'Time Out For Ginger' Play Cast Rehearses

The cast for "Time Out For Ginger" by Ronald Alexander, has been busily rehearsing for its presentation on February 25 at Cowan Hall, under the direction of Al Kepke.

It took 4 years for Mr. Alexander's play to arrive on Broadway. Finally on November 26, 1952 it was presented by Shepard Traube and Gordon Pollock in association with Don Hershey at the Lyceum Theatre.

It received such praises as "... is fresh, warm-hearted and funny" from the "New York Times" Critic.

"Time Out For Ginger" is the story of a father making a speech that condemns forcing children to do what they don't want to do and how it backfires in his own home. His three daughters rebel against taking gymnasium and the one daughter, Ginger, decides to play football. As a result, the family and town receive nationwide publicity.
