OTTERBEIN SCORES ON OHIO STATE FOR FIRST TIME IN FIVE YEARS.

Fullback John's Ninety-five-yard Run Was the Sensation of the Game.

Otterbein's football forces under the leadership of Coach Exendine put up a strong game Saturday and kept State worried throughout the entire contest.

From the start Otterbein was in the game, and at no time did State feel very safe. Although our team was something like five pounds to a man lighter than State, the attack on our line did not seem to have much effect.

The first score was made when John made his sensational run of 95 yards for a touchdown. Otterbein was on its 15-yard line, State in possession of the ball. Fullback Wright was sent into our lines on a punt formation. He fumbled. John was on the ball and quickly emerged from a mass of players. Before the situation was correctly sized up, four or five Otterbein players were back of him in his dash for a touchdown, with State's men unable to penetrate this line. The goal was not kicked, and the score was Otterbein 5, Ohio State 0.

Otterbein went at it again and when the quarter was over the score was still 5 to 0. Changing goals, Foss, State's quarterback, was sent through the middle of the line on the first play for a touchdown. Wells couldn't kick goal. One-half minute before the end of this quarter we were scored on again, Wells making a twenty-yard run. Continued on page two.

IMPOSSIBLE

TO BE TRULY EDUCATED WITHOUT KNOWLEDGE OF THE BIBLE.

Dr. C. E. Burton Delivers Address to the Y. M. C. A. on the Value of Bible Study.

Why and How You Ought to Study the Bible" was the subject of a masterful address delivered to the boys of the Y. M. C. A. last Thursday night by Rev. Chas E. Burton of the First Congregational church of Columbus. He said in part:

Sometimes we hear it said that the Bible is losing its influence. This fine body of young men is a significant fact that such is not the case.

You ought to study the Bible because you purpose to be educated men. No man is truly educated who does not have a wide knowledge of the Bible. The history in which we are most interested has been molded by the Bible. No one can read intelligently five minutes in the classics without an intimate knowledge of the Bible. It is the same way in Law, Art and all professions.

You ought to read the Bible because you want to be high grade men in morals and in your power to do things. Our lives should be true, noble and Christlike.

Thirdly you ought to read the Bible because you want to be God's men. Down deep in your hearts, each one of you wants to be one of God's men. The Bible is the special agent of God through which we may know him. The finest relationship of life is the relationship of the human soul to God.

BETTER ADVANTAGES

Are Offered by the Conservatory of Music Than Ever Before.

The fact that nearly one third of the student body is enrolled in the Conservatory of Music is a good index of what that department is accomplishing. Over one hundred students are already enrolled and the tuition received from them has nearly reached the one thousand dollar mark.

With the fine equipment of the new conservatory and the excellent teaching force the music department is enabled to offer better advantages than ever before.

A large number of alumni attended the big football game at Columbus Saturday. Among the number were Messrs. Thompson, Smith, Baker Dittmer, Bennett all of last years college class.

eight-yard run to a touchdown. The goal was kicked and the score stood State 11, Otterbein 5.

In the third quarter, State made a drop kick from the 22-yard line for three more points where the score remained. After this stage of the game State was unable to make any substantial gains, and although many struggles were made for a touchdown, they proved futile.

John played a remarkable game, punting and carrying the ball well. His punts were excellent under the conditions and went a long way to holding the score down. Sanders and Hartman also negotiated several clever forward passes and had not the ball been so slippery State would probably have heard more of us than they did.

Exendine's new system of placing his men worked to a frazzle and State was at a loss to solve it. With very few plays used in the Otterbein's-State game, and a host of them at command Kenyon should be an easy victim this year.

Findlay Game Called Off.

Monday morning the manager of the Findlay Football team called off the game with our boys. Their game with Ohio Wesleyan not proving a success, since only two men of the old squad remain. They have decided to throw up the remainder of their schedule. Probably their thoughts of another 85 to 0 defeat had a great deal to do with it.

Manager Bailey is trying to schedule another team for October 8, and without another team will be scheduled.

man spirit to the divine spirit. The ultimate thing we want to be is to be God's men.

Then study the Bible with the mind. Do not be afraid of any truth you can know about the Bible.

Study it with the heart. Take it home and make it useful. It not only points out the way but also prompts us to walk in the light. Finally be men. Be noble men. If I should fail in every study in the course I would study the Bible. But you will not fail. The men who study their Bibles are the strongest men when they get out of college.

FOOTBALL RALLY.

The old time Otterbein spirit was in strong evidence at the football rally held last Wednesday night in the chapel. Nearly every student was present to help out in giving the college yells and singing college songs.

Not only were the students there in spirit but they also had their pocket books along. Some $450 was raised by the student body for athletics.

President Clippinger gave a talk on what he considers the right kind of athletics. Captain Lambert told his reasons why we ought to have a successful season in football. Dr. VanBuskirk and Prof. Wagoner gave some remarks on the relation of the student body to the foot ball team.

After the meeting the student body adjourned to the athletic field where a big bonfire and a general jollification was enjoyed by all.

Judging from the enthusiasm manifested we ought to have the most successful football season we have ever had.

Y. W. C. A.

The first regular devotional meeting of the Y. W. C. A., this year was held Tuesday evening Sept. 20 with over one hundred girls present.

May Dick the president, lead the meeting which was called an information meeting.

The leader read the Scripture lesson John: 15 laying special stress upon the 16th verse, "Ye have not chosen Me but I have chosen you." The leader said "When new girls come to college they usually have plans of their own but the best thing is to let God mold us accordingly to His plan for our lives, Vocal solo, "Looking to Jesus" by Edith Bennett. As this meeting was the information meeting the chairmen of the various committees of Y. W. C. A., made the new girls acquainted with the lines of work by giving short talks on the work of their committees.

Prof. Moore then spoke to the girls for a few moments giving them many helpful hints and suggestions for the success of the Y. W. C. A., work.

Smile! Smile often and when you get the blues smile oftener.

Perfection is hard to attain;
But he who sets his goal high will at least get beyond earthy things.

Remember there are other things in college life just as valuable as the work in the class room.

Did you meet any of those new students who are always happy?
They are the style which make college life a pleasure. We want more of them.

The college student in "proceeding" from the known to the related unknown has a great deal before him to master. It is indeed a good student—a perfect one—who can complete a college course without at sometime making a ludicrous blunder.

His associates under such circumstances will have an opportunity to manifest their true culture by refraining from anything which may assure the victim of sneers and ridicule.

The American people have no greater fault than carelessness in the use of their English. How often we hear public school teachers and people of similar positions use such expressions as "have went," "have came," and "have saw." This is not due to ignorance of the correct forms of these verbs but simply because they have formed a habit of using the incorrect forms. As college students while some of us use the above expressions perhaps we are more given to the use of slang, in fact we hardly hear a crowd of college boys talking without hearing many expressions that are not good English. Since the college is the place where we are to develop our powers we should be careful that we do not neglect this important art, that of using correct English and the best way to cultivate it is to watch our speech and never use a sentence unless we know it is a correct form.

International Peace.

War is the law of enmity and destruction, peace the law of love and progress. The law of enmity and destruction prevailed continuously from the murder of Abel to the advent of the Prince of Peace. During that long period of centuries, a war-like spirit dominated men's lives and their highest ambitions were only fully realized when their hands were stained with the bloody, ill-gotten trophies of war. Rulers became renowned only when they succeeded in shattering navies, destroying armies and unmercifully sacrificing human lives. The controlling idea of force and physical strength were qualities which everywhere prevailed. The warrior was the leading man of the age, while peace was considered worthy only of the ignorant, the coward and the slave.

As we think of such outrage and destruction, as we glance over such a scene of devastation and ruin, we are seized for a moment with despair. Certainly if this law of enmity and violence were to continue to rule the world, the whole human race would go down in blood and slaughter. Is this god of war to rule forever? Is this ghastly flow of human blood upon the earth, shed by the hands of men, to know no end? No, for through the stress and storm, the darkness of the conflict and confusion, we see a faint light, growing slowly brighter. It brings good cheer to our hearts for within it we discern the figure of a Man, The Prince of Peace, the Savior of the world.

With his advent, there was ushered upon the scene of world action, that gentler Christ-like spirit, the spirit of love, which since that time has been gradually undermining the universal sway of selfish power. Slowly but surely these attributes of peace and love have been taking root in the lives of people and rulers as well. Although society is even yet being debased to a certain degree by honors conferred, by great monuments erected as memorials to the valor and service of men who have given their lives as sacrifices to the god of war, while at the same time the efforts and labors of great pacifiers and reformers have been unappreciated-passed by unnoticed, such false standards of human worth are fast becoming relics of a barbarous past and Christian hearts cannot but be gladdened that this barrier is being rapidly broken down.

The glories of war are fading, and bestowing upon the triumphs of peace their rightful plaudits and praise. The day is at hand when nations are no longer meeting on the battle-field to vindicate their claims of national rights and honor, but nobly and manfully are seeking justice from the bar of international law and equity.

From the beginning of the world's history, "Nations that have taken the sword have perished by the sword." No law has been more immutable or inevitable. Institutions of society and government that have been founded on war or by violence, have been overthrown and ultimately have crumbled to the earth. The triumph of the sword and torch has been in vain. In vain have lakes, rivers and seas, crimsoned with the blood of the gallant warrior pleaded for peace. The cries of thousands of burning cities, the agonies coming from brokenhearted widows and mothers have vainly denounced the folly, the wickedness of war. In vain the mighty city of Rome extended her power and dominion until after eight hundred years of conquest and strife, this single city situated on her seven hills, had swelled to the magnitude of a giant empire embracing the fairest portions of the, then civilized world. But all in vain—Rome fell a victim of her own war-like methods. The law of violence is a self-destroyer, remorseless, insatiable, "They that take the sword shall perish by the sword."

The nations that conquered this imperial city were the feudal aristocracies and monarchies of Europe, however no less war-like than Rome herself. The whole structure of their society was decidedly military and one of endless warfare, but the feudal system as a social and domestic institution has utterly perished.

During the ages that have elapsed since the feudal system died away, the influences of peace have so prevailed among men that society has largely lost its military character and martial law. Such temporary institutions have long begun to be replaced by the only permanent law, the law of Love. The people having been changed by the influences of education and the teachings of the Prince of Peace, turned their swords into plow shares, and have followed the pursuits of commerce, and the conquest for the uplifting and enlightenment of the human race. While governments, instead of being the fountain heads of national as well as international peace, have continued to be sponsors of war and injustice. Nevertheless we deeply rejoice that governments have largely within the past fifty years been constrained to resort to arbitration for the settlement of disputes, which were inevitably thought to incur war. Yes, even Europe, in that land where the dogs of war are scarcely ever fettered, where but with short intervals of peace the flash of cannon and musketry set the air aflame by day and the campfires cast shadows of horror and death by night, there in that land is to be erected by American munificence, a Palace of Peace, wherein shall sit the arbiters of nations.

Let us examine the unreasonableness of war. It has ever been evident that the interests and happiness of the people are hostile to it, that if left to themselves, however ignorant and uneducated, they scarcely ever would levy war. It has no charms for them. But peace is full of attractions. How demoniacal then it is for a government to instil into its citizens that spirit which is contrary to their liberty and happiness and, by the love of military fame, debauches their ambition with the spirit of blood shed and violence.

How do wars begin? Each nation thinks it has a good cause and thinks only of its cause. Each nation takes little trouble to think of the cause of the other. Then war ensues. Can there be anything more criminal or unjust?

One of the first principles of natural justice forbids men to be judges when they are parties of an issue, and upon this principle all law throughout the civilized world is based. If a neighbor, having gotten into a dispute, attempted a solution of the difficulty at hand by some vigorous methods of his own contrivance, such procedure would be counted unlawful, uncivilized, and he would be branded an anarchist and punished by the law.

After all, the nation is only an aggregation of individuals, and those actions which are wrong for an individual, surely would be folly for a nation to commit.

Then how much more unlawful, uncivilized and unchristian is it for a nation which poses as an example for all its citizens in the realms of international law and politics, to openly violate the first supremest principle of natural justice, yet that is what it does when it refuses to submit its disputes to a court of arbitration comprised of the nations of the earth.

The United States is a great nation, but this world-wide greatness which we have attained within the past fifty years, has not been through the wars we have fought or the foes we have vanquished, but it has been through our proposals of peace and success in establishing among nations, this spirit of international justice. And if America is to continue to rise as it has in the past and be a guiding star to the universe of nations in their struggle for supremacy, it will be through her continued proposals of peace. May the accomplishments of this mission of peace, which is divinely hers, be the brightest jewel in her crown of glory.

The arm of justice costs little and saves much. The mere maintenance of our defense costs approximately two hundred and fifty million dollars annually—the expense of our great Federal department of justice, but five hundred and seventy thousand dollars. Had peace held sway the eleven billion dollars spent for protection from war in our history would have been used for science, art, education, charity, religion; in short the advance of our nation's true progress.

"Were half the power that fills the world with terror,

Were half the wealth bestowed on camps and courts given to redeem the human mind from error—There were no need for arsenals and forts."

Some however will say that international peace through arbitration is indeed a very desirable thing, but it is Utopian, and a scheme too ideal to be realized. We must judge of its ideality only by its results in the past. The world has yet to point to a single instance where nations that have agreed to settle disputes by arbitration, have refused to accept the terms of the arbitrators and gone to war. Arbitration has brought peace, honorable peace. Besides, is it worthy of our christian civilization with its watchword of the angels song, "Peace on earth, good will towards men" that we should still be stooping to the ways of the savage and the unchristian? Our civilization means nothing until the spirit of Christ shall rule the nations, and this song shall have become a reality.

We now come to a greater question which confronts the world today. How is the law of violence to be overthrown and the law of love to be established in its stead? The purpose of the federation of any people into its union of government is for justice, protection and general welfare because of a common interest existing between them. Thus our thirteen colonies banded themselves together. Thus the German states formed their present federated Empire. So why not a federation of the world powers? Why not a United States of the world? Does not justice, protection and the common defense demand such federation? Are not there being fostered common, world wide, commercial and religious interests to be protected? Gentlemen, the only efficient solution to the problem is the establishment of a Court of Arbitration composed of the nations of the earth.

To this end let us fondly hope that the day is not far distant when the great Prince of Peace shall be crowned with light and glory as the Lord and King over one united people who shall sing reality with the people with one united voice,

"The war drum throbs no longer. The battle flags are furled;

In the Parliament of man,

The federation of the world."

Dr. Jones—I have a conundrum for you. When is it unsafe for a person to go to church?"

Class remains silent.

Dr. Jones—It is unsafe to go to church when the bishop charges the laymen, when there is a canon in the desk, when the choir murders the anthem, or the organist tries to drown the choir."

Prof. Grabill—Mrs. Bailey have you room for any more boarders?"

Mrs. Bailey—Oh, I might make room for one more."

Prof. G—"I wouldn't mind boarding in your club again."

Mrs. B—"What would your wife say to that?"

Classification

Last week we made mention of the fact that there were 132 new students enrolled. In making this count we did not take into consideration the old students who have returned again. Counting these and the new students who have enrolled since last week, the number is 153.

The number of students in the different college classes are as following:

Freshman---90.

Sophomore---50.

Juniors---44.

Seniors---44.

The classification in the preparatory department is not yet completed but will probably be between 90 and 100.
