of otterbein . . .

we dedicate this volume to dr. louis a. weinland who gave the most and best of his life to otterbein...his memory will continue far beyond anything that we might write...as friend, adviser, companion and instructor

dr. louis a. weinland

in memoriam

"dad" moon

as fine in life as in his memory in death . . . he will remain forever a grand tradition.

russell shaeffer

from among us . . . he will yet be forever with us because of his humility before his god, his exemplary life.

j. p. west

grand in word and deed . . . faithful, loyal and generous . . . we could know only little of his life, and yet by those things he is perpetuated.

it is those people who do the smaller jobs that are remembered the longest . . . by their services to otterbein and her students are they carving themselves a place in the memories of many . . .

by the students is the college
made and maintained. .to them she has given four memorable years with which to enrich the rest of their lives. . .together they comprise a memory that will endure beyond vision

then came the bonfire before the first home football game . . . fences were dismantled . . . woodpiles shook at their danger . . . even the blockheads wore hats . . . for the freshmen were on the lookout for wood . . . it was a bonfire for all to behold . . . of course, it couldn't compare with those that had gone before, but it was all right for a bunch of freshmen . . . social events for the year included the freshman girls' all-campus tea . . . the freshman-junior banquet . . . final event of the freshman year . . . the freshman girls' cantata . . . and so they have entered college . . . they have done themselves a good job . . . they have produced athletic teams that were outstanding . . . they have filled positions with efficiency that belied their youth . . . they have had a grand year at otterbein . . . may their next three be as successful and happy . . .

class of 1939 . . . officers . . . paul cooley, president . . . caroline krehbiel, vice president . . . mary beth cade, secretary . . . paul ziegler, treasurer . . . led last year by president briggs . . . in their freshman year they did the expected and copped scrap day honors by winning the sack rush and the tug of war . . . this year they accomplished the unexpected and immortalized themselves by again taking the river pull . . . by their own statement their greatest accomplishment in the year of 1936 was the engineering of the new freshman class into the mysterious rites of college life . . . besides showing the underclass youngsters the necessity of having a pull, the women of the class gave the freshman girls a lesson in how not to appear in public . . . flour daubed and pig-tailed newcomers were paraded ignominiously about the streets . . . just an old college custom . . .

back row . . . f. griffith, g. burdge, r. mc intyre, d. norris, burton, tryon, t. g. johnson, denbrook, light, varian, carter, lambert. second row . . . voorhees, m. johnson, cade, fox, f. hedding, f. peters, a. peters, hubbard, street, rosensteel, steiner, gillespie, simoni, saltz, billman. seated . . . finley, j. moomaw, van dervort, hoffman, molesworth, r. mills, love, hughes, emery, ehrlich, c. krehbiel, day.

a noble experiment during the freshman year of this class was the initiation of the freshman commission . . . so well did the members of this class carry off the duties connected with this regulative body that it has been adopted as a permanent organization on the campus . . . this spirit of cooperation has been just as evident in all the undertakings of the members of this class . . . they have proved themselves to be worthy of the otterbein traditions . . . to them we bequeath the job of preparing next year's sibyl . . . heaven help them . . . and for them we wish all the success that may come to any class at otterbein . . . may they be worthy . . .

"In a quiet, peaceful village—" sang the graduates of the class of 1932 as they were assembled on the steps of the Association Building for the final part of the graduation ceremonies. These seniors had listened to the commendations and advice of the speakers. They had slowly walked across the stage to receive their diplomas, and had earned the right to shift the tassel on their mortar-board caps. With the last words of the love song came the clear notes of the bugle, taps . . . and then all was over.

Peg looked down and realized that she and Bob were holding hands. As she glanced at him, he slowly smiled and they broke away with a final little embarrassed squeeze. They had been such good friends in school; chapel pals really, for they had sat next to each other for four years. The time they had spent sitting beside each other in the chapel now seemed so short and yet so much a part of her life that she was rather shocked at the thought of its suddenly coming to an end. For a tiny moment she wished that they could have been more than just chapel pals, that they might have dated—and then she smiled as she thought how well Bob would do in life with his serious sincerity.

"Well, Bob, I guess it's all over now. I'm going to miss school frightfully, all the kids and everything; some of them we'll probably never see again," said Peg.

"And so will I. Gee, it's been fun, hasn't it? I've enjoyed knowing you, Peggy, and I hope you have all sorts of luck in life."

"Thanks Bob, and good luck to you too. Well, here's Mother, I must go. Bye now."

* * *

As Prexy rose to announce the hymn a young woman slipped into the chapel and dropped into the nearest seat.

"Let us sing hymn number 294."

Peg reached for the book and a large hand took it from the rack.

"You still manage to be late for chapel even after five years, don't you Peg?" and Bob smiled at her surprise at seeing him there. Forgetting that she should have known better, Peg talked all during the service. This was the first time she had been back since her graduation and it seemed that there was so much to say and so much to hear. After leaving school she had gone East to study and from there had continued with work in Europe. While there she became interested in French art and had stayed on for several years doing research work. Bob, it seemed, was now working up in the purchasing department of a steel company in Cleveland, and had found frequent occasion to return to the campus.

Looking around the room, Peg saw a number of her classmates who had evidently come back for the class reunion. As soon as Prexy had added his comments and nodded a curt dismissal she rushed to them with a little thrill of happiness.

"Peg, darling," cried Louise, coming up to her, "where in the world have you been? No one has heard from you in years."

"I know I should have written, but I have been terribly busy. I'm sorry; forgive me—will you? You see, I didn't know for certain that I was coming out here until last night. What about Jean and Betty, are they here?"

"Not yet, but they are coming. Come on, let's go over to the club-room. Anne is there now."

Peg turned to Bob who was talking to an old friend. "I must go now, but I'll see you tonight at the banquet."

That evening at the Grill thirty-five members of the class found each other again. It was a grand reunion banquet. There was Bill and Marge, married since the day after graduation and still as much in love as ever. Jim was coaching and looked it. Peg spied Johnny, her college Romeo. He was heavier than he had been in school, but then that seemed to go with the successful business man. Reports had it that Gladys was married, and with that came June's remark that then there was still hope for her.

Bob came up to Peg and asked to take her in to dinner. It was not until during the speeches that she really had time to look at him. He was as good looking as ever, perhaps more so. Five years had given him more poise and a certain suaveness. "He's still as much fun as ever," she thought, as he retold one of the interesting incidents of their senior year to those sitting near them.

"Let's go to the Senior play—just for old time's sake," suggested Bob as they rose to leave. "It's to be in the new amphitheatre down in the park. You will want to see it, won't you?"

Leaving the Grill, they started for Bob's car. "Oh, let's walk," suggested Peg, "it will be more like college days." College Avenue was the same old street except for a few new stores and a new fraternity house. Strolling toward the campus and seeing the Administration Building outlined against the sky brought them back to their old college days. As they turned the library corner and passed the church, they instinctively took the road to the bridge. Here were some changes. A new dam, landscaping and a sign that caught their eye, "Canoes for hire."

As the late afternoon shadows played across the water the canoe slipped lazily through the reeds. Taking turns with the conversation, they reminiscently visited Europe, studied French art and built the career of a successful business man as the sun slowly sank from view. It was dusk when the canoe glided back to the pier.

They decided to go to Columbus to eat after the play. Coming back along the well-remembered road, the old Otterbein feeling crept over them and they laughed suddenly at the mutual sigh of recollection. They were reliving the four years of hopes and disappointments, fun and work. As they parted they agreed to attend commencement together in the morning. The time they would have together seemed so short, for they both had to leave immediately after the exercises, Peg to meet a friend in Pittsburgh and Bob to be in the office.

Once again the long line of gowned figures found its way from the church to the Association Building. Peg missed some of her favorite professors in the procession and noted new faces in their place.

The graduates gathered on the steps of the Association Building just as they had done five years before. The Love Song—then taps—and it, too, was all over. This time she and Bob were spectators. This time they watched the seniors say their final good-byes to their student days. But again she experienced the same strange feeling. "It must be common to all Otterbein students," she thought. "It must be that which makes us love the old towers so."

Her thoughts were interrupted by the consciousness that Bob was watching her very closely. She looked up, and for the first time she felt that perhaps she should not have come.

"Peggy, I can't tell you how much this weekend has meant to me. I guess I've just begun to realize how much I've always valued your friendship. Would you mind if I'd drop a line to you once in a while?"

"Surely, if you care to Bob. But perhaps you won't want to now." Opening her bag she took out a small white engraved card:

william wolfarth, pitcher, turned in some good work last season, lost by graduation... lou rutter, pitcher and utility man, big league material with a sweeping curve and booming bat... russ brown, speed ball artist, able utility man... duane mills, makes them break their backs on his slow ball... "cowboy" eastman, backstop by build and ability... bob hanks, utility catcher and outfielder, also lost by graduation... bob ryder, few were his errors in the infield... sam loucks, six feet and a few inches of first baseman... denny elliot, the pepper of the infield... ron lane, loves 'em hot as they come across the infield...

coach r. f. martin loves his baseball and knows how to impart that love to his teams . . . no matter what the score, they all had a good time all the time . . . tom brady and perry wysong added their bit by the efficient scoring and tabulating which was their delight . . . the team was struck a fatal blow in mid-season by the loss of rutter when he broke his shoulder sliding across the plate . . . typical was the remark, "it wouldn't have been so bad if the run had counted" . . . this year with a club composed of an able staff of veterans aided by several likely pitching recruits in young and learish, they are pointing for a highly successful season . . .

"bish" warner heaved the platter and the weight... jack cook toured the distances for the cards, lost by graduation from this year's squad... roy shoaf, another distance man, counted on for points this year... harry "pete" lunsford, record holder of the school shot marks... bill catalona, the serious middle distance man... ray lilly, able on distances, lost by graduation... fos elliot, ran the middle lengths and vaulted... sam ziegler, captain, otterbein's one man track team, captured five firsts in several meets, lost by graduation... lou rutter, the mighty arm and the javelin and discus... elmer "the great" funkhouser, elected to fill ziegler's shoes this year, dash man and broad jumper... george rusell, vaulter and jumper... clancy pope, toyed with the long sprints and runs...

head coach ewing begins the rounding out of a track squad early in the season... holds varsity practice in the gym for starts, weights, jumps and general training... has sponsored an interfraternity meet both indoors and out to develop new material... outstanding last year was the work of sam ziegler, whose versatility often put otterbein on the winning side of the record, harry lunsford who combined the two dissimilar events of high jumping and weight tossing to otterbein's advantage, and jack cook who ran some grand distances races toward the end of the season...

by prof. jimmy mc cloy

"Social life—ah, what an expression! How all-inclusive! How complex! But no, my friend, like many other seemingly complex things, it is capable of being analysed into somewhat simple elements. Recently Otterbein had a visit from the world renowned Professor Rosenjoint, the inventor of the spectrocardiospignonometer. With this invaluable instrument a wealth of material was collected and analysed. The following facts were brought out:

1. There are 375 elements which go to make for felicity in our social contracts, that being the present enrollment.

2. Of the fifty-three cases studied, forty-six were found to be lacking in one or more of the necessary factors. Correlating this data with individuals of the Phylum Coelenterata showed a correlation factor of $2.79 \pm .02$. This indicates that something ought to be done about it; probably a committee should be appointed.

3. One characteristic which seems to be highly infectious and which causes unrest in some circles is a form of itch which seems to affect the ankles, causing the one so afflicted to want to shuffle over a polished floor, especially responsive to certain sound waves known as rhythm.

4. Among the features of the school year, the Y-mixer is an important starting point. There, frequently He meets Her and even the spectrocardiospignonometer has not been able to completely analyse beyond a differential equation of the third order.

5. While we are on the Y, let us say the YMCA and YWCA are two of the finest influences on the campus from the standpoint of social activity. During rushing season they are used extensively to impress the freshmen with the religious atmosphere of the Boopa-doop sorority or the Tappa

Kega fraternity. Also at election time each Brotherhood and Sisterhood seems to think their own member should be elevated to Kingfish or Madam Queen as the case may be. This reminds us of a few lines from Milton's 'Lycidas':

"Of other care they little reckoning make Than how to scramble at the shearer's feast."

6. Do the fraternities and sororities come in for their share of sociability? The spectrocardiospignonometer indicates their coefficient as 99.32%. In the first place boys get to know boys better and girls learn to differ with girls and not get angry—much, thereby preparing them when fair, fat and forty to take their place as grand supreme plenipotentiary in the Sisterhood of the Olive Branch. The spring formals are the last word. Here Zedekiah Corn tassel can rent a dress suit, put goo on his hair, step out with a slim little blond, eat 35c worth of food for which he pays $1.50 and give her a 50c compact for which he pays $2.00. After dinner they adjourn to a large hall and become infected with the disease mentioned in No. 3 above. The chaperones have been educated at Fred Allen's Town Hall—they see all and tell nothing. If the girls have 1:00 o'clock permission, it is the part of discretion to get in before 1:30.

7. Among the social activities of Otterbein should be mentioned the bridge, the Otterbein cemetery and two-mile square—those factors which put the coo in co-education. We put the spectrocardiospignonometer on one poor victim. He was listless, absent-minded almost moronic. The spectro-whatyoutmaycallit indicated a 150% overload. Just then a petticoat fluttered in the breeze, (or do they wear them any more?). The monometer dial ran to 1000 and burst.

"Professor Rosenjoint carefully wrapped up some injured fingers.

"That guy is in love," he said simply."

The Women's Social Groups

The Women's Social groups were formed years ago on the campus of Otterbein College. They were started from a nucleus of friendship when young women with similar ideals and interests grouped themselves together into secret clubs. These clubs were kept for many years as secret organizations.

The oldest women's club on the campus dates its organization back to 1910, and from then on others were formed until at one time there were ten social groups for women. They were organized in the following order: The Owl, Polyon, Toma Dachi, Greenwich, Arbutus, Talisman, Onyx, Arcady, Phoenix and Lotus clubs. Three of the ten clubs have gone out of existence and at present there are seven groups which have their club rooms in Cochran Hall.

These groups, after having been kept as secret organizations for several years, were finally recognized by the Administration and the Faculty. When the groups were recognized it was understood that each one should have as sponsor a woman who was connected with the Faculty, and that they should not be referred to as sororities. Each group took a strange secret name for use on the local campus and only within the last few years have they been known by their Greek names.

Most of the women students become affiliated with some group; however, approximately fifteen per cent of the Freshmen women each year do not join any group. These clubs tend to deepen friendships, many of which last through life. Through their various activities the women's social groups play a large part in the social life of the students on the campus.

Margaret E. Anderson,
Dean of Women.

The Men's Social Groups

Since the year 1908, when fraternities were recognized at Otterbein, our local fraternities have played an increasingly valuable role in the life of our college.

The fraternities were organized primarily for social purposes. They promote good fellowship and social development, and in addition have many other valuable functions. Scholarship is emphasized—a laudable feature. The fact that each fraternity operates its own home and must budget time and money, and care for its equipment, provides valuable training. Business meetings are held at regular intervals, and since they are conducted according to "Roberts' Rules of Order" they give a training recognized as very desirable. The refining influence of a hostess at each fraternity house, must not be overlooked.

Our fraternities recognize that they should study to develop the best in each member. The steady improvement in the initiation programs of these organizations, is ample proof that the above statement is true.

We congratulate our progressive Otterbein fraternities. May they continue to render an increasingly valuable service to our college community as time goes on.

PROGRESS

There are few fields where the necessity for progress—the demand for new ideas, is as pronounced as in the production of School Annuals. ✧ Here in Canton we take pride in not only keeping pace, but in setting the pace for innovations and changes in this highly progressive field. ✧ When you work with Canton you are hand in hand with experienced people, constantly on the alert to sense the wants of Annual publishers, and quick to change from the old order, and offer new and unusual ideas to progressive editors.

MODERN PRINTING IS ESSENTIAL
THE NEW IDEAS
STUDENT PUBLICATIONS

THROUGH years of experience in printing high school and college yearbooks, class and monthly magazines, we know the consistent effort of those responsible for these publications to improve each succeeding issue. There is a constant demand for the "something different, distinctive, ultra modern."

Only the up-to-date establishment has the facilities to meet these demands—the graphic arts industry has kept pace with the march of progress in this day of television and streamlined efficiency.

The modern art of printing is essential to the best expression of the new ideas in high school and college periodicals. We will be pleased to furnish specific information about our complete facilities for this work, upon request.
