Otterbein receives major challenge

Otterbein College has received a $50,000 matching challenge grant from J. Ralph Riley, chairman and chief executive officer of Suburban Motor Freight, Inc. to be used to help complete the College's Decision For The Arts campaign.

The challenge grant will match one dollar for every two dollars raised toward the Decision For The Arts. All pledges must be received on or before September 1, 1980.

"This generous gift is a clear demonstration of Ralph Riley's support and dedication to private higher education. His leadership and support will be instrumental in Otterbein's successful completion of this campaign," said President Thomas J. Kerr, IV.

Riley has been a member of the Otterbein College Board of Trustees since 1964 and was awarded an honorary Doctor of Laws degree by the College in 1964. For many years he has been active for a variety of charitable causes in the central Ohio area.

Currently, $2.4 million of the Decision For The Arts goal has been raised. "It is our hope that alumni who have completed campaign pledges or those who have not made one will give whatever their circumstances allow," said President Kerr.

We will complete the Decision For The Arts by September 1 only with the continued support of alumni, parents, and friends.

Volunteers sought for Alumni Telethon

The Fall Alumni Telethon is scheduled for October 26-30. A few volunteers are still needed to phone classmates.

If you wish to represent your class, call the Alumni Office no later than September 1. The telethon goal is $50,000 so we hope to call everyone who hasn't made a pledge or gift in 1980.

Award created at Otterbein

Margaret Ann Robson Pollock '47 has recently established the Robert Pollock Memorial Award. Thus far, alumni, family and friends have contributed in excess of $1,000 in memory of Robert Pollock '48.

The Fund will annually provide a departmental award to a student who has demonstrated excellence in Speech Education. The award has no financial need stipulations, and is restricted to a student majoring in Speech Communication.

Contributions to the Robert Pollock Memorial Award can be mailed to Director of Development, Otterbein College, Westerville, OH 43081.

Message from the President

ALUMNI DAY
June 14, 1980

One of the great inspirations I gain comes from sharing reunion time with you. I share the stories of your college days. I experience the meaning an Otterbein education had to you. I recognize your achievements. I know the educational efforts of we who work and teach at Otterbein are worth it because I see what an Otterbein education has meant in your lives. I appreciate the quality of life you have led.

For Otterbein this is a time of progress. We move ahead with the construction and maintenance of a first-rate physical plant. With the completion of the Decision For The Arts campaign, we look forward to interior remodeling in Towers Hall and a new scene shop on Cowan Hall.

This is a time for progress in program development. Of recent origin are Adult Degree-Continuing Education, Nursing, Equine Science, Journalism, Cooperative Education, Computer Science and Honors programs.

For Otterbein this is a time of exciting possibilities. Many predict several decades of decline for higher education. We know that by 1985 there will be 21% fewer Ohio high school graduates than there were last year and that by 1990 33% fewer. I remain optimistic about Otterbein despite this pessimistic picture. Otterbein has a great heritage of meeting challenges of adversity. In a complex society the need for the integrative and adaptive abilities of the liberal arts graduate will become increasingly valuable and recognized. In Ohio the turn-around in the teacher education market has already begun and by 1985 there will be a shortage. There is a growing interest in values and general education in our society following a period of overemphasis on vocational training. With declining numbers of graduates in the 1980s will come increasing demand for college graduates. More high school graduates may seek a college education.

I remain optimistic about Otterbein because of many basic strengths. We have ever increasing ties to the Columbus community, an increasingly important source of students and program. We have a strong enrollment base on which to build. This year's freshman class of 491 was the largest since 1972. The 1685 fall enrollment, including nearly 400 part-time Adult Degree-Continuing Education students, was the highest in our history. The College has completed a 25th consecutive year with a balanced operating budget. Last year the Development Program received $1,184,000 in gifts. This was the fourth million-dollar year of the decade and gave us an average of $1 million a year for each year of the 1970s. Before 1973 the College had never raised $1 million in any year.

I know I can count on you to help build a better Otterbein. You can send students. You can create opportunity through your gifts. You can keep us in thought and prayer. You can share your Otterbein spirit. May God bless you. May the spirit of Otterbein be with you until your next reunion.

Fannie Davidson Andrews '30, Thelma Hooks '43, Rillmond W. Schear '20, Emmor G. Widdoes '30 and Sondra Spangler '64 were recognized for traveling the farthest to attend their reunions. They are all from the west coast.

Alumni Day 1980 Features Emeriti, Class of 30, Award Winners

Friday the 13th was anything but unlucky for those alumni returning to the Otterbein Campus. The date marked the Fiftieth Reunion of the Class of 1930. Also honored that day were the Emeriti Alumni (those alumni whose class year precedes 1930). Both groups were guests of the College for the entire weekend.

The Golden Reunion dinner, arranged by class coordinator Evelyn Edwards Bale, was emceed by classmate Al Jordak and featured the presentation of 50th anniversary certificates by President Thomas J. Kerr, IV. The dinner program also included a slide show by Virgil and Lucy Hanna Raver. Sixty-one attended the dinner.

The Emeriti were treated to dinner and a short program presented by vice presidents Bulthaupt, Fite and VanSant. Following dinner, the fifty-eight attending viewed a recently completed slide presentation by historian Dr. Harold Hancock and librarian John Becker entitled "The History of Otterbein College."

Alumni Day, Saturday, June 14, was highlighted by the Annual Alumni Association Luncheon, which was attended by 500 returning alumni. The luncheon, was presided over by Dr. William N. Freeman '57, national president of the Alumni Association. The program included reports from each of the eleven reunion classes, a brief address on the state of the College by President Kerr, and the presentation of the annual Alumni Awards.

A reception hosted by President and Mrs. Kerr, tours of the campus and the Centurion banquet filled the day for many of the alumni before being topped off by the Second Annual Alumni Choir Concert.

Honored on Alumni Day

Several special guests were honored at the annual Alumni Association Luncheon.

W. Kenneth Bunce '30 was the recipient of the Association's highest award, the Distinguished Alumnus Award. The award is presented to an Otterbein graduate for outstanding service to the College, his profession and his community. Dr. Bunce has an outstanding record of service not only to Otterbein College but to his country as well. He had teaching assignments at Westerville High School, Ohio State University, a Matsuyama, Japan's higher school, and New Mexico State Teachers College before returning to Otterbein as chairman of the history department and dean of faculty. After joining the U.S. Navy, Dr. Bunce served as Chief, Religions and Cultural Resources Division, GHO, Supreme Commander for the Allied Powers, Japan. When the occupation of Japan ended in 1952, he joined the U.S. Embassy in Tokyo with the U.S. Information Agency. He remained with the agency until his retirement in 1971.

The Special Achievement Award is presented to individuals for eminence in their chosen fields. Two graduates were honored this year, Alice Propst Hoover '28 and John M. Karefa-Smart '40.

Mrs. Hoover is a registered dietitian with the American Dietetic Association, and is currently practicing as a private consultant in diet therapy. She was the recipient of the first citation awarded by the American Diabetes Association as "the outstanding lay person in the field of diabetes in the U.S.A." She has worked at the Woodlawn Hospital and the Michael Reese Hospital in Chicago; University Hospitals in Ann Arbor, Michigan and University Hospitals, St. Luke's Hospital, and the Cleveland Clinic Hospital in Cleveland, Ohio. She also served as a faculty member at the University of Michigan Medical School, Ohio State University and Cleveland College. She was co-author of the book Diet and Live.

Dr. Karefa-Smart has had a distinguished career both as an educator and an administrator. He has held high positions in the health field across the African continent, in Europe and the United States. Dr. Karefa-Smart has served as physician in charge of missionary hospitals and as chief delegate to the World Health Organization General Assemblies for Sierra Leone, the country of his birth. He has also been a lecturer at Nigeria's Ibaden Medical School and associate director of international health and assistant professor at the Columbia University School of Public Health and Administrative Medicine. Dr. Karefa-Smart served as the assistant director general for the World Health Organization and is currently teaching at Howard University of Medicine, Boston University Medical School and Harvard Medical School while serving as a consultant to various health services on nutrition and population.

Two individuals, Robert S. Agler '48 and Dr. George H. Dunlap, were presented the Distinguished Service Award for outstanding service to Otterbein.

Robert "Moe" Agler has played a key role in the molding of the Cardinal athletic system. Before returning to his alma mater in 1953, he played professional football (L.A. Rams) and coached on the high school level. During his 20-year Otterbein career, Moe held a multitude of coaching positions including football (16 years), basketball (3 years), golf (15 years); and cross country (2 years), along with his athletic directorship. He is currently a member of the Otterbein College Board of Trustees and vice president of the multi-store Agler-Davidson Sporting Goods, Inc.

Dr. George H. Dunlap, retired general chairman and chief executive officer of the Nationwide Insurance organization, was elected to the Otterbein College Board of Trustees in 1964. He has served as a member of several committees including the Executive Committee and the Investment Committee which he has chaired since 1975. Dr. Dunlap holds an Honorary Doctor of Laws degree from Otterbein awarded in 1969.

Honorary Alumnus status was conferred upon two individuals, Russell C. Bolin and Dr. Donald C. Bulthaup, for loyalty and interest in Otterbein.

Russell C. Bolin became associated with the Otterbein family by marriage and has been a firm supporter of the College ever since. Mr. Bolin's wife, Genevieve Tryon Bolin '42, can trace over two dozen direct relatives that have attended Otterbein and two Bolin children, Russell C. Bolin II '69 and Susan T. Bolin Beeman '70, followed tradition. The Bolins have supported the College through the Bolin-Tryon Scholarship Fund and the Decision For The Arts Campaign.

Dr. Donald C. Bulthaup, the College's vice president for academic affairs, joined Otterbein's physics and astronomy department in 1963. Along with his teaching load, he served as chairman of the division of science and mathematics from 1974-1977 and was chairman of the physics and astronomy department for three years. Named acting vice president for academic affairs in 1977, he was promoted to vice president in 1978.

Also receiving recognition at the alumni luncheon were Benjamin F. Richer '11 and Nellie Menke Niswonger '26. Mr. Richer was honored as the returning alumnus from the earliest class year and Mrs. Niswonger, at 94 years young, was the oldest returning graduate.

Commencement 1980

The 232 graduates of the Class of 1980 received their diplomas and were welcomed into the Alumni Association on June 15.

Receiving honorary degrees were Maurice and Dorothy McVay, Wade Miller and this year's Commencement speaker, Katherine Paterson.

Maurice R. and Dorothy J. McVay received Doctors of Laws degrees. Through their more than 50 years of marriage, "Mac" and "Dot" McVay have fostered many community projects, aided needy families and sponsored benevolent causes.

Recognized widely for their works, "Mac" and "Dot" were named Outstanding Senior Citizens of Franklin County in 1976, received Sertoma's "Service to Mankind" award in 1979 and Westerville Rotary Club's A. Monroe Courtright Award for service to the community in 1980.

Otterbein College granted the Degree of Doctor of Humanities to Wade S. Miller.

Wade Miller has been associated with the field of education for almost his entire life.

Following his ordination as a minister in 1930, he was appointed college pastor of the Shenandoah Valley Church of the United Brethren in Christ and professor of Bible at Shenandoah Valley College, Dayton, Virginia. Three years later he was named acting president and became president the following year.

In 1943, he and his family moved to Westerville where he continued his career at Otterbein in the area of development and public relations. He was named vice president of development and public relations in 1956, the position he held until retirement in 1969.

Katherine (Womeldorf) Paterson, the 1980 Commencement speaker, was granted the Degree of Doctor of Humane Letters.

Katherine Paterson is the outstanding practitioner of young people's fiction today. Within the past four years she has won two National Book Awards, a Newberry Medal, an Edgar Allen Poe Special Award, a Christopher Award and nominations for the Horn Book Honor List, Notable Book of the Year from the American Library Association, Europe's Hans Christian Andersen Award and The American Book Award.

An Otterbein Success Story

EDITOR'S NOTE:

The Otterbein alumni who are mentioned in this story represent a small sampling of the many successful graduates who are currently practicing medicine. There are numerous other alumni who are diverse in their fields of specialization. For example, Dr. Louis H. Bremer '39 and his son Dan '70 (Middletown, Ohio) are practicing veterinary medicine. Another son Don '71 (Middletown, Ohio) is a medical doctor, while youngest son Dav '74 (Crestwood, Missouri) is a resident in ophthalmology at St. Louis University Medical School. Dr. Douglas R. Knight '63 (Gales Ferry, Connecticut) is a stress physician for the Navy. Dr. James C. Kraner '47 (Phoenix, Arizona) is the director of the vascular diagnostic section of St. Luke's Hospital Medical Center. Dr. Carol M. Sheaffer '64 (Lawrenceville, New Jersey) specializes in adolescent psychiatry, while Dr. Beverly Loesch Blakeley '43 (Waynesboro, Virginia) is practicing internal medicine. The list goes on. Dr. John Karefa-Smart '40 (Washington, D.C.) has held high positions in the health field across the African continent, Europe, and the United States (See ALUMNI WEEKEND 1980 for related story, pg. 4). Dr. Tadashi Yabe '24 (Tokyo, Japan) is a retired ship's doctor. Dr. Harold S. Toy '65 (San Antonio, Texas) is a pediatrician, and Dr. John A. Smith '33 (Horicon, Wisconsin) is the medical director of Flyway Medical Clinic.

These people, as well as many others whom we would mention if we weren't limited by available space, are outstanding representatives of the Otterbein success story. We are proud to call them Otterbein alumni.

Sunday, June 15. Class of 1980. Of the 232 Otterbein graduates, one group is especially proud and happy — the twelve premed students who will pursue professional careers in medicine, osteopathy, optometry and dentistry. They have all been accepted by the medical school of their choice.

Not a bad record. Otterbein's placement statistics have always been extraordinary; historically the College has averaged placing nearly 80% of its premed graduates into professional schools, a record far above the national average. In recent years Otterbein has placed several students at each of the Ohio medical dental and veterinary schools as well as in many out-of-state professional programs including Washington University and Jefferson Medical College. Otterbein has been carrying on a remarkable tradition of preparing students for the medical and related professions since its foundation.

There is plenty of evidence. Physicians all over the country place their beginnings at Otterbein, and a number of prestigious positions are occupied by alumni.

As far back as the Class of 1892, Otterbein began making an impact in medicine. Francis M. Pottenger (see accompanying story) made such progress in the prevention and cure of tuberculosis that he is world-renowned for his

Dr. Francis Pottenger: Pioneer in Medicine

Dr. Francis Marion Pottenger (1892) was elected to Otterbein's Hall of Fame in 1972 following a long career of distinguished medical service. Founder of the Pottenger Sanatorium for diseases of the chest and throat, Pottenger served also as professor emeritus at USC, vice president for the California State Board of Public Health, member and delegate to several tuberculosis committees and congresses, member and officer in many tuberculosis and other health associations and president and member of the Board of the American College of Physicians. In his president's address to this organization in 1933, Pottenger made the following statement: "How to harness science for the good of mankind and not allow it to run onto his debasement and destruction is the burning question which this generation must settle." Pottenger made landmarks in just that direction with his fight against tuberculosis. He was devoted to the prevention and treatment of tuberculosis and in his lifetime he contributed to the incredible reduction in the death rate for this pulmonary disease. Pottenger, afflicted with a vision handicap that enabled him to read for no longer than 15 minutes at a time, managed to keep up with the most current and international literature on the disease and to be published himself. In his lifetime, the use of tuberculin for diagnosis of the disease and other revolutionary ideas for the prevention and treatment of tuberculosis were established.

frontier achievements. In his autobiography, he speaks of Otterbein fondly and recognizes the advantages of attending a small school as a preparation for medicine: "In these small schools, students from farms and small villages, by coming intimately in touch with the professors, often succeed where they would have failed in a larger institution."

And this attitude prevails. Keith Blakely '80 considers his professors in the science departments as "in some ways, almost parent images." Blakely says one of the reasons he feels good about his background at Otterbein in preparation for medical school is the willingness of the faculty to work with students on independent study projects.

The study is no easy task. Otterbein's pre-professional program for medicine and the related careers is an intensive four-year curriculum which places high demands on its participants. As well as including the elements for completion of the Bachelor's Degree, most students major in the rigorous studies of life science or chemistry, or often both.

The science curriculums include extensive lab work beyond assigned periods, and lectures often continue in small group discussions or on an individual basis with the professor. The core courses include a zoology series, microbiology, cellular and systems physiology, inorganic and organic chemistry, biochemistry, a physics series, genetics, physical chemistry and a mathematics series. Electives include cytology, histology, embryology, morphogenesis, and several seminar courses in special interests.

Students are faced with rigid requirements which are often painstaking and somewhat limiting to an extra-curricular life but which develop the crucial skills necessary to continue in the health professions.

"However, there is some flexibility," admits Mark Ringle '80. "You can fit electives in when they are needed, and the curriculum is set up to give you more opportunities to do things on your own."

Ringle, who is from Westerville, feels prepared to study medicine at Ohio State University this fall after his background at Otterbein. He asserts that Otterbein succeeds in introducing a student to all aspects of biology. "It's inherent in the design," he insists, "because we aren't 'premed' or 'predent' but 'life science' majors."

Ringle also praises the competency of the faculty. The most complete and current news on a subject is studied, he says, and the professors select the best material available to present to students.

Small group study is important, too, claims Ringle, and his classmates agree that helpfulness among students has made the considerable time they spend together worthwhile. "There's a competition that's not destructive but instructive," affirms Blakely. The friendly competitiveness that is recognized by those in the class has made the twelve students of 1980 a close-knit group. "We share ideas," says Blakely.

Ideas are shared with the faculty as well. Advisors become friends; the instructor is viewed as "a more knowledgeable friend teaching a less knowledgeable friend." The relationships developed between professor and student are one-to-one and extend happily beyond the classroom.

The special interest faculty members take in the careers of their students means a great deal to Rich Emmert '80, also from Westerville, who plans to enter the Ohio State College of Dentistry this fall. As a result of faculty counseling and initiative, Emmert and classmate Dave Zeuch, from Bay Village, Ohio, took on internships during their senior years. "This shows how much the professors try to consider new ways to help the student," says Emmert, who worked at Crown Dental Lab in Columbus.

Zeuch worked with a Westerville optometrist. "I began to understand a realistic practice," explains Zeuch, who feels his internship experience highlighted his undergraduate work.

He said he wouldn't have achieved the position without the help of faculty advisor and life science departmental chairperson Dr. Jeanne Willis. The faculty encouraged him to look into the optometry field when he expressed interest, resulting in the first internship of this kind.

Another approach incorporating the practical side of medicine is Otterbein's cooperative education program. Two participants, Fred Benedict and Bob Brazis '79, found their six-month paid experience as nurse's aides at Doctor's North Hospital in Columbus quite beneficial.

"We learned what to expect," says Benedict, who believes the co-op program is an opportunity to get occupational experience one might not be able to get on his own. "It gave us a chance to see if we could handle the challenges of a medical career."

And the challenges of a medical career begin in medical school, according to Mark McRoberts '77. McRoberts is at the University of Cincinnati Medical College and declares he was overwhelmed with the amount of work when he began his graduate study. "It seemed impossible at first," he says, "but the program at Otterbein had me well prepared. The type of independent study I developed in lab work at Otterbein is just what is needed for medical school."

From Greenville, Ohio, McRoberts says there is a fear of failure upon beginning medical school. "It's frightening, and it's a lot of work," he asserts. However, the adjustments to the demanding program were made easier for McRoberts by his Otterbein background, and he is especially grateful for the liberal arts training. He believes he can build a rapport with patients more quickly if he can communicate, and he says a liberal arts education has broadened his outlook on life.

McRoberts felt some apprehension in the application process for medical school which was eased by the placement record the College boasts. He notes that the faculty reassurance he felt is one of the assets to the program which appeals to incoming students.

McRoberts' classmate Dr. Jeff Yoest has just accepted a general practice residency in dentistry in Dayton after attending the Ohio State College of Dentistry. "I can't say enough about Otterbein," proclaims Yoest. He believes the caliber of the faculty is very high. "They are not only knowledgeable in the fields they teach, but they're very personable."

Jeff is from Westerville and his father, Dr. Elmer "Bud" Yoest '53, is on the faculty at Otterbein. Jeff was attracted to the College because of its tradition as an outstanding school as well as his father's status. "Otterbein has a good name with medical schools," he says. "The students have a record of doing well."

According to Jeff, one of the aspects of education at Otterbein that sets the student apart is the liberal arts background. Beyond a mere technical education, he feels that from an educational standpoint, Otterbein excels in creating the well-rounded individual.

Though there are fewer women among the medical ranks, two recent graduates are making progress in their fields. Dr. Jane Leiby '73 was not in the actual "premed" program at Otterbein, but she is now in her first year residency in internal medicine at University Hospital. A chemistry major, Jane worked at Ashland Chemical before her decision to enter medical school at OSU. She agrees that one of the attractive aspects of her education at Otterbein was the class size which allowed for greater attention and interest from faculty members.

The daughter of Otterbein chemistry professor Dr. Rex Ogle, Dr. Kim Ogle '76, is currently working at University Hospital as a part of her internship in pediatrics with Children's Hospital. Kim is responsible for the supervision of the newborn nursery as well as the care of a unit for tiny babies. The internship is quite an achievement which she enjoys, certain that Otterbein gave her very good training for the position. With a double major in life science and chemistry, Kim feels she gained an exposure to all aspects of science and was less limited than students hailing from larger schools. Her father played a large part in her decision to enter the pre professional program, but she "had heard of the high percentage of successful placements," she says now, "and I can understand why—it is a very good preparation."

Certainly the Otterbein background has been helpful to Dr. Mel Davis '74 who achieved the highest score in the State on the Ohio Medical Board Exams and is currently beginning a Fellowship with the Mayo Clinic. "Otterbein gave me the foundations for the rest of my training," states Davis, whose fellowship is a three-year program in the subspecialization of hematology and oncology (cancer).

"Those were some formative years for me," he recalls, "a time for some experiences I needed for growth." In his progression since Otterbein, Davis has been very pleased with his beginnings here, and sees the program as very helpful to where he is now.

And not unlike Davis, other professionals look back on their Otterbein experience warmly. Colonel Henry Bielstein '55, who is currently the Director of Professional and Aeromedical Services for the Air Force Systems Command in the Washington, D.C. area, believes the attitudes at Otterbein strongly influence many of the future physicians, helping to make them "warm human beings—which makes a difference in giving good medical care...There is a kind of empathy when one treats the patient, not just the illness."

The Colonel is originally from Dayton and was attracted to Otterbein through several relatives and friends who attended. His hobby of ornithology was his main interest until he "gravitated" into medicine. Bielstein says his advisor led him toward a medical career: "I always got the feeling he was watching me, and I didn't want to disappoint the people who were involved with me. I wanted to excel."

Director of Cardiology Services and the Cardiovascular Training Program at Riverside Hospital in Columbus, Dr. Ted Huston '57 agrees with Bielstein. "The outlook on life, the way you treat people, and your concept of people in general are enhanced by the Otterbein background." Huston observes that at Otterbein professors were concerned with comprehension and understanding above memorization and pure technical knowledge. In addition to his work at Riverside, Huston serves as a Clinical Associate Professor of Medicine in the Department of Cardiology at Ohio State University. A charter member and Fellow of The Society for Cardiac Angiography, he is also active in the American Heart Association. He was recently named Vice President of the Central Ohio Heart Chapter.

For two generations of physicians, Dr. Howard Sporck '34 and his son, Dr. Tom Sporck '67, Otterbein was an integral part of their professional preparation. The senior Sporck independently operates a unique eight-bed hospital facility in West Virginia, specializing in ophthalmology and otolaryngology. He is also the county medical examiner. His son was certified by the American Board of Otolaryngology in 1976. After teaching in the West Virginia University Medical Center for just three years, he was appointed Vice Chairman of the Department of Otolaryngology. Tom is currently setting up private practice in Charleston, West Virginia.

Howard Sporck feels Otterbein's liberal arts curriculum gave him an extremely good appreciation of ethics and helped to develop the moral values of his professional life. "I rely on what I had at Otterbein. It put me ahead of the rest."

Tom Sporck feels much the same: "The liberal arts background might not always affect your performance as a professional," he comments, "but the important thing is that it affects you as a person." Sporck believes the doctor-patient relationship is stronger with a broader background and that it is easier to relate to patients if one is not always thinking on a scientific level.

As with the Sporcks, medical degrees and Otterbein go together in the Harold F. Augspurger family. All attended Otterbein: Harold '41; wife Gracie (Gracie Burdge) '39; children - Dick '69, Jim '71, Jayne Ann '74, and Betsy '76. Harold, Dick and Jim are all in the medical profession and all married Otterbein graduates.

Harold and Jim are dentists. Harold practices in Dayton where he has been president of the Dayton Dental Society and a delegate to the Ohio State Dental Association and the American Dental Association. His appreciation for his Otterbein education is reflected in long service to the College as an alumnus. He is currently a trustee and a member of the executive committee.

Jim graduated Summa Cum Laude from the Dental School of Ohio State University in 1975. He now has a dental practice in Westerville.

Dick, a board certified urologist, has been a professor at the University of Colorado Medical Center for the past two years. He recently received an award from the resident physicians for his outstanding clinical teaching. He is currently entering private practice in urology with three partners.

Another prominent physician, Dr. Ray Gifford '44, is head of the department of hypertension and nephrology (kidney disease) at the Cleveland Clinic. He is responsible for the care of some 200 patients in a combination of clinic outpatient practice, hospital practice and dialysis. Gifford emphasizes his satisfaction with Otterbein: "You get something from the small, church-oriented school that you don't get from a big, impersonal institution. It gives you a better background and makes you a more sensitive person—and it gives you a feeling of belonging."

Gifford was presented the Special Achievement Award from Otterbein in 1970 in recognition of his eminence in medicine. He praises the "top flight" people on Otterbein's staff and remembers especially the influence he felt from Dr. E.W.E. Schear, head of the science department and the premed advisor.

One of Gifford's classmates, now retired Air Force General Evan Schear, was also guided into a medical career by Professor Schear, his father. General Schear and Gifford were students who became "seniors in absentia" with a specially designed program to finish undergraduate work quickly during World War II. Schear, a military medical officer for 30 years, looks back on his undergraduate education with appreciation.

General Schear went from Otterbein to Duke where he earned his M.D. before beginning his Air Force career. In 1969 he was given an Honorary Doctorate from Otterbein, signifying his tremendous achievements. Extolling the value of a liberal arts education, Schear states that he learned from his father the importance of "keeping as broad a base as you can, as long as you can, before narrowing yourself down to a specialty and eliminating some knowledge you could have otherwise gained."

E.W.E. Schear: Dedicated Professor

Dr. E.W.E. Schear '07 spent a long and active life at Otterbein as chairman of the science department for 39 years. While earning his M.A. at Columbia and his Ph.D. at Ohio State University, he taught at Westfield College in Illinois and joined Otterbein in 1912 to teach biology and geology. Schear retired with professor emeritus status in 1951, boasting memberships and offices in the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the Fellowship of the Academy of Science, Sigma Zeta science fraternity, Sigma Xi honorary science fraternity, National Education Association, Ohio College Association, Otterbein's Torch and Key, as well as church and community organizations and

Alpha Epsilon Delta national premed fraternity. In 1970, at the time of the dedication of the new Otterbein Science Center, Schear was presented the Distinguished Service Award. After his death in 1971, Otterbein chose to name the Science Center in his memory in a 1976 ceremony. In the dedication of E.W.E. Schear Hall, President Thomas J. Kerr, IV, said Schear "demonstrated the relationship of religion and science" in his dedicated teaching and service to Otterbein. Dr. J. Hutchison Williams said Schear's "intellect, enthusiasm, insatiable curiosity and belief in the individual played a major role in the careers of many." This sentiment is echoed by Schear's son, Dr. Evan Schear. "He was more general in scope than most men of science, teaching astronomy, geology, physiology, chemistry and biology," declares the proud son. "He was honest with students and admired by many. He was a great man."

And another classmate, Dr. J. Hutchinson Williams, agrees. Williams is now Associate Dean of the College of Medicine at OSU and he says medical schools look for a broad background like that which is found at Otterbein. "The advantage of a school like Otterbein is the opportunity for a student to be known by faculty members," Williams notes in appreciation of the small size. "I like to think the liberal arts education is a positive influence. The liberal arts, church-related school develops a level of humanities quality that tends to survive what happens in the technology of medical school."

Dr. Bielstein also makes a vital contrast between the training of a doctor who is strictly a technician and the physician who tends to relate better to the patient. "Otterbein makes better physicians; we create the whole person."

And creating the professional "whole person" is what Otterbein's program is all about. A reputation is established—and the success stories continue.

A major factor in Otterbein's continuing excellent record in placing its premed students in the nation's foremost professional schools is its ability to attract superior students. Will there be future "Pottengers" graduating from the College? A look at one of the current freshmen entering the premed program would certainly indicate a resounding "Yes!"

David A. Lowry, Class of 1984, is a young man whose outstanding academic, musical, and athletic talents, dedication to serving others, and leadership skills are recognized by both his peers and teachers at Westerville South High School. Dr. Jerry Jenkins: Researcher

Otterbein boasts many outstanding faculty and among them is chemistry professor Dr. Jerry Jenkins. Jenkins is currently extending his third sabbatical from Otterbein by working at the Battelle Institute in Columbus. Jenkins sees the sabbatical program at Otterbein as one of the most positive aspects for the professional, giving one the opportunity to become involved in updating one's self on a rather frequent basis. "This is necessary for me," he explains. "It gives me greater knowledge and more enthusiasm for teaching, and I think the researcher is more credible to students." Jenkins' work has surely made him a reliable resource person. Not only has he kept current in information and equipment, but his three sabbaticals have earned him international recognition. On his first sabbatical in England, Jenkins took part in presenting a paper and obtaining a patent for a new chemical process in the binding of polymer-grafted surfactants. In his second study, he presented two papers to The Journal of the

Dr. Jerry Jenkins

American Chemical Society (ACS) on synthesizing reactants for the resolution of optical isomers. In his current work at Battelle, Jenkins is investigating the mechanism by which ozone attacks organic molecules. From this research, Jenkins will work with Battelle chemists to present a paper to the annual meeting of ACS this fall. The position with Battelle marks quite an achievement as the Institute has a worldwide reputation for innovative research of high quality. Jenkins is also active in ACS as Chairman of the Education Committee of the Columbus section. Under his chairmanship, ACS sponsored its first continuing education course, which was such a success it has served as a prototype for other courses. Jenkins says he finds this work rewarding to himself as well as a boost to Otterbein since its students can enroll and earn credit from the unique courses. Jenkins was also most recently elected to the advisory board for Chemical Abstracts for which he represents small colleges from around the world.

School Students. He achieved an almost perfect academic record in high school—a 3.957 grade average on a 4 point scale.

John L. Davis, Chairman of the Science Department at South, rates David as "one of the top ten students" he has ever taught. Another teacher, Jane M. McMeekin, notes that "David has the ability to ask penetrating questions that go beyond the superficial acquisition of knowledge."

Also musically gifted, his talents resulted in his selection to the National Fraternity of Student Musicians, Student Division of American College of Musicians. He is a pianist for the Westerville Church of Christ, playing for both Sunday morning and special worship services. At school, he performs with the jazz band.

Not only a scholar and musician, David is an accomplished athlete. He has participated on the football, wrestling, track, and cross country teams. Recipient of the Most Valuable Runner Trophy as a junior, he was voted captain by his cross country teammates as a senior.

Dedication to service to people has dictated David's other activities. He is a member of the Medical Explorer Post of Riverside Methodist Hospital in Columbus, the International Order of Demolay, and the Westerville South Student Council. In the future he plans to serve his fellowman and his country as a military doctor. David Kim, President of South's National Honor Society chapter, characterizes his friend as "a kind and thoughtful person. He always cares about other people which is the reason for his constant helping of those who are less fortunate."

Recognized as an outstanding all-around achiever, David was voted as "Student of the Month" in September, 1979, and President of the Student Council for 1979-80. The Church of Christ senior high school class also chose him as president for the same period. "The leadership David has taken is due to his ability to get things done and the recognition on the part of others that he is worthy of being followed," states Roger A. Veley, principal in the Columbus Public Schools.

With students like David, Otterbein should continue making a remarkable impact in the field of medicine.

1980 spring season highlights

Otterbein women's tennis star Lou Slater won the Number Six Singles Championship in the Ohio Women's State Tennis Tournament this year.

With the State Title, Slater earned the right to compete in the Midwest Regional Championship at the University of Wisconsin-Whitewater, advancing further into national competition than any previous Cardinal men's or women's tennis player. The freshman netter won her first round match before being eliminated from the tournament.

In addition, Coach JoAnn Tyler's women's tennis team chalked up the best season in the school's history with an 8-3 record and all six team members competing in the State Championships.

In track circles, junior hurdler Wayne Woodruff snatched the OAC Championship in the 400 Meter Intermediate Hurdles to help the Cards to a third-place finish behind Baldwin-Wallace and Mount Union.

Coach Dick Fishbaugh's baseball Cards finished their third straight twenty-win season with a 26-13-2 record and a record .667 victory average.

In addition to the record with which win number 20 gave Fishbaugh his 200th coaching victory, the team finished fifth in the nation and second in the Ohio Conference. And with the 324 runs the Cards scored during the season, they earned themselves a 12th place standing in the NCAA scoring derby.

In year-end awards, Doug Petty, a Lancaster senior, was named the recipient of the Augspurger-Ballenger Award, the Lancaster senior receiving the College's top athletic award. Petty's athletic career included four letters, an NCAA Tournament appearance in basketball and two varsity awards as a left handed pitcher on the Cards diamond squad.

Additionally, baseballer Larry Kern was presented with the Powell Athletic Scholarship Award as the Otterbein senior letterman with the best grade point average. Trackman Kyle Yoest was tabbed for the Norris-Elliott Award which goes to a two-sport letterman with a 2.5 or better grade point average.

Trackman Kyle Yoest, the recipient of the Norris-Elliott Award, and his father, Elmer "Bud" Yoest '53, Otterbein's Athletic Director.

Offense is key to OAC championship dreams

Standing at 4-0 and facing 1978 Division III Champ and '79 Playoff pick Baldwin-Wallace is just what sixth-year Otterbein head football coach Rich Seils would like to wake up to on Saturday, October 11.

Winning that game would most certainly push the Cards to the Ohio Conference Red Division Title and into the OAC Championship Game with an NCAA Playoff Berth at stake.

Returning this year is tailback Randy Bressler who led the Cardinal offense in '79 with 785 yards rushing.

And when they stop Bressler short, sophomore kicker Jim Hoyle is about as reliable as they come. Tabbed First Team All OAC as a freshman last year — the only freshman on any OAC honor team — Hoyle led Otterbein in scoring (12/12 PAT, 7 FG's) and used his foot to win three of the Cards' six games.

Leading the line corps to help Bressler and Hoyle get the job done is 6-2, 216 lb. First Team All OAC guard Doug McCombs, an All America pick this year. To McCombs right, 6-1, 230 lb. senior tackle Mike Havens is back to help create holes while 6-1, 210 lb. junior guard Tom Dolder will complement McCombs on the other side of center.

Defensively, Otterbein has some vacancies to fill with the graduation of six starting seniors. But while admitting he's got the talent to fill the holes, Seils has All OAC Free Safety Dave Vulgamore to back up the youngsters early while the traditionally strong Cardinal defense rebuilds.

"We're still a young team," says Seils who's constructed a 26-17-2 winning record at Otterbein over the last five years. "I feel we will have a vastly improved, wide open offense which should carry us as the defense develops and make us a contender for the OAC Championship."
