Who Discovers the Discoverers?

"A professor can never better distinguish himself in his work than by encouraging a clever pupil, for the true discoverers are among them, as comets amongst the stars." CARL LINNAEUS

Somewhere in this mighty land of ours, a gifted youth is learning to see the light of tomorrow. Somewhere, in a college classroom or laboratory, a dedicated teacher is gently leading genius toward goals of lofty attainment. Somewhere the mind of a future discoverer—in science, engineering, government, or the arts—is being trained to transcend the commonplace.

Our nation has been richly rewarded by the quality of thought nurtured in our colleges and universities. The caliber of learning generated there has been responsible in no small part for our American way of life. To our college teachers, the selfless men and women who inspire our priceless human resources, we owe more than we will ever be able to repay.

Yet how are we actually treating these dedicated people? Today low salaries are not only driving gifted teachers into other fields, but are steadily reducing the number of qualified people who choose college teaching as a career. At the same time, classrooms are beginning to get overcrowded. In the face of this, college applications are expected to double by 1967.

This is a severe threat to our system of education, to our way of life, even to our very existence as a nation. Our colleges need help—and they need it now!

If you want to know more about what the college crisis means to you, and what you can do to help, write for a free booklet to: HIGHER EDUCATION, Box 36, Times Square Station, New York 36, New York.

This issue of Otterbein Towers is late due to several unusual projects in your Alumni Office. We appreciate your patience in this extraordinary situation.

A new, sound, colored motion picture about Otterbein has been produced this spring and will be shown for the first time on Alumni Day, Saturday, June 3. This film will be available for alumni clubs, churches and schools.

Our office is just now completing the proof reading of the 1961 ALUMNI REGISTER. The compiling and editing of the register has been a gigantic task but we are hopeful that the completed copy will meet with your approval.

Times have changed. Have America's college students? This is the theme of an insert which is appearing in this issue, and which is entitled, "The College Student."

In keeping with this emphasis on current college students, we feature on the cover two present freshmen students at Otterbein. Between classes on the main campus are Miss Pamela Anne McIlroy of Huntington, New York, and Winston Douglas Yohe, of Williams-ville, New York.

*"Her halls have their own message
Of truth, and hope, and love,
"Her stately tower
Speaks naught but power
For our dear Otterbein!"*

GUEST SPEAKERS

Dr. John Karefa-Smart, '40, minister of external affairs and defence, Sierra Leone, West Africa will be the commencement speaker for the Class of 1961 on Monday, June 5.

Sierra Leone, Africa celebrated their Independence Day on April 27, 1961. Dr. Smart is one of the top officials in the new government of Sierra Leone.

Bishop Paul M. Herrick, resident Bishop of the Central Area Evangelical United Brethren Church with headquarters in Dayton, Ohio, will preach the baccalaureate sermon on Sunday, June 4.

A graduate of Kansas City University and United Theological Seminary, Bishop Herrick received his master's degree from Phillips University, Enid, Oklahoma and the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity from York College, York, Nebraska in 1957 and the Doctor of Laws Degree from Otterbein last year.

Organ Recital In Cowan Hall June 4

Virgil Fox, world-renowned organist who will present an organ recital at Otterbein on June 4.

Dedication of the Clymer Memorial Organ in Cowan Hall will be Sunday, June 4, at 8:00 P.M. Virgil Fox of New York City will present the dedicatory organ recital.

Irvin L. Clymer, '09, of Evanston, Illinois, gave $54,000 to Otterbein for the installation of the three-manual Moller organ in Cowan Hall. The gift is in memory of his wife, Elsa Zell Clymer, who died March 28, 1959.

Until his retirement in 1953, Mr. Clymer was president of the Pittsburgh Limestone Corporation, a U.S. Steel subsidiary, as well as president of the Michigan Limestone and Chemical Company.

Mr. Clymer was graduated from Otterbein College in 1909 and received an engineering degree from Purdue University in 1911. He has been a member of the Otterbein College board of trustees since 1953 and last year Otterbein bestowed the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws upon him.

Virgil Fox is organist of the Riverside Church in New York City and is known as one of America's most outstanding concert organists.

Fox's universal popularity, which has resulted in frequent sell-outs wherever he has appeared, has been variously attributed to his mastery of the instrument and his flawless technique, but it is more truly a result of his projection of a warm, vibrant personality through the medium of organ music.

Alumni are cordially invited to attend the dedicatory organ recital.

Clements Carillon To Be Dedicated

Dedication ceremonies are planned for the new Clements Carillon on May Day, Saturday, May 13th, at 1:30 P.M. W. Robert Morrison, carillonneur, and minister of music at the First Methodist Church, Canton, Ohio, will present a special Carillonic Bell Recital.

In 1948, Dr. and Mrs. Frank O. Clements presented a carillon to Otterbein College and the First Evangelical United Brethren Church of Westerville. Recently, Mrs. Clements, a member of the Board of Trustees, has contributed an addition to the carillon which will make it one of the outstanding carillon instruments in the nation, and similar to the Bok Tower Carillon in Florida.

The instrument is installed in Cowan Hall on the Otterbein Campus and provides the tonal equivalent of over 100,000 pounds of cast bells tuned to the finest standards. The harp bells, which are a part of the "Americana" Carillon, an exclusive development of Schulmerich Carillon, Inc., of Sellersville, Pennsylvania are a new tone color in bell music, and add the mellow beauty of the plucked harp, while the Celesta bells, also a new tone color, add a silvery brightness to the instrument, enabling the musician to play selections which were not possible heretofore.

The Carillon consists of 208 miniature bell units, of bronze bell metal, which are struck by metal hammers, producing exact true bell tones almost inaudible to the human ear. These bell vibrations are then amplified over one million times by means of specially designed electronic equipment, producing true bell music with all the depth and vividness of traditional cast bells of massive proportions.

The Clements Carillon will be played from a special keyboard located in Cowan Hall or from a keyboard of the organ console in the First Evangelical United Brethren Church. Selection switches will permit the bells to be heard within the building alone, from the tower alone, or both together.

Carillon Recital

Mr. W. Robert Morrison, carillonneur and minister of music at the First Methodist Church, Canton, Ohio, will present the following special Carillonic Bell Recital at 1:30 P.M. on Saturday, May 13: A FRAGMENT OF CHANGE-RINGING

About The Carillonneur

A native of Baltimore, Maryland, Mr. Morrison received a B.S. degree from Johns Hopkins University and held a three-year organ scholarship at the Peabody Conservatory of Music. Further study at the Reformed Episcopal Seminary, Philadelphia resulted in the B.D. degree. His Master of Music degree was obtained at the Westminster Choir College, Princeton, New Jersey.

Mr. Morrison was appointed Minister of Music at the First

W. Robert Morrison

Methodist Church, Canton, Ohio, in 1951, and is responsible for seven choirs including a group of 52 handbells, as well as playing the Aeolian-Skinner pipe organ, and the 86-note carillonic bells from the tower of this church, historically famous as the church in which President McKinley worshipped.

The summer of 1953 Mr. Morrison spent in organ study at Fontainebleau, France, under Marcel Dupre. His first organ teacher was Virgil Fox, and he counts many famous names in the organ world as his mentors. Mr. James Lawson of the University of Chicago has coached him in carillon playing and Mr. Anton Brees of the Bok Singing Tower has recently been his teacher.

Drill Team

The Otterbein College AFROTC drill team was in Washington, D.C., April 4-9 to compete in national drill competition with other organized drill teams. The competition was held during the National Cherry Blossom Festival.

Pillsbury Award

A senior at Otterbein College, Nerita Darling Smith, of Youngwood, Pennsylvania, was chosen as one of the seven finalists who won honors in the 1961 Pillsbury Awards program.

Miss Smith received an honor award of $250 in her selection. She and the other finalists were interviewed at the Pillsbury Company headquarters in Minneapolis, Minnesota, for first place honors.

Mrs. Mabel Joyce, chairman of the Home Economics Department at Otterbein, accompanied Miss Smith to Minneapolis.

Eligibility for the Pillsbury Awards was limited to home economics majors graduating from college from January to June, 1961. High scholastic achievement, a broad range of interests and activities, and outstanding personality characteristics were other requisites.

Miss Smith is 22 years old. She belongs to various honorary societies including Alpha Lambda Delta, Phi Sigma Iota, and the Torch and Key (a local honorary). She has been active in the Home Economics Club, Women's Glee Club, and has been on the staff of the college newspaper, as well as participating in her sorority, Tau Epsilon Mu. She was graduated from Youngwood High School in Youngwood, Pennsylvania.

The other six finalists are from the University of Connecticut, Oregon State College, Pennsylvania State University, University of Alabama, University of Illinois, and Drexel Institute of Technology.

Vigilante Honored

Mr. Nicholas Vigilante, professor of education at Otterbein College, and family were recently subjects of a feature story in "North American Take-Off," a news publication of the Columbus division of North American Aviation, Inc.

The Vigilantes were featured because their name is identical to the AJ3 Vigilante aircraft which is manufactured by North American Aviation.

Music Tours

Both the Otterbein Men's Glee Club and A Cappella Choir were on tour during Spring vacation in April.

The Otterbein College Men's Glee Club presented concerts in five E.U.B. churches in Ohio during a four-day tour, April 6-9. The itinerary included the German-town, Ohio, E.U.B. Church; Oak Street Church, Dayton, Ohio; First E.U.B. Church, Lorain, Ohio; and E.U.B. Churches in Amherst and Willard, Ohio.

The Otterbein College A Cappella Choir toured through southern Ohio, West Virginia, and Florida during their annual spring tour, April 2-12. Concerts were given in E.U.B. churches in Iron-ton, Ohio; Charleston and Parkersburg, W. Va., and the following E.U.B. churches in Florida: High Point; Lutz; Lake Magdalene; Limona; Tampa First; Bradenton; St. Petersburg and Ybor City.

The Men's Glee Club is directed by Dr. Lee Shackson, chairman of the Music Department, and the A Cappella Choir by Professor Richard Chamberlain.

International Students

A total of nine international students are enrolled at Otterbein College during the present school year. They are: Raymond Bailor, Sylvester Broderick and Miss Imodale Caulker, all from Sierra Leone, West Africa; Miss Masako Aoki and Eiji Tsuda, Japan; Miss Mary Apostolopoulos, Greece; Robin Dunbar, Canada; Miss Yolanda Gutierrez, Columbia, South America; and Petros Baghranian, Iran.

Honor Roll

A total of 132 students are listed on the first semester honor roll at Otterbein College. This represents 14.6% of the student body. In order to be listed on the honor roll, a student must earn a semester point average of 3.3 out of a possible 4.0. Between the classes, the breakdown of students on the honor roll is as follows: Freshmen-35; Sophomores-28; Juniors-23; and Seniors-46.

Basketball Record

The Otterbein College Cardinals chalked up the best basketball record in six years with a 9-12 won-loss record. Not since 1954-55, when the team compiled an identical 9-12 mark, has the squad fared so well.

Coach Mike Kish, in his third year at Otterbein, engineered the cagers to the comparatively successful season. Especially gratifying was a late season rush of the Cardinals when they won four consecutive games.

The cagers closed the season with a 47-43 loss to eventual NCAA small-college champion, Wittenberg, in the Ohio Conference Tournament.

Leading scorer for Otterbein was 6'3" sophomore center, Alf Washington. An outstanding player, Washington was voted to the Ohio Conference second team. He averaged 16.7 points a game and led the team in rebounds with a 11.9 game average.

GREAT THINGS ARE HAPPENING AT OTTERBEIN

The year 1961 promises to be a significant year in the long history of Otterbein College. In fact, the years from 1961-65 will witness the largest expansion of the physical plant and growth in student enrollment in any four-year period in the life of the college. During the present year a dormitory for men and another for women will be completed. It is hoped that construction can start on the Life Science Building by the end of the year and that soon thereafter the new combined student center and dining hall will be under construction.

What Will You Do For Otterbein In 1961?

On April 1, the 1961 Development Fund year was officially launched. On that date the 1960 fund report or Honor Roll was released and Otterbein alumni throughout the world were invited by Development Board Chairman, Herman F. Lehman, to make their commitments for this year.

The year is off to a good start with over 1,100 gifts received before the fund year was officially begun. This is a result of the four campaigns which have been conducted in the Columbus, Akron, Toledo and Dayton areas.

Otterbein is one of twenty private colleges comprising the Independent College Alumni Associates of Ohio. These colleges conduct simultaneous, personal solicitation campaigns in selected cities. In the four campaigns conducted since January 1, 1961, the following results were obtained:

City	No. Of Prospects	No. Of Gifts	Percentage Participation	Total Given	Average Gift
Columbus-Westerville	1,083	482	45%	$11,031	$22.89
Akron	141	108	77%	2,321	21.50
Toledo	75	61	81%	930	15.24
Dayton	726	512	71%	10,069	19.67

The Financial Goals For 1961 Are Higher

The goals for 1961 are 2,500 gifts and $95,000. This represents an increase of 500 gifts and $15,000 over 1960. This does not include the thousands of dollars we hope to raise in special gifts from alumni to apply on the building projects. In order to reach this financial goal many alumni will need to double or triple their regular annual gifts. With a little planning, most alumni can easily do this, especially those who are accustomed to giving token gifts.

A sister institution is suggesting a semi-annual gift. This seems a practical idea. In fact, a few Otterbein alumni are now making monthly contributions; others are making quarterly gifts.

Two Alumni Provide For Their Almamater Through A Will

THROUGH LIFE INSURANCE. The late Dr. Herbert E. Hall, '02, a physician for many years in Uniontown, Pennsylvania, died on February 12, 1961. A short while before he died he made Otterbein the beneficiary of all his insurance, which totaled $23,750. Mrs. Hall, the former Bessie Detwiler, '02, was the daughter of Henry Detwiler and Josephine Van Gundy Detwiler, '75. The money will be used for an appropriate memorial gift as yet undetermined.

THROUGH A WILL. The late Mrs. J. B. Bovey (Ida Mauger, '96) left approximately $56,000 to Otterbein. She directed that the two scholarship funds she had started be increased to $10,000 each, whereas the balance was undesignated. It has not been decided definitely how this balance shall be used but it will likely be applied to one of the building projects and appropriately designated.

SUSAN GREENBURG

*Times have changed.
Have America's college students?*

THE COLLEGE STUDENT,

they say, is a young person who will . . .

... use a car to get to a library two blocks away, knowing full well that the parking lot is three blocks on the other side.

... move heaven, earth, and the dean's office to enroll in a class already filled; then drop the course.

... complain bitterly about the quality of food served in the college dining halls—while putting down a third portion.

... declaim for four solid years that the girls at his institution or at the nearby college for women are unquestionably the least attractive females on the face of the earth; then marry one of them.

BUT there is a serious side. Today's students, many professors say, are more accomplished than the average of their predecessors. Perhaps this is because there is greater competition for college entrance, nowadays, and fewer doubtful candidates get in. Whatever the reason, the trend is important.

For civilization depends upon the transmission of knowledge to wave upon wave of young people—and on the way in which they receive it, master it, employ it, add to it. If the transmission process fails, we go back to the beginning and start over again. We are never more than a generation away from total ignorance.

Because for a time it provides the world's leaders, each generation has the power to change the course of history. The current wave is thus exactly as important as the one before it and the one that will come after it. Each is crucial in its own time.

WHAT will the present student generation do? What are its hopes, its dreams, its principles? Will it build on our past, or reject it? Is it, as is so often claimed, a generation of timid organization people, born to be commanded? A patient band of revolutionaries, waiting for a breach? Or something in between?

No one—not even the students themselves—can be sure, of course. One can only search for clues, as we do in the fourteen pages that follow. Here we look at, and listen to, college students of 1961—the people whom higher education is all about.

THE fourteen young men and women pictured above come from fourteen colleges and universities, big and little, located in all parts of the United States. Some of their alma maters are private, some are state or city-supported, some are related to a church. The students' studies range widely—from science and social studies to agriculture and engineering. Outside the classroom, their interests are similarly varied. Some are athletes (one is All-American quarterback), some are active in student government, others stick to their books.

To help prepare this report, we invited all fourteen, as articulate representatives of virtually every type of campus in America, to meet for a weekend of searching discussion. The topic: themselves. The objective: to obtain some clues as to how the college student of the Sixties ticks.

The resulting talk—recorded by a stenographer and presented in essence on the following pages—is a revealing portrait of young people. Most revealing—and in a way most heartening—is the lack of unanimity which the students displayed on virtually every topic they discussed.

As the seminar neared its close, someone asked the group what conclusions they would reach about themselves. There was silence. Then one student spoke:

"We're all different," he said.

He was right. That was the only proper conclusion.

Labelers, and perhaps libelers, of this generation might take note.

of students from coast to coast

student is a wonderful thing."

STUDENT YEARS are exciting years. They are exciting for the participants, many of whom are on their own for the first time in their lives—and exciting for the onlooking adult.

But for both generations, these are frequently painful years, as well. The students' competence, which is considerable, gets them in dutch with their elders as often as do their youthful blunders. That young people ignore the adults' soundest, most heartfelt warnings is bad enough; that they so often get away with it sometimes seems unforgivable.

Being both intelligent and well schooled, as well as unfettered by the inhibitions instilled by experience, they readily identify the errors of their elders—and they are not inclined to be lenient, of course. (The one unforgivable sin is the one you yourself have never committed.) But, lacking experience, they are apt to commit many of the same mistakes. The wise adult understands this: that only in this way will they gain experience and learn tolerance—neither of which can be conferred.

"They say the student is an animal in transition. You have to wait until you get your degree, they say; then you turn the big corner and there you are. But being a student is a vocation, just like being a lawyer or an editor or a business man. This is what we are and where we are."

"The college campus is an open market of ideas. I can walk around the campus, say what I please, and be a truly free person. This is our world for now. Let's face it—we'll never live in a more stimulating environment. Being a student is a wonderful and magnificent and free thing."

“You go to college to learn, of course.”

SUSAN GREENBURG

A STUDENT'S LIFE, contrary to the memories that alumni and alumnae may have of “carefree” days, is often described by its partakers as “the mill.” “You just get in the old mill,” said one student panelist, “and your head spins, and you’re trying to get ready for this test and that test, and you are going along so fast that you don’t have time to find yourself.”

The mill, for the student, grinds night and day—in classrooms, in libraries, in dining halls, in dormitories, and in scores of enterprises, organized and unorganized, classed vaguely as “extracurricular activities.” Which of the activities—or what combination of activities—contributes most to a student’s education? Each student must concoct the recipe for himself. “You have to get used to living in the mill and finding yourself,” said another panelist. “You’ll always be in the mill—all through your life.”

But learning comes in many ways."

SUSAN GREENBURG

"I'd like to bring up something I think is a fault in our colleges: the great emphasis on grades."

"I think grades interfere with the real learning process. I've talked with people who made an A on an exam—but next day they couldn't remember half the material. They just memorized to get a good grade."

"You go to college to learn, of course. But learning comes in many ways—not just from classrooms and books, but from personal relations with people: holding office in student government, and that sort of thing."

"It's a favorite academic cliché, that not all learning comes from books. I think it's dangerous. I believe the greatest part of learning does come from books—just plain books."

ERICH HARTMANN, MAGNUM

IT’S HARD to conceive of this unless you’ve been through it . . . but the one thing that’s done the most for me in college is baseball. I’d always been the guy with potential who never came through. The coach worked on me; I got my control and really started going places. The confidence I gained carried over into my studies. I say extracurricular activities are worthwhile. It’s important to know you can do a good job at something, whatever it is.”

► “No! Maybe I’m too idealistic. But I think college is a place for the pursuit of knowledge. If we’re here for knowledge, that’s what we should concentrate on.”

► “In your studies you can goof off for a while and still catch up. But in athletics, the results come right on the spot. There’s no catching up, after the play is over. This carries over into your school work. I think almost everyone on our football team improved his grades last fall.”

► “This is true for girls, too. The more you have to do, the more you seem to get done. You organize your time better.”

► “I can’t see learning for any other purpose than to better yourself and the world. Learning for itself is of no value, except as a hobby—and I don’t think we’re in school to join book clubs.”

► “For some people, learning is an end in itself. It can be more than a hobby. I don’t think we can afford to be too snobbish about what should and what shouldn’t be an end in itself, and what can or what can’t be a creative channel for different people.”

“The more you do, the more you seem to get done. You organize your time better.”

SUSAN GREENBURG

“In athletics, the results come right on the spot. There’s no catching up, after the play.”

“It seems to me you’re saying that

COLLEGE is where many students meet the first great test of their personal integrity. There, where one’s progress is measured at least partly by examinations and grades, the stress put upon one’s sense of honor is heavy. For some, honor gains strength in the process. For others, the temptation to cheat is irresistible, and honor breaks under the strain.

Some institutions proctor all tests and examinations. An instructor, eagle-eyed, sits in the room. Others have honor systems, placing upon the students themselves the responsibility to maintain integrity in the student community and to report all violators.

How well either system works varies greatly. “When you come right down to it,” said one member of our student panel, “honor must be inculcated in the years before college—in the home.”

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

“Maybe you need a B in a test, or you don’t get into medical school. And the guy ahead of you raises the average by cheating. That makes a real problem.”

honor works only when it's easy."

ERICH HARTMANN, MAGNUM

"I'm from a school with an honor system that works. But is the reason it works maybe because of the tremendous penalty that's connected with cheating, stealing, or lying? It's expulsion—and what goes along with that is that you can't get into another good school or even get a good job. It's about as bad a punishment as this country can give out, in my opinion. Does the honor system instill honor—or just fear?"

"At our school the honor system works even though the penalties aren't that stiff. It's part of the tradition. Most of the girls feel they're given the responsibility to be honorable, and they accept it."

"On our campus you can leave your books anywhere and they'll be there when you come back. You can even leave a tall, cold milkshake—I've done it—and when you come back two hours later, it will still be there. It won't be cold, but it will be there. You learn a respect for honor, a respect that will carry over into other fields for the rest of your life."

"I'd say the minority who are top students don't cheat, because they're after knowledge. And the great majority in the middle don't cheat, because they're afraid to. But the poor students, who cheat to get by . . . The funny thing is, they're not afraid at all. I guess they figure they've nothing to lose."

"Nobody is just honest or dishonest. I'm sure everyone here has been guilty of some sort of dishonest act in his lifetime. But everyone here would also say he's primarily honest. I know if I were really in the clutch I'd cheat. I admit it—and I don't necessarily consider myself dishonest because I would."

"It seems to me you're saying that honor works only when it's easy."

"Absolute honor is 150,000 miles out, at least. And we're down here, walking this earth with all our faults. You can look up at those clouds of honor up there and say, 'They're pretty, but I can't reach them.' Or you can shoot for the clouds. I think that's the approach I want to take. I don't think I can attain absolute honor, but I can try—and I'd like to leave this world with that on my batting record."

“WE ARE being criticized by other people all the time, and they’re stamping down on us. ‘You’re not doing anything,’ they say. I’ve noticed an attitude among students: Okay, just keep criticizing. But we’re going to come back and react. In some ways we’re going to be a little rebellious. We’re going to show you what we can really do.”

Today’s college students are perhaps the most thoroughly analyzed generation in our history. And they are acutely aware of what is being written about them. The word that rasps their nerves most sorely is “apathy.” This is a generation, say many critics, that plays it cool. It may be casually interested in many things, but it is excited by none.

Is the criticism deserved? Some college students and their professors think it is. Others blame the times—times without deprivation, times whose burning issues are too colossal, too impersonal, too remote—and say that the apparent student lassitude is simply society’s lassitude in microcosm.

The quotation that heads this column is from one of the members of our student panel. At the right is what some of the others think.

“Our student legislature fought most of the year about taking stands. The majority rationalized, saying it wasn’t our place; what good would it do? They were afraid people would check the college in future years and if they took an unpopular stand they wouldn’t get security clearance or wouldn’t get a job. I thought this was awful. But I see indications of an awakening of interest. It isn’t how we feel about issues, but whether we feel at all.”

“I’m sure it’s practically the same everywhere. We have 5,500 full-time students, but only fifteen or twenty of us went on the sit-downs.”

“I think there is a great deal of student opinion about public issues. It isn’t always rational, and maybe we don’t talk about it, but I think most of us have definite feelings about most things.”

“I’ve felt the apathy at my school. The university is a sort of isolated little world. Students don’t feel the big issues really concern them. The civil rights issue is close to home, but you’d have to chase a student down to get him to give his honest opinion.”

“We’re quick to criticize, slow to act.”

“Do you think that just because students in America don’t cause revolutions and riots and take active stands, this means . . .?”

“I’m not calling for revolution. I’m calling for interest, and I don’t care what side the student takes, as long as he takes a side.”

“But even when we went down to Woolworth’s carrying a picket sign, what were some of the motives behind it? Was it just to get a day away from classes?”

but whether we feel at all."

SUSAN GREENBURG

"I attended a discussion where Negro students presented their views. I have never seen a group of more dynamic or dedicated or informed students."

"But they had a personal reason."

"That's just it. The only thing I can think of, where students took a stand on our campus, was when it was decided that it wasn't proper to have a brewery sponsor the basketball team on television. This caused a lot of student discussion, but it's the only instance I can remember."

"Why is there this unwillingness to take stands?"

"I think one big reason is that it's easier not to. It's much easier for a person just to go along."

"I've sensed the feeling that unless it really burns within you, unless there is something where you can see just what you have done, you might as well just let the world roll on as it is rolling along. After all, people are going to act in the same old way, no matter what we try to do. Society is going to eventually come out in the same way, no matter what I, as an individual, try to do."

"A lot of us hang back, saying, 'Well, why have an idea now? It'll probably be different when I'm 45.'"

"And you ask yourself, Can I take time away from my studies? You ask yourself, Which is more important? Which is more urgent to me?"

"Another reason is fear of repercussions—fear of offending people. I went on some sit-downs and I didn't sit uneasy just because the manager of the store gave me a dirty scowl—but because my friends, my grandparents, were looking at me with an uneasy scowl."

“We need a purpose other than security and an $18,000 job.”

HERB WEITMAN

"Perhaps 'waiting' is the attitude of our age—in every generation."

"Then there comes the obvious question, With all this waiting, what are we waiting for? Are we waiting for some disaster that will make us do something? Or are we waiting for some 'national purpose' to come along, so we can jump on its bandwagon? So we are at a train station; what's coming?"

I GUESS one of the things that bother us is that there is no great issue we feel we can personally come to grips with."

The panel was discussing student purposes. "We need a purpose," one member said. "I mean a purpose other than a search for security, or getting that $18,000-a-year job and being content for the rest of your life."

"Isn't that the typical college student's idea of his purpose?"

"Yes, but that's not a purpose. The generation of the Thirties—let's say they had a purpose. Perhaps we'll get one, someday."

"They had to have a purpose. They were starving, almost."

"They were dying of starvation and we are dying of overweight. And yet we still should have a purpose—a real purpose, with some point to it other than selfish mediocrity. We do have a burning issue—just plain survival. You'd think that would be enough to make us react. We're not helpless. Let's do something."

Have students changed?

—Some professors' opinions

"OH, YES, indeed," a professor said recently, "I'd say students have changed greatly in the last ten years and—academically, at least—for the better. In fact, there's been such a change lately that we may have to revise our sophomore language course. What was new to students at that level three years ago is now old hat to most of them."

"But I have to say something negative, too," the professor went on. "I find students more neurotic, more insecure, than ever before. Most of them seem to have no goal. They're intellectually stimulated, but they don't know where they're going. I blame the world situation—the insecurity of everything today."

"I can't agree with people who see big changes in students," said another professor, at another school. "It seems to me they run about the same, year after year. We have the bright, hard-working ones, as we have always had, and we have the ones who are just coasting along, who don't know why they're in school—just as we've always had."

"They're certainly an odd mixture at that age—a combination of conservative and romantic," a third professor said. "They want the world to run in their way, without having any idea how the world actually runs. They don't understand the complexity of things; everything looks black or white to them. They say, 'This is what ought to be done. Let's do it!'"

"If their parents could listen in on their children's bull sessions, I think they'd make an interesting discovery," said another faculty member. "The kids are talking and worrying about the same things their fathers and mothers used to talk and worry about when they were in college. The times have certainly changed, but the basic agony—the bittersweet agony of discovering its own truths, which every generation has to go through—is the same as it's always been."

"Don't worry about it. Don't try to spare the kids these pains, or tell them they'll see things differently when they're older. Let them work it out. This is the way we become educated—and maybe even civilized."

"I'd add only one thing," said a professor emeritus who estimates he has known 12,000 students over the years. "It never occurred to me to worry about students as a group or a class or a generation. I have worried about them as individuals. They're all different. By the way: when you learn that, you've made a pretty profound discovery."

A Journey To Dillenburg, Germany Birthplace Of Philip W. Otterbein

BY DR. PAUL L. FRANK

About sixty miles north of the city of Frankfurt lies Dillenburg, a Kreisstadt (county seat) of about 11,000 inhabitants. Her most famous son is Wilhelm the Silent who, known as William of Orange, led the Netherlands in the war of independence against the Spanish crown and became the ancestor of the present royal Dutch family. Only few people know of Philip Wilhelm Otterbein who was born there on June 3, 1726, and baptized three days later.

The highest point of the town is a tower built about 80 years ago with funds given to Dillenburg by the Dutch people in grateful memory of William, called Wilhelms-turm. Just below it are the ruins of the castle of the princely family of Nassau-Orange, victim of one of the wars between France and Germany during the 18th century. At the foot of the castle lies the "Evangelical" church to which the Otterbein family belonged. It is the burial place of the parents of William of Orange. Built as a Catholic church in Gothic style during the 15th century, it became Protestant during the Reformation. While the new creed was first of the Lutheran persuasion, a change toward the Calvinistic form was made during the end of the 16th century, largely under the influence of the ruling count. In more recent times, in many parts of Germany a union of the Lutheran and Reformed churches has taken place. In the whole State of Hessen, to which Dillenburg belongs, the State Church is United Protestant, or Evangelical. Yet, under the surface, the Reformed background of the whole area is not at all forgotten. The State Church is maintained by church taxes which the Government collects and uses to support the official religion of the land. The free churches, of which there are a few in Germany, have to maintain themselves through voluntary contributions of their memberships.

Philip Wilhelm Otterbein attended the renowned "Latin School" in Dillenburg of which, at one time, his father was the principal. He obtained his theological training at the Hohe Schule in Herborn, a town about five miles distant from Dillenburg. This school was close in rank to a university and outstanding in theology. It was dissolved in 1817 and only the theological department is continued as the "Evangelical Theological Seminary." It is now located at a castle on a hill in Herborn, originally planned for a military garrison, then given by the owner as a home for widows, and now a school for clergymen. German students for the ministry have to study at least four years at a university with Greek and Hebrew as required subjects. Then they receive practical training for two semesters, one of which is spent at a seminary of Reformed background, such as Herborn, the other at a school that leans more strongly toward the Lutheran faith. When Philip Wilhelm Otterbein attended the Hohe Schule, it was housed in a building in the center of the town, now used for the City Museum.

In the annals of the Dillenburg Latin School and the Hohe Schule in Herborn many members of the Otterbein family are listed. About Philip Wilhelm one can read that he voluntarily became a missionary to America, founded the "sect of Otterbeinites" and is regarded there "as an apostle." Surprisingly, a bearer of that name lives in Dillenburg. Mr. Erich Otterbein is a native of Frankfurt. He and his wife Edith lived in East Berlin and came as refugees back to Frankfurt, and finally, to Dillenburg where he is one of the editors of the Dill-Zeitung, one of the two local newspapers. In all probability his ancestors are of the same family as Philip Wilhelm, although it has not yet been possible to ascertain the exact family connection. He has no children and seems to be the last bearer of the family name.

Visiting Dillenburg makes the observer realize how much the past is part of the present and to what high degree the knowledge of the past helps us to understand and evaluate our own time. Knowing of the person and accomplishment of Philip Wilhelm Otterbein, the visitor looks at the old city with much interest and affection.

PI KAPPA PHI PUBLISHES HISTORY

A spring publication of interest to many Otterbein alumni is the volume entitled STAUNCH FRIENDS AT ALL HAZARDS, A HISTORY OF PI KAPPA PHI FRATERNITY, 1908-1958. The first appearance of this book was April 20.

The volume, which was written mainly by Dr. Harold B. Hancock, Marion Chase, and John R. Howe, Jr., is over 100 pages in length and contains more than thirty pictures. The book, which is printed by an offset process, measures six by nine inches in size, and the paper orange and black cover displays the fraternity crest.

In six chapters, the authors tell of the fraternity's founding, the struggle for recognition by the faculty and trustees, and difficulties which were faced and successfully solved during two wars and a major depression. Much space is devoted to formals, picnics, rush parties, serenades, athletic contests, and initiations. Anecdotes about such Country Clubbers as J. Gordon Howard, John R. Howe, Sr., Horace W. Troop, Sr., and Roy Peden are related in the book. Tribute is paid to the counsel of adviser Dr. A. P. Rosselot.

Interested alumni may order the volume which sells for $3.00 from Dr. Harold B. Hancock, Otterbein College, Westerville, Ohio.

Mark N. Funk, '21

Mark N. Funk, '21, is Executive Director of the Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic Association. Since 1952, his task has been to direct the sprawling athletic activities which encompass 1100 senior and junior high schools in Pennsylvania.

Prior to 1952, Funk's experiences included twenty-three years as a high school principal at Latrobe, Pennsylvania, seven years of high school teaching at Latrobe, and four summer terms as a teacher at the California State Teachers' College, California, Pennsylvania.

Since Funk took control of the Athletic Association, he has seen schoolboy sports expand immensely. Funk's statistics show that in seven years, football has increased from 714 to 795 schools in Pennsylvania; basketball, 1023 to 1056; swimming, 57 to 73; golf, 85 to 139; track and field events, 449 to 532; and tennis, 57 to 95.

"Wrestling has had the greatest expansion," said Funk. In 1953 there were 121 schools which had wrestling teams. Now the number is 287. The only sport to decrease has been baseball, 712 to 687, and this is caused by schools dropping the sport because of adverse weather conditions in the spring.

Mark Funk was president of the 176-school Western Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic Association, the largest conference in the state. He held this position from 1942 to 1952. Prior to that he served on the W.P.I.A.L. football committee.

"Most schools now sponsor about six sports, an increase of three in the last ten years," Mr. Funk said. "There are a few schools, also, which sponsor more than six."

It costs $120,000 annually to maintain the P.P.I.A.A. operation and about 70 per cent of the income is derived from seventeen playoff basketball games.

"I think that in the next ten years, Pennsylvania will see even a greater growth in sports, especially in the self-participation ones. The future picture is very healthy. I wouldn't be surprised if the next sport to take a firm hold will be gymnastics, which already has begun to make inroads on the scene."

(The foregoing article is based on a feature article which appeared in the Harrisburg, Pa., Evening News, March 24, 1961.)

Albert C. May, '26

Albert C. May, '26, is Director of Teacher Education and Certification for the State Department of Education in Ohio, a position he has held since 1958. This division is charged with the responsibility of administering the Ohio laws governing the preparation and certification of all teachers in both public and non-tax supported schools.

Mr. May supervises the teacher education programs in the 49 Ohio Colleges approved for the preparation of teachers. His department also provides leadership in the development and refinement of programs of teacher education designed to produce competent teachers as well as issues certificates to every teacher in Ohio.

Albert May has spent thirty-five years in the field of education. Following graduation from Otterbein, he was a principal and teacher for one year at Keene High School, Keene, Ohio. He then spent one year as teacher of mathematics at Newcomerstown High School, Newcomerstown, Ohio, before serving ten years as principal of Newcomerstown High School, 1928-1938.

In 1938, Mr. May became principal of Martins Ferry High School until January, 1943, when he was elected principal of the Harding Senior High School, Marion, Ohio. He served in Marion seven years before his selection as principal of Steubenville High School, Steubenville, Ohio, in 1950. He left the Steubenville post for his present position on January 6, 1958.

Albert May's parents, Rev. Walter C. and Cynthia C. May, were graduated from Otterbein in 1901. His wife, the former Frances Cooper, attended Otterbein as a member of the Class of 1927. They have two daughters, Mrs. Marjorie Stoner, x'47, and Miss Jo Ann May, '52.
