THE TRADITION

Tonight's production marks the thirteenth annual student presentation since the tradition was revived in 1948. It is produced under the auspices of Cap and Dagger Dramatic Society.

ABOUT THE PLAY

The play was originally conceived by Eleanor Brooke and was written as an exercise in the drama course at Catholic University in which she was a pupil of Walter Kerr, drama critic of the New York Herald Tribune. Her teacher encouraged her to rewrite the play, which she did several times, and she finally asked a fellow drama student Jean Kerr, wife of Mr. Kerr, to collaborate with her in the final revision.

The play opened on April 1, 1954, with Cloris Leachman, Jackie Cooper, and Donald Cook in starring roles, and closed on November 27 of the same year. Otterbein is very happy to present this modern comedy.

SPOTLIGHT ON MAY DAY PLAY

The Annual May Day festivities of Otterbein will take place on May 13 and 14. The Cap and Dagger Club will participate in the merrymaking by bringing one of the greatest melodramas in American Theatre history to the Cowan Hall Stage.

TEN NIGHTS IN A BARROOM is perhaps the greatest, best-known, and most often produced melodrama in America. The Otterbein production will feature numerous old-time variety acts, mustachio-ed villains, palpitating hero and heroine, rinky-tink piano, and many other surprises.

You will not want to miss this visit into the past when one of the greatest traditions in the American theatre will come alive on the Cowan Hall stage.
