KENYON GOAL

THREATENED AT ALL STAGES OF GAME BY O. U. ELEVEN.

Exciting Contest at Gambier Ends with Neither Contestant Scoring.

Although constantly playing on Kenyon's territory, and at one time within one yard of her goal, Otterbein left the field at Gambier at the close of the game Saturday with the score registered 0-0.

The contest was spectacular from start to finish. Without doubt, Otterbein played Kenyon to a stand still, the latter making but two downs during the entire game. But for numerous reasons accountable only to the fortunes of football, the old O. U. machine was unable to carry the ball across the coveted goal.

Several times during the game Coach Exendine's squad forged their way toward this desired end and a touch down seemed inevitable, but each time were prevented from making the necessary gain. An attempt at a field goal resulting in the ball hitting the crossbar, was the only time Kenyon entertained any promising hope of scoring.

Every Otterbein man played foot ball. Kenyon was enabled to work but two successful plays and so alarming were the attacks of Otterbein's eleven that the opponents were forced to give their strength almost entirely to the defense.

Long runs were made by Sanders, Snively and Mattis. Sanders at one time got away from the crowd for about thirty-five yards while Snively and Mattis each made a twenty-five yard run.

SOPHS TRIUMPH

IN FIRST BIG "PUSH" OF THE SEASON.

Skillfully Planned, Stealthily Executed, Jollification of Class 1913

Is Huge Event.

Although a class of green and unsophisticated beings entered Otterbein one year ago, it must be admitted that time has worked wondrous changes. With quiet, we cite the reader to the Freshman "Glenn Mary" push. But had it not its lessons? With mightily developed brains and skilled hands the Sophs appear. Victory alone, the goal. Thus do we see the superiority of the Sophs as evidenced at Minerva park last Wednesday evening.

With quiet haste the ladies leave the "dorm." Cleverly, yea, gracefully, the men find their way to the R. R. crossing. A car transports the merry, unmolested second year students to the park. What glorious excitement! Those buns, pickles, peaches and—O, too much to speak of her.

A glorious bonfire counterfeits the gloom of night into marvelous mystic light. About the glorious scene, appetites were satiated, songs were sung and quiet dreamy fancies found form in the flickering logs. The twinkling stars peeped down, the moon lent but faint light, the trees now rustled in the passing breeze, and all nature smiled delight.

Indeed there could be no opposition to the powerful reign of the mighty Sophomores. The foe asleep and quite unskilled, the brave warriors return to their wigwam village and there till throats were sore and voices

KENYON GOAL.

John again showed his ability as a line plunger, making his gain almost every time called upon. Mattis was unusually aggressive at this feature of the game and gained considerable territory. Wagner at end played a stellar game, breaking up several plays which seemed impossible to penetrate.

A disastrous feature of the game on the part of Otterbein men was considerable fumbling of punts due largely to a strong wind. Despite this disadvantage however John placed a beautiful drop kick from the forty yard line, the ball falling but a few inches below the cross bar.

At one stage of the game Otterbein had the ball within a yard of Kenyon's goal, but the latter's line braced for the final attack and prevented the touch down.

About sixty students accompanied the team to Gambier and furnished excellent rooting through out the entire game.

FIVE GAMES.

Arranged for the Second Team With Various High Schools of the State.

R. W. Moses, manager of the second team has just completed an excellent schedule of five games made up from first class High schools of Ohio.

Next Saturday, Oct. 8, Mt. Vernon High School will meet Otterbein's second team on the local field. Mt. Vernon and Otterbein seconds are old time rivals and the contest next Saturday promises to be a royal battle.

On the following Saturday, Oct. 15 the team will play at Circleville or Lancaster. This part of the schedule has not yet been completed but a game will be played with one of these schools on the opponent's field.

Nov. 5, will find Otterbein lined up against St. Patricks College at Columbus. The heated contest with this institution last season on the local field will be recalled by students in Otterbein at that time.

At London, Nov. 12, the fourth game of the season will take place.

The last contest of the year for the seconds as the schedule now stands will be played with the strong East High School team of Columbus on the Westerville gridiron.

The management has put forth an extraordinary effort to secure this splendid schedule and it behooves every football man to be on the field every evening for the balance of the season. Nothing but hard work on the part of each man will assure victories from these, the strongest High School teams in Ohio.

coarse, the hideous war songs of victory filled all space.

Thus the world has an added lesson of skill, bravery and victory. May the Freshman with the sand rubbed from their eyes soon be aroused with a grim determination to dig.

Y. W. C. A., Bible Study Rally.

The annual Y. W. C. A., Bible Study Rally took place last Tuesday evening with Gertrude Meyer, chairman of the Bible Study Committee leading the meeting.

The Scripture lesson was taken from 119th Psalm. Esther Van Buskirk favored the association with a vocal solo, "Give Me Jesus."

Miss Marie McClellan president of the Y.W.C.A. of Ohio State University addressed the Association on the theme, "Advantages and Necessities of Bible Study."

Some of the speaker's thoughts were as follows: It is a part of one's education and culture to be familiar with not only German, Greek and Latin literature but also with the great Hebrew literature. Here one is able to find drama, lyric poetry of the most beautiful and uplifting type, well written narrative, eloquent orations and real rhapsody.

One can not afford to miss studying the Bible from a literary standpoint. One must study the Bible to be up to date. Life can not be translated into christianity without social service. Movements of social service are coupled with religion. The nation that does not get down and raise the lowest is afar from God. By the study of the Bible we become familiar with the way in which God used his people in social and civil service and we also get a little closer to the life of Christ.

We must have the Bible for life. Two years of Bible curriculum is not going to do us for four years of college or all the rest of our life. If we keep the channel gates of our lives open to the Spirit of God we will become fruitful. Systematic Bible Study is our salvation. Open your life and let God speak to you.

Y. M. C. A.

Fragments.

Don Shumaker led the Y. M. C. A. meeting last Thursday night. Some of his thoughts are as follows:

The successful career of any man is based on the fact that he has grasped opportunities at the right time.

Every day is a little part of life.

Make the best of it. He who misspends a day is a prodigal.

The way we make use of our money while in school will determine the way we make use of it in after life.

Every minute of time and every cent of money is an opportunity.

Let us give our spare time and our fragments of money to helping other men.

PERSONALS.

J. W. Belchar and family moved to Amanda, Saturday. Mr. Belchar has accepted the pastorate of the United Brethren church at that place. He was formerly "one of the boys" in school and we regret to see him leave.

G. L. Lybarger spent Saturday and Sunday at his home near Nevada.

J. O. Cox put in a busy day at Columbus delivering Chautauqua desks. He took his enthusiasm with him.

J. R. Bridenstine was called home Tuesday on account of the serious illness of his sister. She died shortly after his arrival. Mr. Bridenstine will have the sympathy of all.

Prof. J. W. Funk was a Westerville visitor last week. He entered upon his medical studies at Cleveland, Saturday.

R. K. Parent spent Friday Saturday and Sunday at his home in Union City, Ind.

Wormans Sail.

E. C. Worman and wife, nee Miss Emma Guitner, '07 and '01, who have been visiting the latter's mother Mrs. J. E. Guitner, sailed from New York docks on Tuesday.

They left for India where Mr. Worman is general secretary of the student Y. M. C. A., with headquarters at Madras.

Prof. Alma Guitner who went to New York to see the voyagers off returned Wednesday morning. Mrs. Worman has a sister, Miss Lela Guitner in the missionary work at Colombo, India.

Mr. Worman is an enthusiastic worker and will undoubtedly meet with success in his new field of labor.

"What literary society shall I join?" This question is possibly confronting a large number of new students and presenting many perplexing problems for solution. We cannot advise you in this matter nor would we if it were in our power to do so. But to the unacquainted suffice it to say, "beware of flattery and false pretence from what ever source they may come." Such means are used only for the purpose of bait and in a few weeks, if in that time you have made your decision, will be things of the past. Have a mind of your own and decide for yourself.

One who had attained to a ripe old age and who was yet hale and hearty was asked the secret to his health. He promptly replied, "mastication." He had faithfully obeyed that all important law of nature which nine out of ten of his fellows were utterly disregarding.

Possibly if there is one fault of a more serious nature than any other that so many students cultivate it is the habit of hurrying at the table. It is a mistake of course—a serious mistake for such a practice inevitably must prove disastrous to the health of the student. In attempting to secure an education it is only sensible to say that we should above every thing else learn to obey the laws governing our health.

READERS' COLUMN.

Should Fraternities be Introduced at Otterbein?

The question of whether or not, Greek letter fraternities are beneficial to a college and tend to promote the best interests of that institution, is one that has greatly puzzled those in charge of such institutions, especially of those schools that are under church supervision.

Many colleges that have fought such societies for years, steadily refusing to recognize any such innovation, have at last waived their objections where the value of these organizations in rapidly promoting things, which tend to a rapid development of the best interests of the school was recognized. Under proper regulation by the college authorities, Greek letter fraternities should become a permanent fixture in any institution of learning, especially where the sentiment is two to one in favor of their introduction.

It is often charged that "frats" lower the moral standard of a college. In a few instances this is true and the fraternities instead of serving a useful purpose are a positive injury to the school rather than being a factor for its development along its various lines of activity. However, the fellowship and harmony existing in a properly organized and well regulated "frat," is a thing coveted by the average student. It is then as natural for him to choose associates that are the most congenial as it is for the water to seek its level.

The Greek letter "frat" can never take the place of any religious organization but it can play an important part in the educational and social life of a college.

B. P. J.

In one way, Otterbein, as a College, might be benefited by fraternities, since their presence would tend to an increase in the number of men who might prove a financial aid to the institution. Here, however, the question arises as to whether a man would prove a valuable addition to the college, simply because of his financial strength. Could the institution afford to take chances?

The vital objection to the fraternity at Otterbein, is its marked, though not deliberate antagonism to democracy. It is not aristocratic in principle; but in practice it tends to a class distinction, which results in an unconscious feeling of caste.

The life of the small college is the democratic spirit that exists within the student body. Every man knows, personally, every other man. In the activities, the man who hustles is the man who wins, "Pulls," other than those won through the personality of the individual, are almost unknown. All have equal opportunity to try for honors, conferred by the college, or by the student body. The social unit is the gentleman; judgment based not on the prestige conferred by an institutional name.

The corner stone of our National Government is the sturdy middle class, with its stout morals and its strong democratic nature. The majority of the men in the small college are of that class. It influences the few others, in the class above, and in the class below, making the former useful citizens who have learned to appreciate the rights of others and raising the latter to places where they feel it a disgrace to allow their condition to drop below the standard of the Mass.

AT THE RECEPTION; OR GETTING ACQUAINTED.

When school-closed, the students of Burton College parted with the determination to return in the fall with a trophy of new students in token of the love they bore the college of their choice. All summer the campaign for students was waged and now the time had come to test the effectiveness of the maneuvers. Many of the old students were on the ground a day or two before the opening day in order to be in readiness to meet the new recruits. How eager they were to welcome these pilgrims to a strange college is beyond description. If similes were permissible I should say they awaited them as eagerly as the farmer awaits the shower after a long dry spell, the young lawyer his first client, or the spinster a sweet heart. Suffice it to say they came. From all points of the compass the students seemed to pour in. First impressions are usually lasting and those ought to be the best possible, so the reception committee did its utmost to make such an impression. The wittiest boys and the handsomest girls were therefore selected to meet the trains and acquaint the newcomers with the town. "I'll tell you as sure as your name is 'Bud' Hadley this drove of bipeds will have to be shown a bloomin' good time such as they never had in all their checkered careers" exclaimed Giggs whose slangy words always seemed more forcible than the flowery epithets of the classics. "Right you are assented 'Bud' and so they set to work. That night between the hours of eleven and twelve every student was roused from his slumbers and handed a printed slip bearing the words "Get busy, get acquainted." No word of explanation was offered but all were left in suspense as to the meaning of the message. On the following day an announcement was made in chapel urging all to come to the reception and become acquainted.

The appointed time came. They assembled in the Adelphean society hall to receive the "glad hand" of the lore-steeped faculty and book-hungry scholar. For half an hour the hand shaking went on, enlivened by a hubbub of voices mumbling "how-do-you-do?" "glad-to-meet-you," "Mr. Spink meet Miss Bloom" And so the chattering, hand shaking and smiling continued. Everybody was just simply delighted with everybody else. It was an ideal occasion. Every man acted his cutest, spoke his wittiest, smiled his prettiest. The girls ditto. There is such a vast difference between the world, ideal, and the world, real—so invigorating to meet people at their best in contrast to meeting them at their worst.

That reception with its music, speeches, happy moments of social gossip, and last but not least, its refreshments beggars description.

"Bud" Hadley mounted a chair to give a parting exhortation. "Ladies and gentlemen" he began "we hope you have succeeded in becoming acquainted. If you haven't get busy, get acquainted. It is now time to go home but don't go alone. You might get lost. Go with some one. If any of you fellows haven't a girl of your own take somebody else's. Salute your partners and get acquainted. Good night."

"Bud" started about as if looking for somebody but finally he started off muttering to himself, "I wonder where she is. Too bad to let her go home alone. Hope she'll forgive my slowness." By force of habit, perhaps, he sauntered past Vivian's home. "All is dark in the house, she must have gone home early." He walked on. He was nearly at his room. "Can't sleep anyway, might as well take another walk." So he retraced his steps and again passed Vivian's house. This time on the veranda he saw two sitting as one enraptured. Evidently they had met before or feared they might not meet again. Before he realized it, he exclaimed "is that you Vivian? And what are you doing here?" "Getting acquainted?" she retorted.

As one stunned by a heavy blow he blindly staggered on. He heard the hoot of the owl, the chirp of the cricket, the sigh of the breeze, but all the voices of nature seemed to sing the same dirge "getting acquainted, getting acquainted."

Beautiful Memento.

Will Carlton, the noted author of "Home Ballads," "City Ballads," and "Farm Ballads," has received from Mrs. Custer a characteristic souvenir of the recent unveiling of the Custer monument at which the poet read an ode. The flag over the statue was held in place by a silk ribbon, and it was a piece of this ribbon, with a few words of appreciation and her autograph written upon the silk, which Mrs. Custer sent. It was beautiful and appropriate—a very significant memento.—Religious Telescope.

A Chair of Aeronautics.

Indianapolis News.

Professor Marchaise, who occupies the new chair of aeronautics in the University of Paris, has just announced the program of a course of lectures. The object of the course will be to expound as logically as possible the results which can fairly be considered as certain.

Without entering into very recondite theoretical considerations, the lectures will still be far from "popular" or elementary. Finally, the development of the special aeronautic library already possessed by the university, and the formation of a collection of small models of aeroplanes and dirigible balloons, will supplement the instruction given by the lectures.

The professor will not confine his attention to theoretical speculations and laboratory researches, but will follow in detail the experiments of constructors and the trial flights of aviators, noting in each case the progress achieved and endeavoring to account for the failures.

The loud and continued applause which followed the remarks of Dr. Howard H. Russell in chapel this morning to the effect that he would renew his prize offer to the oratorical department with an additional offer for a declamation contest proved the gratitude of the student body and faculty for the splendid encouragement which Dr. Russell is giving this important department at Otterbein.

In each contest Dr. Russell will award to the contestants holding first and second places a fifteen and a ten dollar prize respectively. These prizes will amount to fifty dollars in all.

It was suggested by the donor of these gifts that the Declamation contest in which the Sophomore and Freshman classes will participate be held shortly before the Christmas vacation. The oratorical contest, open to seniors and Juniors, will occur a few months later.
