UNDERWAY

The 1964 campaign for annual alumni gifts is underway. It is hoped that all alumni who do not have pledges will respond generously this year. Even those with pledges might consider making a gift for operating purposes.

ESTATE PLANNING CONFERENCE

Five years ago, Otterbein held a conference on Estate Planning and Philanthropic Giving. The conference was so successful that a similar one is planned for May 2, 1964.

Attendance will be by invitation only. All Otterbein alumni who are judges, attorneys, or trust officers of banks, as well as all members of the E.U.B. Church who are in these professions, will be invited.

The tentative program is as follows:

President Lyndon Johnson sees Higher Education as one of our big problems. The Congress of the United States likewise sees it as one of our big problems, as evidenced by the passage of the nation's largest aid-to-education bill. However, there is no Federal or State aid to colleges like Otterbein for operating purposes.

SPOTLIGHT ON SPORTS

Basketball Season

Under the capable direction of Head Coach Curt Tong, '56, the Otterbein College Basketball Team completed the first winning season in eight years with 16 wins and 5 losses. Coach Tong was runner-up in polling for Ohio Basketball Coach of the Year.

The team scored more victories than any other team in the college's history and finished third in the Ohio Conference with a record of 11 wins and 3 losses. Averaging 73 points per game the Otters held their opposition to an average of 65 points.

Don Carlos, 6 foot, 4 inch freshman center from Columbus Eastmoor, was the leading scorer in the Ohio Conference with an average of 27.2 points per game. He was a unanimous choice for the All-Ohio Ohio Conference honorary co-captain. He was also the conference's top rebounder and was second in field goal percentage and fourth in free throw accuracy.

The Otters were rated 21st in the nation in the final United Press International small college poll and Carlos was given honorable mention in the UPI's All American team for small colleges.

Otterbein's Tim Pond, also a freshman, was named to the All-Ohio Conference second team. He averaged 11.7 points per game as a guard. Other members of the starting five included Mike Grayem, a sophomore who averaged 11.2 points at forward, Bill Patterson, another sophomore forward who averaged 9.8 points per game, and Dick Reynolds, a junior guard averaging 7.5 points per game.

Gary Reynolds, only senior on the squad, was selected as honorary captain. Other letter winners were Tom Martin, Dave Bouslog and Gary Peffly.

Irvin L. Clymer, '09, who held the record for most points scored in an Otterbein basketball game with 44 points in the 1908-09 season as he led his team to a 105-33 win over Ohio Medical School, is shown with Don Carlos, Otterbein freshman sensation, who tied the record when he scored 44 points against Denison on February 11th. Carlos hit for 17 of 26 tries from the field and 10 of 11 free throws to tie the record as Otterbein defeated Denison 81-62.

The Otters defensive average of 65 points a game marked them forty-first among all small colleges in the nation. Their free throw shooting percentage of .732 was good enough for a tie for twentieth among the best free throw shooting teams in the country.

OTTERBEIN BEGINNINGS

by John Becker, Librarian and Harold B. Hancock, Professor of History

The discovery of a letter written by a student in 1850 has led to the finding of new information about the beginnings of Otterbein College. The letter written by Pearce Browne from Otterbein University was on display in a communications exhibit at the Ohio Historical Society Library three years ago when it was noticed by Dr. Harold Hancock, chairman of the Department of History and Government and John Becker, '50, Otterbein librarian. At that time permission could not be secured to disturb the exhibit in order to have the letter copied and the writer's name determined, but a month ago another appeal was successful.

Browne's letter of June 30, 1850, mentioned that he had not been well for two weeks, noted that eight or ten students had left the University because of lack of means or dissatisfaction, and requested his parents to bring him a linen coat and summer vest. Browne is not mentioned in the Alumni Directory, but he is listed among enrolled students in a list in the Religious Telescope in 1849, and he also appears in a list of students in the census of Blendon Township in July, 1850.

Research revealed that his grandfather was one of the founders of Cincinnati and that his father, the Reverend S. J. Browne, was a well-known minister in the Queen City and a writer of letters in the Religious Telescope. In January, 1850, Reverend Browne was invited to speak at the closing exercises of the University by the Otterbein Literary Society, an organization in existence prior to the Otterbein Lyceum which Garst credits as the first society. The trustees at their meeting on April 26, 1847, had already authorized the Corresponding Secretary to investigate literary societies at other universities. In the sixty-five boxes of papers of his brother, Symmes, in the Ohio Historical Society Library, was located another letter by Pearce written in 1850 and also an undated letter from Otterbein University written by his brother George in which he requested the loan of a "X" spot ($10). Pearce traveled in Europe in 1855, was married in 1857, and later worked as a printer and real estate agent.

Efforts to locate information about Browne led to an examination of the Religious Telescope, which the Otterbein Library purchased on microfilm last year through the assistance of Reverend John H. Ness, Jr., Curator-Secretary of the Historical Society of the Evangelical United Brethren Church. More printed information was found here than anywhere else about the struggle and sacrifice involved in the founding of Otterbein College.

The story began in 1845 when the General Conference approved the establishment of "an institution of learning." At the Scioto Conference on October 25, 1846, Matthew Westervelt and George W. Landon appeared to offer for $1300 the abandoned buildings of the Methodist Episcopal Blendon Seminary in Westerville. These included a three-story brick building, and a two-story frame structure with "a good bell" on eight acres of land, along with a library of 300 volumes, "apparatus," and a "choice" collection of minerals. The Conference accepted the offer, subject to investigation, and invited the Sandusky and Muskingum Conferences to participate, which they did after much debate and discussion, as their manuscript minutes show. At a meeting of the three trustees of the institution — Reverend Lewis Davis, Bishop William Hanby and Jonathan Dresbach — on December 5, 1846, in Circleville, plans were laid for opening the institution, by May 1 if sixty students could be secured. By the end of December, the Reverend Lewis Davis, the first financial agent, had received $102 in unsolicited donations and observed that his motto was, "We WILL by grace succeed."

From many persons, particularly Bishop John Russel, came opposition to the founding of such an institution which might contain "evil influences," "manufacture priests," and detract from support of missionary and other Christian enterprises. Some ministers advocated the use of a manual labor system to support needy students.

On April 26, 1847, at a meeting of the Board of Trustees, arrangements were made for the opening in September. The institution was named Otterbein University of Ohio, and William R. Griffith, a graduate of Indiana Asbury University, was named Principal. Tuition for the term in the common branches was fixed at $2.50; in higher branches at $4.00, and in languages at $5.00. Incidental fees totaled thirty-eight cents, and board and lodging were $1.25 per week. In 1850 expenses for a student for the entire term in the primary branch were estimated at less than $16.00, and they would be even lower if the student boarded in a club. In 1851 the boarding rate had been raised to $1.31 with everything provided "except candles and the cutting of wood," and students had access to the common woodpile. Depending on their course of study, students who entered in the fall of 1847 were requested to buy books in astronomy, chemistry, logic, philosophy, algebra, history, and Latin or Greek from a lengthy list.

With two instructors, Principal Griffith and Miss C. Murray, the University opened on September 1, 1847. The principal delivered a lengthy oration before eight students in which the main idea was the importance of Protestants attending Protestant institutions, and he concluded, "Today we commence our efforts, and O, let us labor and pray it be not a feeble effort." During the first year prayer and scripture were presented every morning, and there were class meetings and church almost every Sunday. Compulsory attendance at a church service was first required in 1852. By Christmas thirty-three students were in attendance, and the number increased to forty-six by spring. During its first year the University was self-supporting, the $500 in tuition money being sufficient to pay two teachers, and the fees of $600 for board operating the dining facilities successfully. A list of names of students in attendance totaling forty-six for fall and spring semesters was published in the March 15, 1848 issue of the Religious Telescope. At the closing "exhibit" in August at the Methodist Church, students presented an elaborate program of orations, declamations, and debate on such topics as "American Progress," "Christianity, the Truth Philosophy," and "Talent and Application." An observer reported that the orations were in style, "little if any, inferior to that of Anthony's over the dead body of Caesar."

During its first five years the University gradually became stronger. By the end of its first year eighty-one students had been in attendance at one time or another; in 1849, eighty attended, and in 1850, seventy-five. The list of names of students in attendance in the academic year 1848-49 totaling 63 gentlemen and 26 ladies was published in the Religious Telescope and is not in the Alumni Directory. The session in the summer of 1849 closed five weeks early because two cases of cholera appeared in the village. A bill to incorporate Otterbein University was framed in 1851, and it included a provision that degrees could not be conferred until property holdings amounted to $10,000. In 1849 the staff totaled four: President William Davis; William R. Griffith, Principal and teacher of language; S. S. Dillon, a former student, instructor in mathematics, and Miss Sylvia Carpenter, who was in charge of the Female Department. Male students in 1851 lived in the "tavern house" formerly occupied by a Mr. Free, which had been purchased by Reverend Slaughter and nicknamed the "Slaughter House." Music began at Otterbein with an announcement in January, 1852, that young ladies would be instructed in this skill for an extra fee. Probably the first organization for young ladies was a female Auxiliary Missionary Society in July, 1852. The real birth of science occurred presumably in October, 1852, when Professor Haywood announced the purchase of apparatus such as an air pump and galvano-magnetic equipment and that lectures in a different science would be given each term, although "apparatus" belonging to Blendon Seminary had been purchased along with the original buildings.

John Becker, '50, College Librarian, and Dr. Harold B. Hancock, Chairman of the History Department are pictured as they study early manuscripts in the microfilm machine.

Benjamin Hanby was active in student life. His observations on the religious life on campus were printed at some length in the Religious Telescope of April 23, 1851. As secretary of the Otterbein Lyceum, in July, 1851, he appealed for contributions from students for books and for money for a bell. He led the list of pledges for both purposes, contributing $30 for the bell and promising to provide books valued at $40 for the library. His remarks were fully reported. As President of the "First Division" of the Otterbein Lyceum, he also helped frame obituary notices concerning the death of two students in 1852.

Thus the foundations of the Otterbein College of today were laid by Bishop William Hanby, Reverend Lewis Davis and other church leaders. An editorial in the Religious Telescope of 1849 compared the influence of the institution to a small fountain from which might come streams and rivers from whose banks thousands might drink, or a lonely star around which others may cluster to form a nucleus from which might fly torches in all directions. Otterbein College is still trying to live up to these hopes, and as the Reverend Lewis Davis said, "We WILL by grace succeed."

Distinguished Service Award Recipients

The Founders' Day observance on Monday, April 27, will feature the presentations for the first time of a Distinguished Service Award.

This award is given by Otterbein College to individuals who have rendered distinguished service to Otterbein. Such service might include faithful service as an employee of the College, persons who have brought favorable attention to the College through their connection with Otterbein, as well as distinguished service in financial campaigns, special projects or programs on behalf of the College.

Recipients of the award in 1964 are: Ed Begley, Carl A. Copp, Ray W. Gifford, Joe P. Hendrix and John F. Smith.

Ed Begley

ED BEGLEY

Ed Begley was named the Best Supporting Actor of 1962, receiving the Oscar for his performance of Boss Finley in MGM's film version of Tennessee Williams' "Sweet Bird of Youth". His faultless Oscar winning performance culminated a career that spans most of his lifetime.

Ed tried his hand in every imaginable area of show business during his teenage years, including working fairs, carnivals, circuses, and a brief fling in vaudeville. When he reached young manhood he was prepared as one could be for his chosen profession.

In the 1930's, Mr. Begley turned to radio and began a career that was to span 12,000 broadcasts on such shows as "Charlie Chan", "The Aldrich Family", "Family Doctor", and "Official Detective."

Ed Begley is perhaps best known for his outstanding portrayals in several award-winning modern dramas. In 1947 he appeared as "Joe Keller" in ALL MY SONS, Arthur Miller's first big play which won the Drama Critics' Circle Award. In 1954, the role of "Matthew Harrison Brady" in INHERIT THE WIND, brought the Donaldson Acting Award. Later outstanding stage performances include his brilliant portrayals of "W. O. Gant" in LOOK HOMEWARD ANGEL and "Senator Orin Knox" in ADVISE AND CONSENT.

In addition to an active stage career, Ed Begley has appeared in numerous movies, and in recent years many major TV programs. Television appearances in recent years include performances on "Dr. Kildare", "Naked City", "The Defenders", "The Dick Powell Show", "Empire", "Ben Casey" and "Cain's 100."

In 1963, February 28 through March 2, Academy Award winner Ed Begley was guest star in the Otterbein College Theater production of "JB" by Archibald MacLeish. Because he found time in a busy schedule to come to Otterbein and guest star in this production and because of his warm and cordial manner with students and townspeople alike, Otterbein College will confer a Distinguished Service Award upon Mr. Begley at the Founders' Day Convocation.

SPOTLIGHT ON

Ralph F. Gibson, '30

Gas utility management has been the field of Ralph F. Gibson, '30, president of Intermountain Gas Company, Boise, Idaho, for more than 30 years. He assumed the presidency of Intermountain in 1956 when, as he puts it, the organization "had no customers, no plant, no money and no employees." Intermountain Gas Company is now a prosperous and growing utility, and distributes natural gas throughout southern Idaho.

From 1934 to 1940, Gibson was General Manager of Associated Gas and Electric Company at Van Wert, Ohio. From 1940-50, he was General Manager of Associated Gas and Electric at Wilmington, North Carolina. He joined Ebasco Services, Inc., in New York as a gas consultant in 1950 and participated in sales programs for a number of electric, gas and combination utilities.

In 1953-54, Mr. Gibson and his family lived in Greece where he was a utility consultant for that nation. He coordinated 27 existing utilities and 400 new proposed systems into five major corporations. Gibson joined Fish Service and Management Corporation of Houston, Texas, in March, 1955, and established the Pacific Northwest Pipeline Corporation office in Seattle. He is a director of Pacific Coast Gas Association and Boise Industrial Foundation. He and his wife, the former Betty Ann Owens of Van Wert, Ohio, have two children, Susan, 21, and Ralph, 16.

Virgil O. Hinton, '34

The first of the year, Virgil O. Hinton, '34, completed twelve years service on the Canton, Ohio, Board of Education. A former Canton school teacher himself, now practicing law, Hinton lays the success for the Canton school program at the feet of the teachers and administrators.

"I am impressed with the sincerity of purpose and concern of teachers for the children — the way they assemble to find better ways to do things and to discuss problems—they are not frivolous," he said.

Along with his service to the public schools, Mr. Hinton has been a member of the Canton Recreation Board, trustee of First E. U. B. Church, and is currently a member of the Otterbein Board of Trustees.

Benjamin F. Bean, x'07

Rev. B. F. Bean, x'07, sits at his desk in his home in Liberty, Indiana, answering some of the letters he has received from friends congratulating him on his ninetyeth birthday. He was featured in The Palladium-Item and Sun-Telegram, Richmond, Indiana newspaper on his birthday, February 6.

Rev. Bean, an Evangelical United Brethren minister, served seven years as a missionary in China before serving rural churches in Indiana. He retired from the ministry in 1943.
