OTTERBEIN COLLEGE

"He might have inspired another Pasteur..."

"You should have watched him in the classroom. Any college president would have been as proud of him as I was.

"It was almost magic the way he created a love for learning in his students. You could see it in their eyes . . . and in their work.

"He looked worn out the day he finally made up his mind. Told me there wasn't anything in the world he'd rather do than teach . . . hardest decision he'd ever made to give it up.

"But how can I provide the kind of life I want for my family on my college teacher's pay?" he asked.

"I didn't have an answer for that one. So, he's leaving for a new kind of job at twice the salary.

"But . . . who knows what a world of good he might have inspired as a teacher!"

Unfortunately for America, this same scene is being repeated all over the country. Men and women whose talents as teachers could bring great things to pass are leaving academic life for other fields.

This incredible waste hurts all of us. For we may well be losing the inspiration that could lead some young mind to discoveries benefiting the whole human race.

As a nation whose very destiny depends on the development of brain-power, can we afford to let this situation continue?

Help the colleges or universities of your choice. Help them plan for stronger, better-paid faculties. The returns can be greater than you think.

the EDITOR'S corner

Alumni and friends of Otterbein have received issues of Otterbein Towers for thirty years. Have you ever wondered why you receive this magazine?

Published four times during the year, Towers is designed to keep you up to date on the present-day campus. We attempt to report the college's development and progress, its academic and intellectual growth, the faculty and student news, and activities of the Alumni Association in an informative and interesting format.

Maintaining an accurate address file on the almost 9,000 readers is our most difficult task. Are we using the correct address for you? If not, please notify the Alumni Office at once.

We want to send the Towers to every former student, of course. But for some we do not have a correct address and a partial list of "temporarily lost" alumni appears on page 21. Can you supply the Alumni Office with an address for someone listed there? Please notify us so that they too will receive the magazine.

Your comments and suggestions on your Otterbein Towers are always welcomed and encouraged.

Prior to the dedication of Clements Hall, newest residence hall for women at Otterbein, Mrs. Vida Shauck Clements, '01, and Dr. Charles F. Kettering, engineer and world renowned inventor, are pictured in front of an oil painting of Dr. Frank O. Clements, '96, in the reception room of Clements Hall. The dedication service took place Saturday afternoon, November 23.

Dr. Frank Orville Clements was director of the General Motors Research Laboratory and thus closely associated with Dr. Kettering, vice president in charge of research for General Motors. Clements Hall is named in appreciation of the generous contributions and loyal service of Dr. and Mrs. F. O. Clements to Otterbein College through the years.

The Acting President Says

F. J. Vance, '16

I never realized before how many things the college president is called upon to do. Just for fun, I am going to list a few of them: preside at faculty meetings (there is more to that than meets the eye), preside at numerous committee meetings, get into the chapel program once in a while, speak at this and that function (an item which I never have felt easy about doing), interview prospective faculty members as well as confer with whoever wants to see the president, keep an eye on the budget, while everyone feels he has need for more money for his department as well as for salaries. Well, I could go on and on. Of course, the new president will have more to do than I, because some items are being held back until he gets here. It is a big job and we are all hoping the right man will be selected and will accept.

Increased Enrollment

I am concerned these days about what we will do to take care of the big influx of students expected about 1960. The evidence points to the fact that there will soon be twice and possibly three times as many young people going to college as there are now. I do not think we want to increase in size as much as that would indicate. We would no longer have the advantages of a small college, which we think is so essential to the education of the young people we serve. However, I feel we must be prepared to expand enough to take care of a reasonable share of the increase.

We will, of course, want to raise standards but not to the place where we would eliminate the good average student. There are many fine citizens who were never top-notch students and we certainly want to make our offerings available to both types.

Facilities Needed

To get ready for any considerable increase in enrollment involves many changes. New dormitories will be required as well as additional classrooms, equipment, etc. It goes without saying that more faculty members will be needed. I'm sure we all realize that the new president will have many problems to solve from the very beginning of his term in office.

We were all very pleased with the success of the Science Day program held on November 23. More than three hundred outstanding high school science students and their teachers were on campus for the day and appeared to be happy about the day's activities. Everyone, of course, was interested in seeing and hearing Dr. Kettering, who certainly gave the young people some things to think about. The help of the other speakers was also very much appreciated. We hope to have something similar in another year.

May I express for the college and for myself personally our very best wishes to all alumni for a very happy New Year.

Faculty Doings

Wins Election

Dr. James A. Grissinger, chairman of Otterbein's speech department, won a four-year term on the Westerville Village Council in the November 5 general election.

Co-Author

In the October issue of Pennsylvania Magazine of History and Biography, Dr. Harold B. Hancock, professor of history and chairman of the division of social studies, is co-author of an article on America's first papermaking machine.

Attends Annual Meeting

Mr. F. J. Vance, '16, Acting President, attended the annual meeting of the Association of American Colleges, held January 7-9 in Miami, Florida.

Appointed to PASO

Otterbein's professor of astronomy, Leon W. Zechiel, has been appointed to Panel Six of the Television Allocations Study Organization.

This group, known as PASO, is extending the work of the FCC by trade associations in the radio and television field for the purpose of making a scientific and engineering study of television operation and potentialities in the UHF and VHF wave lengths.

Honorary Gallon Club

Prof. Philip O. Deever, '34, assistant professor in the department of religion and philosophy, was recently named to the Columbus Dispatch Gallon Club.

The Columbus newspaper periodically recognizes people in the central Ohio area who have donated over a gallon of blood to the Red Cross.

Critics' First Choice

"Remembering," a poem by Mrs. Cleora C. Fuller of the English department, was recently judged "Critics' First Choice" in the 1957 writing project of the American Association of University Women. The poem was published in the October, 1957, issue of the Journal of the American Association of University Women.

Report From The Nominating Committee

by Vance E. Cribbs, '20, Chairman

The Nominating Committee, appointed by the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees some months ago to nominate a successor to Dr. J. Gordon Howard as President of Otterbein College, has been busily engaged with several aspects of the problem.

First of all, the committee felt the necessity of establishing a set of qualifications that should be required in the man sought. Secondly, the receipt of all applications from persons interested in becoming president of the college and the recommendations presented by friends supporting other applicants, and finally, the consideration of the qualifications of all persons who have come before the committee. Approximately forty applications have been presented, either personally or by friends of the applicant.

After careful consideration of the qualifications of all applicants, the committee selected from this large number several men who seemed to possess the necessary requirements that would suit them for the presidency. The committee is presently engaged in the further consideration of this greatly reduced number. Committee members have called upon certain of these men to investigate their qualifications and to determine their interest in the position.

It will be the committee's final responsibility to select from among the qualified applicants that man who, in the judgment of the committee, is the most suitable person to become President of Otterbein College, and to present his name to the Board of Trustees for final action.

Frances E. Harris Memorial Scholarship

Frances E. Harris, '26

A scholarship fund is being established by the Westerville Women's Music Club in memory of Miss Frances E. Harris, '26, a distinguished member of Otterbein's music faculty from 1927 until her untimely death in 1954.

To be called the Frances Harris Music Scholarship, the purpose is to encourage piano majors of outstanding ability and of demonstrated excellence.

Queen Priscilla

Fall Homecoming — 1957 — attracted another capacity group to the college campus, Saturday, October 26. Two fraternities, Pi Beta Sigma, 72 West Plum Street, and Pi Kappa Phi, 79 South Grove Street, celebrated their fiftieth year of organization with elaborate activities to commemorate their golden anniversary.

Miss Priscilla Huprich, Baltic, Ohio, a member of Talisman Sorority, was chosen to reign as Homecoming Queen. The maid of honor was Miss Mary Lou Hill, Arbutus, Hartville, Ohio, and the first attendant, was Miss Constance Myers, Westerville, Ohio, a member of Owls Sorority.

Others in the court were Miss Janice Norris, Onyx, Delta, Ohio; Miss Phyllis Volponi, Tau Delta, Conway, Pa.; and Miss Patricia Wood, Greenwich, Miamisburg, Ohio.

Appeal to Alumni

The music club is now raising money for the memorial fund and is appealing to Otterbein alumni, friends, and the general public to contribute. At least $2,000 must be raised before the scholarship becomes available for use; only the interest is to be given each year as an award.

Alumni who desire to contribute to the Frances Harris Music Scholarship are invited to send their contributions to the Westerville Women's Music Club treasurer, Mrs. Charles Stockton, '50, (Betty Ervin), 135 Hiawatha Avenue, Westerville, Ohio. President of the music club is Mrs. John S. Zezech, '44, (Margaret Cherrington).

The Fourth Dimension

by Professor L. Lee Shackson

I am sure that the title of this article hasn't fooled any of you. My mathematics is barely adequate for income tax purposes, and much as I enjoy science fiction now and then, the problems of space-warp and time machines are out of my field.

This particular fourth dimension is what I choose to call one of the measures of man. The first three dimensions are fairly obvious, and what you would expect. We refer to two of them when we speak of "a sound mind in a sound body." Our educational programs are geared to these two dimensions. One aim is the development of the sound, healthy, strong, physical body. The second dimension is intellectual, and by far the greatest emphasis in higher education today is on that dimension. The third dimension is man's religious side. We try to stress that in church-related colleges like ours.

Man's Spiritual Make-up

This fourth dimension is part of man's spiritual make-up, and is closely related to the third. Perhaps we can measure our fourth dimension by asking these questions: Why do we buy tickets to concerts? Why do we support art galleries? Why do we enjoy poetry? Why do we spend time learning to sing and play fine music? Why do we rent pictures from the lending library? Why do we decorate our rooms? Why did primitive man paint pictures on the walls of a cave in Spain? Why do we stop sometimes to notice a sunset, or the first bird-song in spring, or the pattern of the frost on the window?

I think this dimension can be measured in terms of our aesthetic response to beauty.

The Art Impulse

This impulse, to make and enjoy things that have proportion, balance, and beauty as well as usefulness, which we might call the art impulse, is as old as man; older than the tribe; older than written history; older than politics.

It is my belief that anyone who calls himself liberally educated ought to have more than a casual interest in or a good-natured tolerance for good music, good art, and good theater. He ought to be acquainted with the masterpieces of music and painting and the men who produced them. If possible, he should have a chance to sing or play an instrument or make a charcoal drawing. Even a little experience with art helps us understand the fact that it is only another means of communication between men.

How the Arts Help Us

Acquaintance with or participation in some area of the arts makes us more sensitive to values; makes us a bit more human, a bit more pleasant to live with, a bit more tolerant. The arts help us to make the place we live in less ugly; they help us never to be lonely though we may be alone. The arts help us to get a perspective in life, for the record of man's reaction to life about him is nowhere more honestly recorded than in his art. The 1947 report of the President's Commission on Higher Education pointed out that the failure to recognize that music and the other arts are "authentic statements of experience" is a major defect in American culture and in American education.

Feeling is as much a psychological aspect of human experience as thinking. If this is so, then education must teach discrimination not only in ideas but also in feelings. Have we become so obsessed with the scientific and the material that we worship only that which can be measured, only that which is practical or can be verbalized (and thus more easily tested and graded) to the exclusion of that which can be deeply felt?

What You Put Into Life

A much wiser man than I said this: "If you put poetry and music into life you will get poetry and music a hundred-fold; if you put poverty into life you will reap poverty; and if you put wealth you will reap an ever-increasing wealth; if you put hate into life you will reap hate; and if you put love you will reap an ever expanding love; and if you put beauty into life — a trained perception of its everlasting consolations, refinements and releases of the spirit — the education it gives you will fill all your days and years with the priceless intellectual and emotional rewards of beauty."

Perhaps the thoughtful ones among you should ask yourselves whether you took with you when you graduated an understanding of and an affection for some phase of the fine arts. If you didn't, I think you missed something that Otterbein had to offer, and I don't think your education is quite complete.

An ancient Persian saying, which I have kept on my desk for years, goes like this:

"If thou of fortune be bereft,
And of thy store there be but left

Two loaves, go, sell the one,
And with the dole,
Buy hyacinths to feed thy soul."

Sensitizing Mind and Soul

Howard Hanson has said: "... in the last analysis this sensitizing of the human mind and soul is the most important task of education. We may forget facts; dates may slip from our minds; but the experiences which we have had in being subjected to the thoughts of great men in whatever art, remain with us forever. And perhaps this spiritual development, this rendering of the soul sensitive to beauty, this tenderness, compassion and understanding which come from intimate association with beauty, is the ideal goal of American democracy."

This, then, is my fourth dimension.

Musician's Thanksgiving

May I close with a "Musician's Thanksgiving?"

I thank Thee, Lord, for all beauty, and for the gift of sensitivity to it.

I thank Thee for the privilege of showing others an approach to the loveliness that lies in music.

I thank Thee for the look in the eyes of a child when he first discovers the beauty of a bird song, sunset, or sonata. Thou art in all these things.

I thank Thee, Lord, for all beauty; Thou art revealed therein.

His hobbies are color photography and art, and his favorite recreation is fishing and camping. He has served many times as a music contest adjudicator and guest conductor for music festivals.

Professor L. Lee Shackson

Professor Lucius Lee Shackson, author of the article appearing on the opposite page, is chairman of the Division of Fine Arts and chairman of the Department of Music at Otterbein College.

A member of the faculty since 1936, Prof. Shackson is a graduate of Ohio State University, from which he holds the Bachelor of Science in Education and Master of Arts degrees. He has completed the residence requirements for the Ph.D. degree and is now in the process of writing his dissertation.

A former member of the Columbus Symphony Orchestra, Prof. Shackson is director of both the Men's and Women's Glee Clubs at Otterbein. He is in charge of music education and teaches voice.

He is the author of an article, "Exploring the Arts," which appeared in the Music Educators' Journal, and two children's operetta libretti, which were published by the Lorenz Publishing Company. Prof. Shackson is director of the choir of the First E.U.B. Church, Westerville, of which he is a member.

His wife, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Shackson, serves as secretary in the department of music. They have two sons, James Lee, a freshman at Otterbein, and Charles William, a sophomore in Westerville High School.

Dr. Wesley Otterbein Clark, a member of the executive committee of Otterbein's Board of Trustees and a trustee-at-large since 1947, is currently chairman of the Dayton committee of the Ohio Foundation of Independent Colleges. He is treasurer of the Board of Missions of the Evangelical United Brethren Church.

Dr. Wesley O. Clark

A native of Spartansburg, Ind., Clark moved to Dayton, where he was graduated from Steele High School. He attended Ohio State University and was graduated from Miami-Jacobs Business College in Dayton, Ohio.

In 1920 he joined the staff of the Old Market Savings Bank in Dayton, Ohio, and rose to assistant cashier. From 1933 to 1936, Clark served as cashier in the office of the Ohio secretary of state.

He was elected treasurer of Otterbein College in 1936 and continued in that post until 1941, when he was elected general treasurer of the former United Brethren Church. He assumed his present church post in 1946.

In other activities, Dr. Clark is treasurer of the Goodwill Industries in Dayton, a director of the Homestead Savings and Loan Association, and holds various church organization posts in the Euclid Avenue Evangelical United Brethren Church, Dayton, Ohio.

SCIENCE DAY, CLEMENTS HALL DEDIC

Science Day

Otterbein College was host to 311 science teachers and outstanding high school science students for Science Day, Saturday, November 23.

The program began at 10:00 a.m. in Cowan Hall with an address by Dr. Charles F. Kettering, engineer, scientist, researcher, and world-renowned inventor.

Four informal discussion groups were held under the leadership of distinguished scientists and educational leaders following Dr. Kettering's address.

Dr. Frank C. Croxton, technical director at Battelle Institute, Columbus, Ohio, led one group interested in research and development in the physical sciences.

Dr. Frank A. Gilbert, research biologist at Battelle Institute, led a group interested in research and development in the biological sciences.

The chairman of the department of chemistry and director of the Chemical and Petroleum Research Laboratory at Carnegie Institute of Technology, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, Dr. Frederick D. Rossini, met with high school teachers of science in a special group and addressed the entire assembly at the concluding session in Cowan Hall.

Purpose of the Science Day program was to help stimulate better high school teaching of the sciences and to encourage good students to become interested in science careers.

Two Otterbein graduates, Dr. Harold L. Boda, '25, assistant superintendent of schools, Dayton, Ohio, and Dr. Donald R. Clippinger, '25, Dean of the Graduate School, Ohio University, Athens, Ohio, gave joint leadership to the discussion group for those interested in becoming science teachers.

Clements Hall Dedication

Clements Hall, newest dormitory for women at Otterbein, located on West Home Street, was dedicated on Saturday, November 23.

The new dormitory was named in appreciation of the generous contributions and loyal service of Dr. and Mrs. Frank O. Clements to Otterbein College through the years.

A graduate of Otterbein in 1896, Dr. Clements was Director of the General Motors Research Laboratory. He was a member of the Board of Trustees for over forty years and served a number of years as Chairman of the Board. Mrs. Clements, '01, is presently a member of Otterbein's Board of Trustees.

Dr. Charles F. Kettering, world-renowned inventor and engineer, who was closely associated with Dr. Clements at General Motors, spoke at the Dedication Service on "Frank O. Clements As I Knew Him."

Dr. Mabel E. Gardner, '08, unable to be present personally, wrote on "Vida Shauck Clements As I Know Her." It was read by Mrs. Marguerite Nelson, assistant professor of English at Otterbein.

The building was presented by architect Eugene Benham of the Columbus firm, Benham, Richards and Armstrong. Acceptance speeches were made by Vance E. Cribbs, '20, chairman of the Board of Trustees; Floyd J. Vance, '16, Acting President; and Miss Joanne Van Sant, Dean of Women.

Dr. Millard J. Miller, pastor of the First Evangelical United Brethren Church, Westerville, gave the prayer of dedication.

The presiding officer of the Clements Hall Dedication was Dr. Wade S. Miller, vice president in charge of development at Otterbein.

Following the dedication services, an open house was observed in the dormitory under the direction of Miss Susan Canfield, Clements Hall president.

Keynote speakers during the Science Day program were Dr. Frederick D. Rossini, Carnegie Institute of Technology, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania; and Dr. Charles F. Kettering, Dayton, Ohio.

ATION AND DADS' DAY HIGHLIGHTS

A Dads' Day, sponsored by the Interfraternity Council, was held for the first time at Otterbein on Saturday, October 12. The father of every student was invited and a total of 221 attended.

Purpose of the special day was to give the fathers an opportunity to visit the campus as guests of the college and to become better acquainted with the school in which their sons and daughters are enrolled.

Registration took place at Towers Hall, and an opportunity was provided to meet the faculty and to observe displays by honorary fraternities in the library. The Quiz and Quill Club, Air Force ROTC, Sigma Zeta, Alpha Epsilon Delta, Phi Sigma Iota, and the Society for the Advancement of Management each showed one phase of their work.

A meeting of all Dads took place in Cowan Hall prior to lunch in Barlow Dining Hall. Then the Dads attended the Otterbein-Mt. Union football game.

During halftime, selection of the "Dad of the Day" took place, when Miss Hylda Mosier, sophomore co-ed cheerleader and reigning "Miss T&C Queen," drew the name of P. A. "Tim" Newell, x'29, from a box containing the names of all Dads in attendance.

Dad of the Day

Miss Hylda Mosier, reigning "Miss T & C Queen," presented the first Dads' Day plaque to P. A. "Tim" Newell, x'29, as Don Witter, President of the Interfraternity Council holds the microphone.

The first "Dad of the Day" is from Greenhills, Ohio, a Cincinnati suburb, and has a daughter, Jane, who is a freshman at Otterbein, and a son, Lee, who is a senior. Following his selection Tim Newell said: "I would like to congratulate the Interfraternity Council for the fine job they did in planning this day. I would also like to congratulate them on their method of selecting the Dad of the Day. I am sure there isn't a student on the campus who did not feel down deep that their Dad deserved to be chosen. I am also sure that there are many dads who are far more deserving than myself. I'll cherish the beautiful plaque for as long as I live."

Coffee hours in the various fraternity houses and sorority rooms concluded the day.

Donald Witter, President of the Interfraternity Council, was in charge of the program and was assisted by members of the council.

The Dads were registered in front of Towers Hall by members of the Interfraternity Council.

The Scientist In The Modern World

By FREDERICK D. ROSSINI, Head of the Department of Chemistry
Carnegie Institute of Technology, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania

(Excerpts from the closing address for Science Day at Otterbein, November 23, 1957.)

It is a great privilege for me to have the honor of giving the closing address at the 1957 Science Day at Otterbein College.

In order to develop an understanding of the modern scientist and his relation to the world, we must first have a comprehension and feeling for science and scientists of the past. Let us then review briefly some of the historical aspects of science from its beginning.

In its broadest sense, the word "science" can be taken as synonymous with learning and knowledge, but in the usual sense, we may define "science as ordered knowledge of natural phenomena.

Early Science

The first scientific ideas of man came in the field of astronomy, because the phenomena of the heavens are the most readily observed, the most striking and the most regular of natural occurrences.

It was about 580 years before Christ was born that the Grecian philosopher Thales made one of the first of all scientific contributions,—relating to the eclipse of the sun.

About 450 B.C., Empodocles advanced the idea of the four primary elements of matter,—earth, water, air, and fire—these being, respectively, a solid, a liquid, a gas, and a flame. Flame was then considered to be a type of matter of still rarer structure than a gas.

About 375 B.C., Democritus and Leucippus developed their conception of the atomic structure of matter.

Near the same time, Plato was promulgating his theory that all knowledge comes from the unfolding of forgotten memories of a previous existence.

About 350 B.C., Aristotle brought forth his great criticism of the atomic theory of Democritus and Leucippus.

About 325 B.C., Euclid of Alexandria compiled his books on geometry.

About 250 B.C., Archimedes formulated the fundamental ideas of hydrostatics, and took what may be regarded as the first step in the exact science of mechanics.

This early great intellectual activity of Greece was followed by that of Rome, which in turn gave way to the dark age following the barbarian conquests. But the seeds of science had been sown, to germinate after the lapse of centuries and grow in the more fruitful soil of the age of experiment, which came with the renaissance of science.

Differences Between Old and Modern Science

One of the important differences between the science of old and the science of today is that the scientist of the nineteenth and earlier centuries was mainly a lone investigator whereas the modern scientist generally works as a member of a team.

The early scientist did with his own hands everything that needed to be done around the laboratory. He made his own tools, he blew his own glass, he manufactured his own equipment, and he assembled his own apparatus.

In contrast to this mode of experimentation, modern science works largely through teams of investigators. In these teams, each scientist contributes of his own special knowledge and experience to the progress and solution of the central investi-

International Geophysical Year

Now a word about the International Geophysical Year, or IGY as it is called. From July, 1957, to December, 1958, 5000 scientists and engineers from about 50 countries of the world are engaged in an intensive investigation of the earth, the atmosphere, and the sun. Simultaneous observations are being made all over the world of the earth's interior, its crust and oceans, of the complex atmosphere reaching from the surface to outer space several hundred miles away, and of the sun, which virtually controls life and events on our earth.

During the International Geophysical Year, scientists are exploring every major land and sea area of the world. They are studying the earth's core and crust. They are probing into its interior with explosion sound waves. They are observing and measuring the many mysterious atomic particles that continually bombard the earth from outer space.

Answers to a thousand questions are being sought in the IGY. Is the climate of the earth changing? Are glaciers receding? Will melting ice sheets someday flood coastal lands? Where do cosmic rays come from and what is their nature? What causes the aurora? What is the relationship between sunspots and solar flares and long-range radio transmission? Answers to these and many other questions are the objectives of the IGY program. They are important to man's understanding of the earth and our physical environment. The answers will provide new basic knowledge, with applications in many fields of human activity,—from the raising of crops and transpolar air travel to better radio communication and navigation.

Earth Satellites and Rockets

Part of the IGY program includes the sending of rockets and satellites into outer space. These devices can be implemented with instruments which can transmit back to earth by radio much valuable information, leading to knowledge of the composition and density of the air at various heights, the electrical and magnetic fields existing there, the amount and nature of the radiation, the size and mass of bodies encountered in space, the temperature, etc. It is easy to contemplate that all this is the forerunner of travel in outer space by man.

In the field of rockets and satellites, United States supremacy in science has been challenged by Soviet Russia. We have been content to make reasonable progress under our democratic system of competition. The Communists have utilized the instrumentality of their totalitarian dictatorship to concentrate on the problem, at the expense of the simple necessities of life for the mass of the Russian people. The Communists have stolen a march on us by being the first to get a satellite in orbit around the earth. The psychological effect of this feat has been pushed by the Communists for all it is worth, and that is a great deal.

However, mature and considered judgment indicates that we should not let this event throw us into panic. Perhaps tougher competition is what we need to keep us from getting soft and falling behind. Were Soviet Russia guided by principles of high moral value and human godly character, we could take their competition in the spirit of friendly rivals. But there is no telling when the Communists will turn their scientific accomplishments to military advantage and, without warning, deal us a blow below the belt. We must be prepared for every eventuality. We must gird ourselves to become better people and more able scientists. We must not underestimate the capacity of the Communist regime, and we must acknowledge the accomplishments of their technology. However, let us still remember, that, notwithstanding their exaggerated claims to the contrary, the Soviets got from us the telegraph, the telephone, the electric lamp, the speaking sound, the radio broadcast tube, the airplane, the atomic bomb, the hydrogen bomb, polio vaccine, and many other things.

It is my feeling that, when our own satellites get into orbit around the earth a few months hence, they will be better equipped with scientific instruments to return to us, and all the free world, much more information about outer space than has come to us from Soviet Sputniks I and II.

Basic Research

Now a word about basic research.

Basic research is that research which is performed without thought of immediate practical ends. Basic research is unpredictable.

Basic research increases man's knowledge and his understanding of the laws of nature.

Knowledge is an essential value of man's life, and leads to the greater well being of all mankind.

Basic research provides the fodder on which applied research in industry feeds.

Basic research piles up data, information, and understanding on the shelf of knowledge, from where it may be drawn at any time for use in applied research in industry, to solve practical problems, develop new machines, create new chemicals, and benefit mankind in many ways that are undreamed of today.

Now our American industry is using up our stock of basic knowledge at a continually accelerating rate, and the shelves of basic knowledge are beginning to show bare spots. It is our job to help keep the stock of basic knowledge ahead of the needs.

We can approach the problem in two ways,—the one we call frontier basic research, and the other planned basic research.

In frontier basic research, the scientist is confined only by his imagination and his creative ability. He may start out in one direction and soon find himself attracted to completely different but virgin territory, with the original problem set aside for the while.

In planned basic research, the scientist utilizes his knowledge, imagination, and creative ability to push ahead in one main direction, leaving the side paths to be traveled in frontier research.

No one person has any monopoly on imagination and creative ability. Many investigations lend themselves nicely to a profitable blending of both frontier and planned basic research.

The Scientist As A Person

I would like to close my discourse with a brief discussion of the modern scientist as a person. There are a number of questions we can ask ourselves:

What is a scientist's job?

How should a scientist go about his work?

What can a scientist do for the welfare of man?

Is the ethical and moral development of the scientist keeping pace with his scientific development?

I have not the answers to these questions, but I would like to make some comments concerning them.

The true scientist is motivated by a driving curiosity about the unknown. Discovery of truth and understanding are his objectives. His desire is to do something no man ever did before, or to learn something no man ever knew before. When a scientist obtains new knowledge, he experiences the same thrill and satisfaction as does the explorer first reaching the top of a mountain.

We find physicists delving more deeply into the unknown areas of atomic and nuclear particles. We find chemists discovering ways of preparing new substances undreamed of a few years ago. In each case, the investigator probes ahead on the frontiers of science, unveiling the secrets of Nature, harnessing its forces for the welfare of man, and discovering the work of an all-wise God in the great harmony of figures, formulas, and scientific laws.

A scientist, like any other person, like any of you, has tremendous power for good in influencing others by example in the simple, true, and kind ways of life. Such influence by example is far-reaching, and covers many persons, places, and times undreamed of by the person radiating the influence. In all our work, we have the great obligation of developing all of our God-given talents to the fullest.

Finally, I believe that the mark of a true scientist is his spirit of dedication to the discovery and service of truth. The true scientist is also a true person. He knows that noble gifts are reverence, love, intelligence, moderation, and tolerance, that great thoughts come from the heart, that truth is the strongest argument, and that man's great achievements are the fruit of deep faith, keen thought, and devoted labor.

BASKETBALL TEAM STARS FRESHMEN

Coach Robert Agler, '48, is building his hopes for a successful basketball season around freshmen Ken Brooks, Larry Cline, Fred Dunham, Tom Miller, and Sonny Thrash. Other starters are Stan Owens, senior, and Jim Evilsizer, senior.

The cage team, though steadily improving, dropped four consecutive games in the 1957-58 season, before recording victories against Heidelberg and Kenyon.

Prospects are bright that the team will continue their winning ways and complete the season with a respectable average.

"O" CLUB HIGHLIGHTS

The "O" Club is planning a big turnout for Winter Homecoming, Saturday, February 1.

In the afternoon, beginning at 1:00 p.m. in the Alumni Gym, approximately sixty high school seniors and their coaches will be guests on the campus. A dinner meeting will be held in the faculty dining room at 6:00 p.m. All members are urged to attend this important meeting.

New officers elected at the Fall Homecoming meeting are:

Dwight Ballenger, '39, president; Robert Short, '33, vice president; Everett Whipkey, '32, secretary; Bill Troop, Jr., '50, treasurer. Members of the Board of Directors are retiring president, Francis Bailey, '43, and Clare Nutt, '31.

An audience of 2,600 saw the first annual "O" Club minstrel, November 22 and 23, in Cowan Hall. It was pronounced a success and plans are underway for another minstrel next fall.

A dinner meeting is already scheduled for Saturday, October 18, 1959, which is the date of Fall Homecoming.

WINNING FOOTBALL SEASON

Friday, November 1, 1957, found the Otterbein Football team the only undefeated and untied team in Ohio. Five consecutive victories contributed to this perfect record.

Prior to the sixth game of the season, played at Muskingum, a flu epidemic hit the campus and incapacitated seven or eight key football players. A powerful Muskingum team rolled over the helpless Otters. With a little extra punch, losses against W & J and Capital would have been victories.

Prospects are bright for another winning season next fall. Senior guard Hugh Zimmer was listed on the all-Ohio Conference third team. Fleet halfback Jim Earnest, a junior, was given honorable mention.

Thanks A Million — Alumni and Other Friends

by Wade S. Miller, Vice President, In Charge of Development

This page is written two days before Christmas and the author, full of the Christmas spirit, wishes to express thanks and appreciation to every person who has contributed to Otterbein in 1957.

During the last week of the year our mail is heavy with gifts, for many people wait until the end of the year to determine if they have given all that is allowed as an income tax deduction; others decide that it is not right to let the year go by without a gift for alma mater; and still other motives prompt people to give to Otterbein at the end of the year.

We cannot be sure what the totals for 1957 will be, for there are always some year-end surprises. However, we predict that this will be our best year since the Development Program was started in 1948. For all of you who helped make this possible, let me again, on behalf of the trustees, faculty, and staff, say "thank you."

Perhaps you feel that the Development Office has promoted too vigorously its cause, that there have been too many appeals for money.

In defense of our policy, let us say that to the individual who responds to the first appeal, there is no other. If we could be sure that you would not forget, or if you would tell us on the card with the first appeal that you would contribute at a certain time, we would be glad not to bother you again. Furthermore, mail campaigners tell us that the fifth or sixth appeal gets results. Presumably, the resistance is worn down by that time.

From experience we have found that it takes all kinds of appeals to reach all kinds of people. We have tried to diversify our askings, hoping to strike responsive cords in as many people as possible.

If we have seemed unduly repetitious in our appeals, please remember that we are zealous for Otterbein — your Otterbein; that we want, as you do, to see her become an even greater college than she was when you were a student. If you could realize what a tremendous struggle our private colleges are undergoing these days, you would understand why we have been so anxious for wide alumni support.

Otterbein must have gifts from her friends. Without them she cannot live. We will welcome any suggestions you have for improving our methods of securing greater alumni support. Even with all our appeals we are reaching less than a third of our alumni. What's your suggestion?

"We'll Honor Thee and Loyal Be"

The following paragraphs are excerpts from an article in the DE PAUW ALUMNUS by Dr. Jerome Hixson, Professor of English and Dean of Chapels at DePauw, and is presented with his permission. Please read it.

If I were a prospective employer, I should make it my business to consider an applicant's relationship with his college after graduation as a measure of his potential. This is almost as revealing as the grades he made. Loyalty to one's college is a man's own commentary upon his college experience. It says that, grades or no grades, he knows, deep in his heart, that the college gave him something of value.

Granted that during the first few years after graduation a man or woman is busy establishing a business and home, or discharging military obligations, there is, nevertheless, a period when he can begin to keep in touch with his college. I should certainly advise him to associate himself with alumni wherever he may be. Unconsciously one thus keeps in touch with at least some of the values that lie back of education. To a prospective employer, a man's continuing association with at least some of the people, both older and younger, who acknowledge the same intellectual and moral standards as the college, indicates an essential soundness in the man. It is an indication of stability.

Observation of alumni leads me to believe, not that people are loyal because they are successful, but that people are successful because they are loyal.

On the other hand, the one who turns his back on that important fifth of his life spent in college up to the time of his graduation is likely to be a divided person, unsure of himself, dissatisfied with much of life. The indifference of an alumnus is likely to indicate that he believes he can get along without others. Regarding him, the prospective employer and others might be led to the inference that he is not of a type that cooperates well. He is not good at team work. One wonders if these attributes might not carry over into business affairs as well.

Certainly the apathetic graduate does not sufficiently sense the contribution of others to the enterprises of which he is a part. There is a German proverb: "Always speak well of the bridge that brought you across." Whatever a man or woman has become, if he can say of his college — "We'll honor thee and loyal be — " we have ground for believing him possessed of fine qualities. It is likely that he has modesty, loyalty, appreciation, and a co-operative spirit.

Alumni President's Message

Dear Fellow Alumni:

At this thoughtful time of year, it is natural to look a bit critically at the causes, the institutions, and the personalities that demand our time, our support, and our love. As we grow older and more critical, it is somewhat disturbing to find that there are fewer and fewer in each category that command our unqualified devotion.

That I find Otterbein College continuing in this diminishing group that commands unqualified devotion is not surprising, nor am I unique in my experience. The solid academic training provided at Otterbein by the outstanding men and women who make up today's faculty as they did the star-studded group in 1847, the fine contribution of graduates in many and varied fields, and the rich friendships that reach across states and continents are continuing proofs of Otterbein's right to unqualified devotion from those who love her.

In this critical year, Otterbein stands proudly and, at times, serenely. However, let no one be over-optimistic. The next ten years will continue to be critical ones, not only for Otterbein, but for all small colleges. As enrollment grows, so do expenses. We all know that tuition has never covered the cost of instruction, so Otterbein's valiant financial struggle will continue even though the enrollment grows.

Another and rather frightening aspect of the financial problem of the small college is the increasingly serious shortage of well-prepared college teachers. The NEA Journal reported in last month's issue that the critical shortage of teachers will move into the college field in the next ten years. This fact means that Otterbein will be competing with institutions with greater resources as it attempts to keep its present faculty and add to it as necessary.

Many alumni are in position to meet outstanding young teachers who might well be brought to the attention of the administration to help Otterbein maintain its faculty at its present high level. This role of academic "scout" is one that we can all play regardless of our economic situation, and it is one that will be increasingly valuable in the next few years.

This piece is not meant to sound an alarm or to voice a complaint. On the contrary, it is a thank you to fellow alumni for generous and loyal support over the years and a warm request that this support be continued and extended.

The record shows that the percentage of Otterbein alumni who give regularly to their Alma Mater is reasonably above the average for college alumni in general. This record reflects pride in Otterbein and it also reflects pride in ourselves, for, after all, we are the only tangible proof that Otterbein College deserves respect and support.

Dr. and Mrs. Wade S. Miller were present and brought greetings from the campus.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, S. Clark Lord, '39; vice president, Mrs. Wendell King (Miriam Woodford, '47); and secretary-treasurer, Mrs. John Schlitt, (Joyce Stauffer, x'53).

BOSTON

A buffet supper meeting of the Boston area Otterbein Alumni was held Sunday, November 17, in the home of alumni trustee Elmer N. Funkhouser, '38, and his wife, the former Gladys McFeeley, '38.

Thirty alumni attended and heard Dr. Wade S. Miller speak.

BUFFALO, NEW YORK

Two meetings have been held this fall by the newest alumni club to be organized—the one in Buffalo, New York.

Dr. Donald R. Martin, '37, is president and Mrs. Ray Mehl, (Georgia Turner, '42), is secretary.

A dinner meeting was held on Saturday, October 19, at the Park Hotel, Lockport, New York, with Mr. Arthur L. Schultz representing Otterbein and speaking to the group. Ray W. Clare, '48, served as toastmaster for the meeting which attracted twenty-one Otterbein alumni living in the area.

The occasion of a visit by Bishop J. Gordon Howard, '22, to Buffalo on Saturday, November 16, afforded an opportunity for this club to meet in a hotel at Niagara Falls, New York. Thirty alumni were present to greet the former president of Otterbein.

The evening was profitably spent in renewing old acquaintances and hearing a talk by Bishop Howard.

WASHINGTON, D.C.

Mr. and Mrs. Denton Elliott, '37, (Louise Bowser, '37), opened their Arlington, Virginia, home for a meeting of Washington, D. C., area Otterbein alumni on Wednesday, November 20.

Dr. Wade S. Miller represented the college at this meeting under the leadership of local club president Robert E. Kline, Jr., '17.

CLEVELAND WOMEN'S CLUB

The Otterbein Women's Club of Cleveland held a dinner meeting at Higbee's on Monday, November 11. Harriet Louise Patterson spoke and showed slides of her many trips to the Holy Land.

A Christmas tea was held on Sunday afternoon, December 15, at the Evans Flower Shop (Maude Owings Evans, '14) on Euclid Avenue. Mr. Arthur L. Schultz brought holiday greetings from the college to the assembled group, which included many husbands of Otterbein alumnae.

Plans are being formulated for a theatre party in February, and a lunch in the spring will round out the year's activities.

Mrs. Earl D. Ford, '22, is president; Mrs. David Adams, '50, is vice president and program chairman; Miss Emily L. Wilson '44, is secretary; and Miss Ernestine Nichols, '27, is treasurer.

Jim Eschbach, '58, was banquet chairman and planned a "Trip around Otterbein in 1957." Rev. Milford E. Ater, '41, served as toastmaster.

The latest news from the campus was brought by Dr. and Mrs. Lyle J. Michael, '19, (Gladys Lake, '19), and Dr. Wade S. Miller.

A project, "Operation Christmas Tree," was launched to help raise money to give alma mater later in the year. Mention was made of a "T-shirt" project. The group enjoyed a lot of informal fun and fellowship.

Officers are: Robert Barr, '50, president; Wayne Barr, '44, vice president; Mrs. Karl Farnlacher, (Ann Hovermale, '45), secretary; and J. P. Dale, '50, treasurer.
