Down a Peg

By GRACE M. BRANE, '14

Chapter IV.

SEVERAL weeks later a number of girls congregated in Judith's and Betty's room during study hours.

Judith stopped abruptly in the act of measuring out some sugar.

"Do any of you girls have some butter?" she asked, holding a cup in mid-air.

"I have," volunteered Jane Lindemuth, "but it's as strong as Limberger cheese."

"Don't matter," Judith replied, resuming her measuring. "We can't make fudge without butter, no matter it it's as strong as the Rock of Gibraltar."

Betty stuck her head out from a corner where she was making sandwiches.

"You'll put it in very sparingly, then, Judith Ford," she mumbled, her mouth full of the sandwich filling. "Take it from me, strong butter isn't good for anything but for drawing mice."

"Well, are you going for that butter, or aren't you?" demanded Judith impatiently. "We must have some to grease the pans, if we don't have any for inside."

Jane pulled herself up slowly from her place on the floor.

"I'm afraid of mice," she hesitated.

"You stay here," said Judith, authoritatively. "I'll go for it myself, for if you should happen to see a mouse you'd squeal your lungs out, and Emmalina Rogena Morton would be up here in a twink," she snapped her fingers. "Then—nix on the sandwiches, children!"

Sque-e-e-e-ak! sang the door up the scale as Judith opened it, and sque-e-e-ak, -sang the door down the scale as she closed it.

"If I were you, Betty," said Ann Granger, yawning lazily, and settling back more comfortably among the cushions, "I would buy some oil for that door."

"I know it's awfully incriminating to have a door that squeaks," admitted Betty, "I'm going to borrow Mathias's oil can sometime when he isn't looking." She began passing around the sandwiches.

"Say, did you see Edna Barker's new dress?" said a tall, melancholy girl, suddenly. Everybody began to talk at once.

"Sight!" sniffed the tall melancholy girl. "Sight! You ought to see it! Of all the poor taste I ever heard of, she's got the poorest. You'd think she hadn't a cent to her name."

Betty remained silent while the others hurled forth their criticisms. Presently she said, "I wonder where Edna is. I told her to come in."

"Oh she'll be along after a while," giggled the tall melancholy girl. "She'll have to wait until she digs out her french. Imagine digging out french! And she does it. With a pick-ax and a shovel."

Betty was in the tall girl's french section, and had her own opinion as to the advisability of that same girl's doing a little digging herself. Just then sque-e-e-ak, sang the door again, and Judith appeared holding the butter in one hand and her nose with the other.

"Who'll volunteer to hold my nose while I grease the pans?"

"Lay it on the book-case. It won't blow away," suggested Betty.

Judith ignored her, and set about her task of putting the fudge on to boil, while the girls kept up a constant chatter.

"Look here," she said, brandishing a spoon in the air. "You'll have to cut out that loud talking. It sounds worse than a lot of Dago women turned loose at rummage sale."

There was an instantaneous hush in the room. Then soon the girls began to talk again in more subdued voices.

"Where's Joe Arlington?" some one asked in a stage whisper which was almost too loud to merit that classification.

"She'll be in soon," said Betty glancing at the clock, "she's out to-night."

As she spoke there was a faint knock on the floor, followed by the entrance of Edna Barker. She was greeted very effusively by the girls, for with all their ridicule of her absence, they took special pains to be 'nice to her' when she was with them. She was a 'good-natured sort' and had a summer home along the lakes. To be 'nice to her' was policy.

"I heard your new dress is perfectly swell!" declared May Humphrey's, making room next to her on the floor. "I'm just dying to see it."

"It's not much to see," Edna returned, indifferently. "Dress-fitting is such a bore to me, so I told my dress-maker to measure me and make the dress, and I didn't care whether it looked like a salt-sack or an umbrella cover, just so it was wearable."

The tall girl and May exchanged glances as much as to say, "It looks it," while the two were met by an indignat glance from Betty. The latter walked over to the window where Judith was beating the fudge.

"Did you ever see such insufferable deceit?" Betty whispered, "It makes me—" She was going to say 'furious,' but just then a pretty girl with dancing black eyes burst into the room. It was Josephine Arlington. "Oh, girls! I'm starved," she said, breathless. "Hal wanted me to stop in the restaurant, but I was afraid of being caught." She helped herself to the sandwiches.

"Caught!" all gasped at once. "I thought you got permission."

Joe deliberately disposed of her sandwich before she spoke.

"No, I didn't."

"You can count on Joe," laughed several of the girls. "Where'd you go?"

"Oh, we walked around until I got tired, then I told Hal to beat it while his shoes were good."

Joe was one of these 'unrufable' creatures who took everything as it came.

"There!" said Judith with a sigh of relief, as she set a large pan of fudge on the window-sill. "That will soon be cold, then you can help yourselves. I want some of Betty's sandwiches."

"They're 'simply delicious, don't you know,' as Betty's protege would say," said Ann Granger, reaching for another Betty blushed.

"Oh, that's right," put in Joe, "How's he coming on, Betz?"

"If you're talking of Eckert Fanning," replied Betty, "He'll soon eat out of my hand."

"How did you tackle him?"

"Do tell us about it," echoed the others. "We're interested."

"Well," she began, as she walked to the dresser and pulled something out of a little silver box. "The first thing I did was to get this." And she held up the stolen eye-glass. In less than a second she was surrounded by a lot of girls. They all talked at once, while each one tried to get possession of the curiosity. But Betty held fast to it.

"Oh no," she said, rolling her eyes and looking very sentimental. "I couldn't think of parting with this."

"What did he say when you took it?" they urged.

"He doesn't know I have it," Betty told them, as she put it back in the silver box. "I took it when he wasn't looking."

"Oh, I envy you," said Joe, rapturously. "I bet you're having the time of your life."

"And I bet he cursed when he missed his eye-glass," added Judith, going to the window to see whether the fudge was cool.

"He did it in English, then," supplemented Betty.

"How do you know? Did you ever hear him?"

"No, but if his German is as poor as his French—." She stopped short. Judith was talking out of the window.

"Is that Steve with you, Jack?" she asked in low tones. There was a short pause. "I can't hear you." Another pause. "Yes, she's here. I'll call her." She stuck her head in through the curtains. "Betty, Steve's here." Betty stumbled over two or three pairs of feet as she went to join her room-mate at the window."

"Hello," she called. "Are you hungry?"

"About to starve," answered the two boys in unison.

"There are a few of Betty's sandwiches left," tempted Judith, "and my candy's just about cool."

"I've often heard of sandwiches and candy," murmured Steve.

"Do you think you deserve any?" questioned Betty.

"Sure," promptly.

"You ought to prove it, but I guess —" her voice traveled off as she backed into the room. Soon she returned with a large yellow paper bag containing the remnants of the sandwiches. "Now put in some candy, Judy," she ordered, "and then we'll tie this string on to it and let it down." With considerable giggling and much ado they finally got the bag ready.

"Slow, Betty," admonished Judith. "It might bust."

"Oh, I guess n—."

The door opened and in walked Miss Emmalina Rogena Morton, matron of Penton Hall. She stood gazing at the assembled crowd. There was a dead silence. Finally she spoke. Everybody knew what was coming.

"Young ladies, I'm more than shocked!" A slight titter came from one corner of the room.

"Every one of you depart to your own room immediately!" She pointed to the door, and slowly the kimona-clad figures filed out.

"Miss Pierson, you've been communicating from the window?"

"I have, Miss Morton."

"And you, too, Miss Ford?"

"Yes, Miss Morton."

"I am more than shocked," Miss Morton said again.

(To be Continued.)

When Beth's Trouble Vanished

By INA E. FULTON, '16

"Isn't this the dearest cozy-corner? I'll put this bit of mistletoe right up here, and then everything will be just right. The old room looks exactly like it did when I gave my last Christmas party, five years ago before I went away out there to teach. Its so good to be home after such a long time," and Frances Custer gave her younger sister Beth, a little hug.

"But I'm so afraid you won't have a good time at the party to-night," answered Beth with a little worried frown. "My bunch will all be here, of course, and I know you'll like them. I asked as many of your old friends as I could think of, too. Let's see,"—counting on her fingers, "there'll be Martha and Becky, and Dick and Chal and—."

"And Bob Everett," interrupted Frances quickly.

"Oh no, Frank dear, he's not here anymore. After he left college he went into business in Maine, somewhere. He was back just once, two summers ago. I haven't heard of him since. I'm so sorry; he used to come to all your Christmas parties."

"Never mind, Beth. The others will be there, and I'll have just a splendid time. Who could help it with such a dear little sister as you?" and kissing the frown on her sister's forehead, she tripped gaily away.

Outside the snow was lightly falling. Lights shone out over the great white drifts, and above the stars twinkled joyously, for it was Christmas night. In the hotel parlor, before the blazing grate, sat a young man, musing and looking into the fire as he blew rings of smoke.

"Christmas night and I'm back in the old town. How very much at home I feel. Nothing at all seems changed. I wonder if there is a party up at Custer's. Frances used to always give a party every Christmas. What good times the bunch did have. H'm. I wonder where Frances is to-night—s'pose she is still out west teaching. Jove, I've nothing else to do and I'll just stroll up to the old place and look in. Of course, little Beth gives the parties now. I wonder who is there."

"Frances, darling, what are you doing out here on the porch alone—and without your wraps? Here throw this scarf about you," Beth tenderly reproached her sister whom she had seen slip out from the crowd and had followed. "Aren't you having a good time?"

"O, yes, perfectly lovely, but the room was so hot and my head ached a little—I just came out to get a breath of air. Isn't this a beautiful night? I wonder—."

"What, Frank? Tell me. Who is that over there? Is that you, Chal?" called Beth to a young man who was standing a sort distance below looking in the window.

The man by the window started violently. Then after a pause a husky voice, "No its I—Bob, Bob Everett."

"Bob Everett?" echoed the sisters in chorus. "Come right in. We're having our Christmas party, and everyone of the old bunch is here but you. (O, Frank, I'm so glad," whispered Beth in her sister's ear). "Do come in, we're so glad to see you. Frank, I hear someone calling me.

You take care of him and bring him in."

* * * * *

Half an hour later Beth chanced to walk past the cozy corner. Bob and Frank were there, just beneath the mistletoe. A smile hovered around Beth's mouth and the little frown completely vanished, for Beth no longer was worried lest Frances was not enjoying herself.

DR. FRANCIS MARION POTTENGER

Editor's Note—Change of circumstance, occasioned the publication of this article before we had planned and on account of the short time and the long distance between us and the subject of the sketch we were unable to secure a picture of Dr. Pottenger in time for this issue. However, we hope to present it to our readers in a later number.

In selecting subjects for these brief biographical sketches it is the desire of the author to choose from as many different vocations as possible. It is indeed refreshing to ascertain that Otterbein, though not a large school, has eniment sons and daughters in all professions and callings. The choice of a representative from the medical profession easily falls on Dr. Francis Marion Pottenger of Monrovia, California.

Dr. Pottenger was born at a modest, well ordered home at Sater, Ohio, September 27, 1869. His boyhood was spent in that little Hamilton County town, during which period was developed an insatiable desire for fun and he is still a prince of jesters. In fact we learn with interest that he, though now a dignified physician, delights in "roasting" some of his former classmates with as telling effect as in college days.

Dr. Pottenger, while in Otterbein, was prominent in student activities as well as diligent in class work. He graduated in 1892 and received the degree Ph. B. At that time graduates were required to give commencement orations and Dr. Pottenger chose as his subject "Medicine as a Christian Profession."

Upon leaving Otterbein Dr. Pottenger began his medical studies at Ohio Medical College 1892-1893, and in the following year, 1893-1894, he studied at Cincinnati College of Medicine and Surgery at which place he took highest honors and received the M. D. degree. In 1897 Otterbein conferred the degree of Ph. M. upon the doctor, and in 1905 an A. M. In 1900 he pursued post graduate work in New York City, and has since that time been abroad four times for study. In 1909 Otterbein conferred the degree of L. L. D. upon this worthy son.

Dr. Pottenger started his practice at Norwood, Ohio, in 1894 but remained there but a year when his wife, Mrs. Carrie Burtner Pottenger, was stricken with tuberculosis and they moved to Monrovia, California, for her health. After four years at Monrovia Mrs. Pottenger died and was brought to her home in Germantown, Ohio, for interment. Dr. Pottenger continued his general medical practice at Monrovia until 1901, since which time he has specialized in diseases of the chest at Monrovia and Los Angeles. At the former place in 1903, he established the Pottenger Sanatorium for diseases of the lungs and throat, an institution which has become little less than famous throughout the United States and Canada.

It will also be of interest to note briefly some of the offices the doctor has held and holds. He is president of the West Coast Apartments Company of Los Angeles, a director of the American National Bank at Monrovia, and First Lieutenant of the Medical Reserve Corps, U. S. A. From 1905-'09 he was professor of clinical medicine at the University of Southern California. He was founder, and for three years president, of the Southern California Anti-tuberculosis League, and from 1906-'07 was president of the Los Angeles County Medical Association.

As an author Dr. Pottenger has contributed to the leading scientific journals of the world. In 1908 he published his valuable work entitled "Pulmonary Tuberculosis," which is considered to be highest authority on the treatment of this dread disease. The world has no higher authority nor more diligent student along this line than the subject of this sketch.

But there are other considerations that make Dr. Pottenger dear to his Alma Mater. He is a loyal son and has not outgrown his first college home. Classmates of '92, are as dear to the doctor as ever and just last commencement season, when the reunion of that illustrious class was held, Dr. Pottenger by a promised gift of five thousand dollars toward a new science hall, showed himself anything but passive in his attitude toward Otterbein.

We point to his splendid achievements with a little just pride and congratulate our beloved college because of this illustrious son.

An unique form of sewing club has been inaugurated in which a number of the girls collect in second floor hall after "lights out" to prepare for Christmas. This club is really exclusive. Positively no house councils admitted!

Miss Claire McGuire entertained her mother and her sister December the 7th, 8th and 9th.

During Thanksgiving Miss Bertha Richards had as her guest her sister Miss Elizabeth, otherwise known as "Bib," in whose honor a number of social functions were enjoyed.

Mrs. B. F. Witt was a visitor at Cochran Hall.

Exchanges.

We are very glad to acknowledge from Pittsburg, Pa., and the Spectroscope from Mt. Pleasant, Pa. The former is well arranged, quite complete, and presents a very attractive appearance. The latter, though of more recent appearance in the literary field, is none the less worthy of commendation. Welcome to you both.

Among our monthly visitors it is not uncommon to find the literary pages broken up by advertisements, and one magazine of recent date actually gave up over three-fourths of her front page to her advertisers—a thing that our daily newspapers will not do. Let us be careful to keep the rank and dignity of our college papers on the proper plane.

LOCAL ITEMS.

On Monday night, December 9, the Otterbein Art Association gave a reception to the music department of the college. The beautiful quarters of the art department on the third floor of the Lambert building were very tastily decorated and music was furnished by an orchestra of five pieces.

During the evening games and contests of various kinds were enjoyed and two first prizes were awarded in each, one lady's and one gentleman's. In the Butterfly Game, Miss Clymer received a beautiful water color and Mr. Hetzler a copper tray and in the Drawing Contest, Miss Gabel received a Japanese print and Mr. Lloyd Smith an Arts and Craft stick pin. The Otterbein Glee Club added to the enjoyment of the occasion by rendering several selections.

Coffee, Coco, Wafers and Bon Bons were served, Miss Gegner and Miss Weber pouring the coffee and coco.

The committee chairmen were as follows:

General Committee—Miss Nell Homrighouse.

Decoration—Miss Opal Gilbert.

Entertainment—Miss Catherine Paul.

Refreshments—Miss Grace Straw.

The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America held its second quadrennial meeting in the La Salle hotel in Chicago, December 7-10. There were thirty denominations represented by three hundred and nineteen delegated, among which were twenty-nine bishops, forty college presidents, one hundred and fifty ministers, besides a great number of general secretaries of religious work and laymen of prominence in political and commercial life.

The United Brethren Church elected delegates to this council and ten of them were present at its sessions. Besides President Clippinger Otterbein was well represented by Dr. J. P. Landis, '69, Pres. Bonebrake Seminary, Bishop G. M. Mathews, '70, Dr. W. R. Funk, Publishing Agent of the U. B. Church, Dr. H. F. Shupe, Editor of The Watchword. The other members of the Council from the United Brethren Church were Dr. H. H. Russel, Associate National Supt. of the Anti-Saloon League of America, Bishop Weekley, Kansas City, Dr. C. Whitney, Dayton, and Mr. A. E. Wright, Chicago.

Among the prominent delegates and speakers were Vice President elect Marshall of California, and ex-Vice President Fairbanks of Ohio. Hon. William J. Bryan was also a delegate and was scheduled to speak but was unable to be present.

Bishop Weekley of Kansas City was made one of the Vice Presidents and Bishop Mathews was given a place on the executive committee.

J. R. Miller of the class '14, was called home to officiate at the funeral of one of his old friends.

Dec. 15 Mr. Roop will begin his meetings at Sycamore and Dec. 27, one of Otterbein's gospel teams will appear on the scene to assist in the meetings.

Nov. 22 O. W. Briner went to Mt. Zion, near Sycamore to assist Mr. C. V. Roop in the evangelistic services. The meeting had begun about two weeks before Mr. Briner's arrival. Mr. Roop began the meeting with a great deal of apposition. Some thought they had better close the church and make a sheep pen out of it, but by great faith on the part of the pastor, Mr. Roop, and just a few of the members the meeting was carried on with great success. There were twenty-one conversions and thirteen united with the church.

Nov. 23 Pres. F. E. Brook of Leander Clark College, Toledo, Iowa, led the chapel exercises and gave a few interesting remarks.

Bronson Durrant, a former student of Otterbein, who has been bookkeeper for the Illinois Midland Coal Co. at Pawnee, Ill., for the past two months has been promoted to stock overseer of the mines.

The people of Westerville have free delivery now. The mail is delivered twice a day and at the business places four times a day. This is greatly appreciated by the people of Westerville.

Secretary Sandles of the Department of Agriculture of Ohio and an Otterbein man made an address to the student body at the chapel hour on Wednesday, December 11. Mr. Sandles is a very able speaker and not only delighted the students but gave them some good sound principles of life. Otterbein is always proud to own such men as her sons.

Dr. T. J. Sanders went to Columbus on Friday night to attend the session of the Schoolmasters' Club and on Saturday morning went to Dayton to attend a special meeting of the executive committee of the General Board of Education of the United Brethren Church of which he has long been a member.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

G. L. Stoughton, class, '92, was recently elected state lecturer of the Fraternal Mystic Circle for the state of Illinois at a salary of $900.00 and all expenses. His headquarters after January 1, will be at Bloomington, Ill.

Miss Dell LeFevre, class, '92, who is engaged at present as professor of modern language in Fostoria Academy, spent a few days at Thanksgiving time visiting her parents near town and her many friends of this place. She reports her work very pleasant.

The Juniors have decided to publish a college annual next spring. Editors and managers have been elected.

Fully three-fourths of the students have grades above eighty-five per cent and are by an agreement of the faculty exempt from final examinations.

I Wonder:

If the debts we owe to God are not payable to man.

If the bulk of the Christian's work is not in the valley instead of on the mountain top.

If because a neighbor can do more work than you, God will excuse you for sitting in the shade.

If fuss and fret and worry are traits of a truly Christian Character.

If jealousy because of a brother's success does not manifest our own weakness and littleness.

EDITORIAL

Emerson says, "Life is not so short but that there is always time enough for courtesy."

Recently there appeared before the student body a man of culture and refinement representing a world-wide interest and before he had spoken three minutes there began to be a shuffling of feet, dropping of hymn books, and a buzz of whispering all over the chapel, but particularly in a certain part of the sophomore section. True enough the students had already listened to one speech that morning but that one was by no means lengthy nor tedious. It also may be true that the second speaker was not very interesting; but when students of a college, especially such as Otterbein, are not only disrespectful but uncouth to her visitors it is a deplorable condition indeed, and leaves a black eye on the face of the institution they represent and of which they are a part.

"NOT IT."

There is scarcely any one who does not remember the games in which he used to participate when a child and how each one, as soon as a game was suggested, would cry out at the top of his voice, "not it." Has it ever occurred to us how much of this same spirit we manifest in the game of life. Neither is college life an exception. As soon as the officers of an organization suggest a task that should be performed there is at once heard a deafening chorus of "not It" and the work must be done by the officers or remain undone. Moreover, it never seems to be the ones that do the most that are the first to cry out but it is usually those who do the least. There seems to be a dreaded fear on the part of some that they will lose a little time that might be devoted to their own interests.

There is no use "crying over spilt milk." The 1912 football season has not been a success and excuses will not change the result. One victory is all that can be boasted. The opponents scored a total of 257 points against 61. The total score is not proof, however, that the Varsity were completely snowed under. The Wesleyan, St. Marys, Ohio, Marietta, and Wittenberg games were hotly contested.

A Coach is in a peculiar position. If there is a winning team he is eulogized to the skies, if not, he gets the opposite. Three of last years team were lost by graduation and three failed to get back this year and were greatly missed. Plenty of new material showed up but it seemed that they could not be whipped into good team work. A zeal for victory ought to cause any player to lay aside prejudices and fight to win.

Manager Funkhouser arranged a hard schedule and did not spare his energy to make the season a success. Each player was provided with a good uniform and was well cared for. Assistant managers, Hott and Wells, were always on hand to give a rubdown or an application of linament when the fellows got to the dressing room. Captain Snively tried three positions this year in an attempt to strengthen the team, quarterback, left end, and left half, but did his most efficient work at left half. Jack received an injury at Cincinnati that kept him out of two games at the close of the season.

Plott's ability is best recognized by the fact that he is elected captain for 1913. This fast back lost only a few minutes in the whole season; this was in the last quarter of the State game. We wish him success as he leads next year's squad.

Learish, the old reliable, is noted for his defensive playing. This is his third year of varsity football and although he has always played the game he had his first chance to score when he made the only touchdown in the Antioch game. He was shifted to a tackle position the last of the season and did efficient work there.

Football agrees with Sommers. He gained fifteen pounds during the season. While he always plays a consistent game, his specialty is long end runs. You ought to see him make one of those long runs.

Farver started the season at center and was then shifted to right tackle. "Red" is the only man that played every minute. What is more he was in the game every one of these minutes.

Hayes came to Otterbein this year after having played varsity football at Lebanon Valley. He played the left-end position very creditably.

Daub and Bronson alternated at the quarterback position. Each lacked experience but played all the football he knew and played hard.

Elliott was quarantined for two weeks in the middle of the season. We missed his gigantic figure and found that it was hard to get along without the big fellow.

Weimer at Center and Stitt at right guard are to be commended for their consistent work in their respective positions.

The Seconds.

The seconds did not make much of a showing as a team because they were continually being drawn upon for Varsity material. They tied one game and lost four.

Mathers and Schnake at ends, Hert, Richey and Beal in the line, Metzger and Weaver as halves, and Sheppard at quarterback showed good form.

Ohio-7. Otterbein-0.

The Varsity showed that all the spirit had not left the team by playing a hotly contested game with Ohio at Athens, Saturday, Nov. 16. Ohio's score was made in the first quarter when Ross intercepted a forward pass and ran 70 yards for a touchdown. Learish was shifted to a line position and showed fine form on defense. Ohio made only four first downs. Plott and Snavelly made good gains. Ohio suffered many penalties, but costly fumbles kept the tan and cardinal from scoring.

Marietta-21. Otterbein-6.

The Varsity met Marietta at Marietta, Saturday, Nov. 23. Few realize that this was a hard game after a long trip, however, it was well contested. Otterbein made her only score in the second quarter when Sommers received a forward pass and ran 25 yards for a touchdown. Marietta was not as successful with the forward pass as the Varsity and made her most consistent gains through the line. Capt. Snavelly was in good form and played a hard game.

'78. Dr. W. J. Zuck, is the office secretary of the Sunday evangelistic association which is now planning a great campaign in Columbus by the noted evangelist. A large tabernacle has been erected and there will be a chorus of 1500 voices to sing under the direction of Mr. Homer Rhode-heaver.

'97. On Sunday morning, November 9, Professor Alma Guitner gave an address at Eastwood Congregational church, Columbus, Ohio.

'07. Mr. J. W. Ayer, teacher in the high school at Madisonville, Ohio, was in Westerville, Friday evening, November 15. Professor Ayer is acquainted with some of the players on the Penn State eleven and attended the game between that school and Ohio State, at Columbus, November 16.

'12. Mr. H. P. Lambert of Anderson, Indiana was a recent visitor at Otterbein.

'72. Mr. S. J. Flickinger, managing editor of the "Dayton Herald" has purchased a partnership in the "Daily Sun" of Durham, North Carolina.

'04. Mrs. Sarah Clements, of Westerville, Ohio, was the guest of her son, Mr. F. O. Clements, '96, of Dayton, Ohio, recently.

,92. Rev. W. E. Bovey, pastor of North Congregational Church, Columbus, Ohio, made Otterbein a call Friday, November 22.

'97. "Rev. W. G. Stiverson, regular army chaplain, is spending a few days in Dayton. Granted thirty days leave of absence, he embraced the opportunity to make a trip from Boston to visit old friends and familiar places. This includes Westerville, Ohio, where he was pastor for a number of years. Mr. Stiverson is in good health, and is in a great work: for soldiers of the regular army are subjected to temptations above the average man. He accompanied excursionists to the Shaker farm on Thursday, November 21."—Religious Telescope.

'07-'06. Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Porter of West Jefferson, Ohio, paid Otterbein a visit recently.

'82. Dr. A. P. Funkhouser, pastor of the First U. B. Church at Staunton, Virginia, preached at the First Methodist Protestant Church of Columbus, Ohio, recently. Dr. Funkhouser was in Columbus in the interest of church union.

'12. Miss Mary Bolenbough visited friends at Otterbein, Friday, December 6.

'77. Dr. S. W. Keister, Field educational secretary of the United Brethren Home Missionary Society, conducted the devotions at chapel Friday morning, December 6.

'58. "Mrs. M. A. Fisher, Westerville, Ohio, died at the Grant hospital, in Columbus, November 27. With her departure one of the most efficient and best known women educators in the United Brethren Church passed on to her reward. She had been a public school teacher four years previous to becoming principal of the ladies' department of Otterbein University in 1863. This position she filled for one year. On July 28, 1864, she was married to Rev. F. J. Fisher, who had served one year as principal of Westfield College, and with him moved to Ill. His sad death occurred on October 4 of the same year, but Mrs. Fisher heroically took up his duties and taught in Westfield College from 1864 to 1867. Two more years were spent in the same school, 1873 to 1875, and from 1875 to 1882 again in Otterbein. Besides this service in our Church Colleges, she spent four years in Franklin College, Indiana, served as bookkeeper in Cincinnati and Columbus and as acting librarian of Nevada State Library. For two years she was proofreader in our Publishing House. Mrs. Fisher had a large circle of close friends and her choice spirit was a benediction to all. Funeral services were held at Westerville, November 24, after which, at her own request, her body was taken to Cincinnati and cremated."—Religious Telescope.

'05. Professor and Mrs. E. M. Hursh sailed from Liverpool for Freetown, Wednesday, November 20. Sixty hours of rain was encountered between the United States and England. All, including Dr. S. S. Hough who is sailing with them, were well when they left England.

'97. Mr. F. B. Moore, was married, November 18 to Eleanor M. Miesse of Omaha, Nebraska. Mr. Moore has for some time been a traveling salesman for the Ward-Stilson Co. of New London, Ohio, having his headquarters in Des Moines, Iowa. He now has charge of the middle west district for the above firm with headquarters at Omaha, Nebraska.

'88. "Dr. J. G. Huber, of Bonebrake Seminary, was chosen by the appropriate committee to direct the brotherhood work of the church at the resignation of Rev. W. L. Bunger. This service will be performed without pay, in connection with duties in the Seminary class-room. As much time as is at command will be given to this department, including both correspondence and field work in territory which can be reached. Doctor Huber is well known in this realm and has marked abilities for its duties,"—Religious Telescope.

'10. Mrs. Grace Heller Hendrix was a guest of her sister, Miss Hendrix at Cochran Hall recently.

'94. Mrs. Mary Stevenson Howard of Tokyo, Japan, on furlough in the United States, spoke at the Otterbein Y. W. C. A., December third.

'01. Mrs. C. W. Worman of Brooksville, Ohio, was a recent guest at the Guitner home on College Avenue.

'69. Dr. J. P. Landis, President of Bonebrake Seminary, has been elected to the board of control of the Dayton Public Library.

'11. James O. Cox, secretary of the Lincoln Legion of Clark County, Ohio, was in Westerville and visited some of the college class rooms, December 4. Mr. Cox conducted worship at the chapel hour.

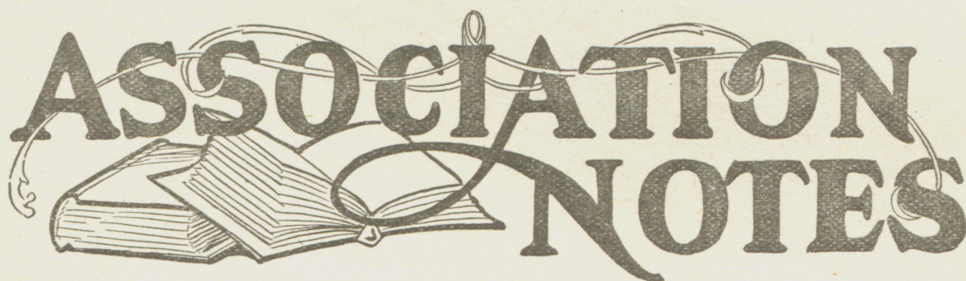

'91. Mr. and Mrs. I. G. Kumler, of Dayton, Ohio are travelling in the East. They will include New York City and Boston in their itinerary.

'09. Mr. N. F. Latto of Indiana visited his home in Westerville, recently.

'03. Rev. Wallin E. Riebel of Columbus conducted chapel devotions at Otterbein, November 20.

'12. Miss Edith Gilbert has accepted the position as teacher of English and Latin in the high school at West Milton, Ohio.

ASSOCIATION NOTES

Y. M. C. A.

The regular meeting on Nov. 14, was led by H. E. Richer. He used as a subject, "The Square Deal," emphasizing in particular the importance of dealing fairly and squarely with our fellowmen, ourselves, and God. After his short talk many other members talked on various phases of the subject.

The association was especially favored on Nov. 21 in being addressed by H. W. Hutches, a business man of Cincinnati, Ohio. He discussed the matter of, "Making Good." In the first place he said, that if you make good in the world you'll have to take it. Nothing in that respect is given to you. The world is anxiously waiting to honor you, but you must be able to take the honors, they are not given out at random. To make good you must be a man of service, a good citizen, constructive and progressive, and then above all do not fail to be a good Christian. Simply be good in the truest sense, that is all that God requires.

"College Friendships" was the topic of Dr. Charles Snavelly's talk on Dec. 5. A few things he said are, "You will remember nothing with more everlasting gratitude than some soul who helped you to reveal yourself. We are too much like Crustaceans, and need some one to help us molt our shell. The most we know of God and Jesus Christ we discover by studying their attributes in our fellowmen."

Y. W. C. A.

Nov. 26—Thanksgiving Meeting. The Y. M. C. A. joined the Y. W. C. A. in this, the regular meeting on Tuesday, Nov. 26, Miss Ruth Maxwell spoke on, "A Necessity in Christian Life."

Lessons were drawn from the story of the ten lepers being cleansed by Christ, recorded in Luke 17:11-18. Only the one leper, a Samaritan, returned to Christ to give praise and thanksgiving. To this leper then was added the joy of eternal life by Christ.

Thanksgiving, thankful gratitude for favors is a necessity for Christian living. It is really the beginning, the first step. If one does not feel thankful for what Christ has done, how can we love and serve him? Love is the law of Christian life and this comes largely in considering his gift to us, his own life of love and service.

People in Christian lands take their blessings as a matter of course. In the hurry and bustle of life we rush along as did those lepers in their hurry to get to the priest and forget to be thankful. Thanksgiving has a reflex-action on the heart of the thanks giver, as well as making the heart of God glad for a grateful heart.

Nov. 19—Miss Veda VanSickle, Leader, Subject "Detachables." No man knoweth when the master of the house cometh, but that we should always be on the watch.

Miss Vera Blynn, Secretary to young women's work of U. B. church, spoke to the girls on, "What Home Mission Week Might Mean to College Women."

Missions are nothing more than a desire to share our religion with someone else; to fulfill the will of God; to do our part in this great work.

There are three visions we should get: Vision of the multitude of people out of the reach of Christ, vision of the Christian girl in our colleges and lastly a vision of our Christ bearing his cross.

The need of our church is that of efficient leadership. So many people live just within the marginal line of Christianity. If we are to help carry the story of Jesus Christ to the girls in the slums we must avail ourselves of this powerful intercessory, "prayer." Home missions are all around us. It is here that we must begin. Our greatest debt, we as college women owe to this Home Mission Week, is to surrender ourselves wholly to Jesus Christ. We ought to be able to say, "I have finished the work that thou gavest me to do," when we lay our lives down.

Dec. 3—Miss Agnes Drury opened the meeting by reading several selections from Mark, I Samuel, and Revelations. Miss Mary Williamson favored the association with a vocal solo.

Mrs. A. T. Howard of Tokyo, Japan spoke to the girls of their work in the mission field. The work is indeed vastly interesting. One should never call Japan a heathen land, but still some of the problems of a heathen land arise.

The people in Japan are specialists in their work and person expecting to engage in work in Japan must be master of a certain line of work.

Their greatest problems are to raise the standard of home and moral life of the Japanese students and to work against the Buddhists. Their work, even with these enormous problems, has been very successful. Their number of converts are six hundred and among these there are many faithful, earnest, Christian ministers. Most of the people are working people and as conditions allow them, they are very faithful in attendance of the meetings. It has been truly said where Japan leads the Orient will follow. Wherever our work may lie we must be faithful to our trust.

FORENSIC NEWS

Debate Preliminary.

No little enthusiasm was shown in the debate preliminaries which were held on Friday, Dec. 6. Sixteen men fought hard to make a place on the teams. The following men were chosen for the teams: Messrs. Wells, Layton, Richer, Confield, Good and Emrick and for alternates Messrs. Roush and Stephens. The judges at the trial were Profs. N. E. Cornet, Chas. Snively, L. W. Warson and Rev. J. E. Walters. The question for debate is "Resolved, that the commission form of municipal government should be adopted in the U. S. for all cities having a population of 5000 or more." The Heidelberg debate will take place about the last week of February and the triangle with Muskingum and Ohio about the first week in March.

An Enrollment Fee

We do not enroll teachers free. If we were to offer free membership, this Agency would soon be crowded with applicants: two-thirds of whom would be prompted chiefly by curiosity and would not be in earnest in their efforts to secure positions; and upon these, two-thirds of our time would consequently be wasted. One-third of these applicants would be deserving, but would receive but one-third of the attention that we are giving all our teachers.

An enrollment fee is but a guarantee of good faith on the part of the applicant; without which no strong Agency can risk the time necessary to investigate the applicant's merits. This guarantee is as important to the members of an Agency as it is to the Agency.
