Six Otterbein

Leading the Way
This is my first opportunity to greet you officially as the 20th president of Otterbein College. I want to thank everyone for the gracious welcome. From the June Bug Jamboree, to the 4th of July parade, to the reception at President Gordon Gee’s Bexley home, my first summer continues to be a series of lively and well-attended events. I have met many alumni and friends and have enjoyed hearing all of their Otterbein stories. Now I’m looking forward to the academic year and to getting acquainted with our new and returning students.

The entering class of 2013, like many before it, includes about 20 percent of students coming from “legacy” families, that is, those who have at least one family member who previously graduated from Otterbein. These legacy students help us carry on many Otterbein traditions. They lead the early morning charge on Schneider’s for warm doughnuts and milk; they remind their classmates that the chimes that sound across the college green at noon are serenade songs that Otterbein students have sung at special events for decades. Many of them have heard parents and grandparents sing those traditional songs over the years.

Keeping these traditions alive and keeping alumni involved in helping us recruit incoming students extends the reach of the Otterbein family over many generations and around the world. We appreciate your help in attracting both undergraduate and graduate students to our programs.

You will also be hearing more about plans to launch new and expanded programs through the Graduate School and Center for Continuing Studies. The recent reorganization of this unit will help Otterbein respond to the pressing needs of central Ohio residents. As it has done in the past, Otterbein must develop programs and opportunities to serve adult students who seek to refresh their skills and explore new career paths. Watch the website for announcements and new developments.

I hope you have all received your Homecoming announcements and have the dates on your calendar. We will begin the weekend with the inauguration on Oct. 23 at 10:30 a.m. All students, faculty, staff, and alumni are invited to this event. I would be honored by your presence and will be there to greet you at the luncheon following the ceremony. The event will be a celebration of Otterbein’s past, present and future and will feature the students from the Art, Music, and Theatre and Dance Departments. It is also the 100th anniversary of Otterbein’s marching band. Friday evening the Theatre Department will be performing Babes in Arms. Following the Homecoming parade on Saturday morning, the Cardinals will take on cross-town rival Capital. I predict a big win for the Cardinals! A full schedule of Homecoming events for the weekend is available on the website at www.otterbein.edu/alumni. (See the back cover and page 38 for more information.) I promise you it will be a good time for everyone. Bring your whole Otterbein family and all those legacy and legacy-to-be children. I look forward to seeing you there and hearing your Otterbein story.

New Presidents’ Gallery Unveiled

Upon the retirement of Otterbein College President C. Brent DeVore after 25 years of dedicated service, the College unveiled its new Presidents’ Gallery on Friday, June 12, on the second floor of Towers Hall.

In attendance were President DeVore and his predecessor, Tom Kerr, the College’s 18th president. Presidents Howe (13th) and Vance (16th) had family members in attendance. Members of the Otterbein College Board of Trustees, including Chairman Tom Morrison, also attended.

The wall, a contemporary design that retains the traditional arched windows and doorways of Towers Hall starts with President Griffith in 1847 and ends with President DeVore. Towers Hall, the oldest and most recognizable building on campus was built in 1872 and placed on the National Register of Historic Places in 1971. Each president has a 6-foot-tall window-shaped plaque featuring his photograph and biography. The 19 plaques lead down a curved hallway. The exhibit is flanked with two restored 12-foot-tall stained glass windows from Towers Hall. This was made possible through contributions by Board of Trustees donors and Sandra Rubino Paul ’46. This is the first time in College history that all presidents are featured in one location.
Bidding Farewell to President DeVore

Otterbein College bade farewell in style to retiring President C. Brent DeVore throughout spring quarter with a variety of events, from the dedication of C. Brent DeVore Hall to the Diggin’ with DeVore Spring Community Plunge.

On May 8, a crowd gathered to dedicate C. Brent DeVore Hall, formerly known as The Suites, in honor of President DeVore’s dedication to students throughout his tenure. The residence hall, built in 2006, is a $9.7 million, three-story, suite-style building which houses 174 students and features an impressive view of the football field. The residence hall features kitchen facilities, a computer lab, a laundry room and lounges where students often gather to watch games during football season.

Later that evening, over 200 guests attended the gala fundraiser, Reflections in Silver: Celebrating 25 Years of an Engaged Leadership. Through ticket sales, sponsorships and an auction, the gala raised over $25,000 for the endowed Carl and Helen DeVore Memorial Humanitarian Award, established in honor of President DeVore’s parents. The program featured entertainment from the Otterbein Departments of Music and Theatre and Dance, as well as a tap dance lesson for President DeVore. Those who would like to contribute to the Award can visit www.otterbein.edu/presidenttribute or call (614) 823-1950.

Otterbein’s campus celebrated Earth Week 2009 from April 20-25, with the highlight event on April 25, the Diggin’ with DeVore Spring Community Plunge.

Diggin’ with DeVore sent a record number of students, alumni, faculty and staff into the Westerville and Columbus communities to perform a day of service, involving over 20 sites and 300 participants.

Service sites include elementary and middle schools, Hanby House, Goodwill Columbus, Humane Society of Delaware County, McKendree United Methodist Church, United Methodist Children’s Home, Dreams on Horseback, Habitat for Humanity and the Westside Free Store. Activities included outdoor cleanup projects, such as a neighborhood clean up and cleaning debris on riding trails, building a compost bin, setting up for a community event and sorting items for the Free Store. The Alumni Club of Akron also participated.

Assistant Professor Dr. Shannon Lakanen Receives Fulbright Award

Dr. Shannon Lakanen, assistant professor of English at Otterbein College, has been awarded a Fulbright Scholar grant to lecture at University of Montenegro in Fall 2009, according to the United States Department of State and the J. William Fulbright Foreign Scholarship Board.

“It’s a huge honor to be awarded the Fulbright. Montenegro is the world’s newest fully-recognized independent nation, so it’s extremely exciting to have the chance to work with students there,” Lakanen said.

In the city of Podgorica, Lakanen will teach creative writing and American language and culture at the University of Montenegro from August through December of this year. Along with her son, Alex, she hopes to tour Eastern Europe on weekends.

Lakanen is one of approximately 1,100 U.S. faculty and professionals who will travel abroad through the Fulbright U.S. Scholar Program.

The Fulbright Program, America’s flagship international educational exchange program, is sponsored by the United States Department of State, Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs. Established in 1946 under legislation introduced by the late Senator J. William Fulbright of Arkansas, the Fulbright Program operates in over 155 countries worldwide. Fulbright alumni have become heads of state, judges, ambassadors, cabinet ministers, CEOs, university presidents, journalists, artists, professors and teachers. They have been awarded 39 Nobel Prizes. Since its inception more than 60 years ago, approximately 300,000 Fulbright scholars have participated in the program. For more information about the Fulbright Program or the U.S. Department of State’s Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs, visit http://fulbright.state.gov.

Assistant Professor Janice Windborne Works on Award-Winning Documentary

Janice Windborne, assistant professor of communication at Otterbein College, was on the team that produced The Last Dance, a documentary that recently won Best of Show from the Broadcast Education Association and National Association of Broadcasters (BEA/NAB) in Las Vegas and Best Documentary at the Appalachian Film Festival in West Virginia.

Sculptor David Hostetler with the movie poster, The Last Dance. (photo screen capture from movie trailer).

The Last Dance is the story of world-renowned sculptor David Hostetler, an artist from Southeast Ohio who has been carving female figures for the last 60 years. In the documentary, he talks about his life and his relationship to women and to art and through his words, viewers gain both an understanding of what motivates the artist and of a period in American history. Hostetler’s work is displayed in many of the world’s most prestigious galleries and wealthiest homes, but the most prominent location is in front of Trump Tower in New York City.

“I did research, writing, arrangements for locations, promotion and some other tasks necessary to get the production going and to keep it in the appropriate public eye,” said Windborne, who was the documentary’s associate producer.

NAB is the largest professional organization of media professionals and pairs with media educators under the auspices of Broadcast Educators Association. The Last Dance achieved top honors over approximately 1,000 other submissions. One judge commented that the film “is worthy of a theatrical release and Oscar nomination. It tells a multi-leveled story and uses a beautifully-crafted visual aesthetic.”

The Appalachian Film Festival is a yearly festival honoring works from individuals residing or attending school within the Appalachian region of the country, from New York to Georgia. Over 235 documentaries were judged on subject matter, appeal, direction and editing.

Dr. Joan Pryor-McCann Will Participate in Human Genome Research

Dr. Joan Pryor-McCann, professor of nursing at Otterbein College, recently was selected from a competitive pool to participate in the National Human Genome Research Institute’s 2009 Summer Workshop in Genomics, sponsored by the National Institutes of Health and held at their health campus in Bethesda, Maryland, in August. As part of Dr. Pryor-McCann’s selection, junior nursing major Lauren Shoemaker from Heath, OH, will accompany her for the weeklong workshop.
This intensive course is designed to update biology instructors, as well as other instructors and researchers in related disciplines, on genomic science. The course focuses on the continuing effort to find the genetic basis of various diseases and disorders, and current topics on the ethical, legal and social implications of genomics.

The National Human Genome Research Institute (NHGRI) led the National Institutes of Health’s (NIH) contribution to the International Human Genome Project, which had as its primary goal the sequencing of the human genome. This project was successfully completed in April 2003. Now, the NHGRI’s mission has expanded to encompass a broad range of studies aimed at understanding the structure and function of the human genome and its role in health and disease.

Otterbein Student Chapter of CMLA Selected for National Leadership

The Otterbein College student chapter of the Collegiate Middle Level Association (CMLA) recently was named the National Officers of the national CMLA, overseeing all CMLA chapters throughout the country.

The current Otterbein and National CMLA leadership team include the following students: Chief Executive Officer Lauren Prossack of Hilliard, OH; Assistant Executive Officer Katie Ostendorf of West Chester, OH; Chief Communication Officer Katie Robinson of Circleville, OH; and Chief Business Officer David Mossbarger of Canton, OH.

OCMLA or Otterbein Collegiate Middle Level Association is an affiliate of the National Middle School Association (NMSA). The national Collegiate Middle Level Association was founded by John Swaim in 1989 and currently has 31 chapters. These 31 chapters represent a growing number of colleges and universities who are now preparing teachers to teach young adolescents in the middle grades (Ohio Middle Childhood Licensure includes grades 4-9).

OCMLA is a professional and social organization on campus for all middle childhood education majors. OCMLA hosts a variety of professional development opportunities as well as social events. Past events include a First Year Teacher Panel; a Children’s Services speaker; a workshop at the William Sheridan Teacher store; and a team-building event at Vertical Adventures rock climbing. Upcoming events include a classroom management speaker and a resume workshop.

PRSSA Wins Award

The Otterbein College chapter of the Public Relations Students Society of America (PRSSA) was recently recognized by Donate Life Ohio through the Ohio Department of Health for its achievements in the Do It Now! College Challenge.

The goal of the statewide program is to register 240,000 new organ donors on the donor registry this year. With 17 public and private colleges across Ohio participating, the challenge reached this year’s goal for the state. Each participating institution set a goal to reach, and Otterbein was “Closest to Goal” of the 17 institutions. The campaign leaders were students Erin Glaser of McMurray, PA, and Jeana Harrington of Sandusky, OH.

Spotlight on Faculty

Name: Norman Chaney
Title: Professor of English
Hometown: Brazil, Indiana
Education: B.A., The University of Indianapolis (formerly Indiana Central College); M.A., Indiana University; M. Div., Yale University; M.A. and Ph.D., The University of Chicago

Which particular topic do you most enjoy teaching? I most enjoy teaching British literature of the 15th to the 17th centuries. My favorite writers within these centuries are Malory, More, Spenser, Shakespeare, Milton, and Marvell. These centuries represent a period in British literature when an old way of seeing the world was ending and a new way was beginning.

Why should every person you meet want to know more about your area of expertise? Every period of British literature is built on literature that went before it. Even Shakespeare for all his individual genius was deeply indebted to previous writers. If a person I met wanted to have a rounded knowledge of British literature, I would tell him or her that knowledge of the literature of the 15th to the 17th centuries is essential.

What research are you currently working on? Over the past several years I have directed my attention to the genre of nature writing in both British and American literature, and have offered variations of a course titled “The Environmental Imagination.” The environmentalist manifesto in our time to “save the planet” is impossibly ambitious. As one of my favorite nature writers has noted—the late Stephen Jay Gould—the planet will save itself. It always has. What it may not save is the human species. Nature has made a “deal” with us. She will allow us to exist so long as we respect her boundaries. I am currently writing a book on nature writers who remind us that nature has boundaries.

If you were not an educator, what would be your dream job? I would be a farmer. I have never forgotten the summers when I was growing up that I spent with my maternal grandparents on their 250-acre farm. It was in the days before farming became agribusinesses. When I mount my vintage International farm tractor to mow the acreage on which my wife, Freda, and I now live, I return in thought to those days of summer. I believe Thomas Jefferson had it right when he envisioned an America of family farms, cottage industries, and small communities. I admit to being hopelessly a Jeffersonian romantic.

What are your hobbies outside the classroom? I greatly enjoy maintaining and piloting my Cessna 150 airplane; ornithology; gardening; carpentry; antique restoration; clinking out tunes on the piano; writing; and helping Freda to manage the bed and breakfast that we established ten years ago in our Federal-style home that was built in 1823. I try to keep up with the maintenance, except for plumbing and electricity work, which I have learned through experience to leave to professionals. All domestic charms of the place emanate from Freda’s personality.
Football at Otterbein began in 1890, and soon after 1900 student-organized pep bands began to play and cheer from the sidelines at the home football games. In 1909, the new violin instructor, Andrew Schwartz, took direction of the band and put them on the field to perform drills at halftime. Though Schwartz did not remain at Otterbein beyond that school year the idea of a “marching” band took hold.

Though 1909 was the year that is officially recognized as the start of marching bands at Otterbein, other forms of bands existed almost from the inception of the College. “One of the early organizations was a brass band in the 1850s, which was led by Prof. Thos. McFadden, who later went into the service with the 46th regiment, O. V. I. [Ohio Valley Infantry],” according to Rev. Henry Garst’s History of Otterbein University. The tradition of band music at Otterbein’s first commencement ceremony in 1857 was started by McFadden’s brass band.

Band instruments were purchased in 1889, and shortly thereafter mention of the “Otterbein Euterpean Band” began appearing in the College publications. The April 1891 Aegis, the school newspaper of the time, states “Heretofore [the Euterpean Band] has given Saturday Evening open air concerts, but this year it will make a change and give a series of four concerts in the college chapel.” But after 1891, no mention is made of the Euterpean Band.

In 1915, the band was made up entirely of brass, drums, and clarinets. The band ceased to exist in 1918, due to the United States’ involvement in World War I. In the fall of 1924, a small band was organized under the direction of Rodney Shaw of Columbus. The following year, Professor Arthur Spessard took charge, but by the fall of 1927, the band had again been dissolved.
The year 1930 was a major turning point for the bands at Otterbein. A new, larger band was organized by Professor Spessard. Uniforms, the first ever for the Otterbein band, were purchased solely through donations from the freshmen, sophomore, and junior classes. It was also the first year that band was recognized by the School of Fine Arts as part of the college curriculum. Though the numbers would decrease toward the end of the 1930’s, the band had become a permanent fixture on the Otterbein campus.

Alumni and friends of the band have often performed with the marching and the concert bands. This tradition goes back to 1928, when Professor Harry Hirt was hired as assistant band director. In most early photographs of the band, he can be found playing in the clarinet section.

In 1940, Professor L. Lee Shackson took over the band. In his own words, he wanted the band to provide “as much free music at Otterbein as we possibly can.” Though World War II would leave the band program at half strength (every man in the group had joined the war effort), the players who remained were determined to provide the College with the music Professor Shackson had proposed.

When Professor Shackson finished his tenure as band director in 1947 (to take up the position of chair of the department the next year), the band had grown to 50 members, the largest ensemble the College had seen.
Shortly after, the Symphony of Winds became known as the Concert Band, a name that holds to this day.

In the summer of 1971, Professor Tirey took the bands on tour to England to perform at the Anglo-International Festival of Music. The trip was such a success that the bands were invited back in the summer of 1973. Band tours cross Ohio most every year and out of state destinations include Chicago, Washington, D.C., Cincinnati, Toronto, New York City, New Orleans, Alabama and Texas. Recent trips overseas have included five tours to England, Scotland and Wales, and in 1999 to France, Belgium and the Netherlands.

In the fall of 1994, Jeffrey Kunkel was hired to serve as professor of music education and Jazz Band director, as well as to assist with the Marching Band. The next year, Professor Tirey stepped down as Marching Band director and Professor Kunkel became director. Assisting him with the Marching Band was John Orr ’79, who remains in this position to this day. In 1997, Jeffrey Boehm ’82, returned to Otterbein as professor of music education and director of the Marching and Jazz Bands. At that time, he took direction of the Concert Band and Professor Tirey took sole direction of the Wind Ensemble. Russell McCutcheon and Michael Yonchak have led the Cardinal Marching Band since Jeff Boehm’s departure, and the current director of Band, Wind and Percussion Activities, and director of the Wind Ensemble is Margaret Underwood.

In the 21st century the Otterbein College Band continues the tradition of excellence that is 100 years old. Despite the pull of an ever-increasing amount of activities and commitments, the number of students involved in the band program remains strong. Alumni involvement in the ensembles continues to grow, with many graduates encouraging their children to attend Otterbein to continue the Otterbein Band tradition.
Six Otterbein Women who are

Leading the Way

by Grace Proctor ’09

Otterbein College has admitted women since its founding, and the first two graduates of the College in 1857 were women. It is no surprise, then, that some of the most prestigious graduates of the College have been women. Of the scores of alumnae who walked the Otterbein campus, here are a few of Otterbein’s “Leading Ladies.”

Isabel “Belle” Howe Ziegler ’40

is “the big 90.” A native of Westerville, she graduated from Otterbein with a bachelor’s degree in science and a minor in French. She married Dr. Samuel R. Ziegler ’36 (now deceased) after graduation and the couple moved to New Mexico to help establish a hospital in the community of Española. Although they planned to stay two years, they made Española their home because they found the three local cultures—Native American Indian, Hispanics and Anglos—delightful, friendly and interesting, according to Ziegler. “The climate was wonderful, and surroundings beautiful.”
In fact, the couple became so established in the community that Ziegler was friends with renowned artist Georgia O’Keeffe, and Dr. Ziegler was O’Keeffe’s personal physician for 35 years.

Ziegler chose to attend Otterbein because it was a family tradition. “Growing up, Otterbein was part of my life. Enrolling as a student came naturally and seemed expected,” said Ziegler. While at Otterbein, she made fond memories outside the classroom, and inside the classroom, her professors prepared her for life after college. “I was inspired by my professors to excel and from them, I gained sound knowledge gleaned from their teachings.”

During her six decades (and counting) in Española, Ziegler helped start a library, now the City Library, and worked with the mayor, City Council, and State Highway Department on landscaping projects. She initiated the landscaping of 60 traffic islands in the city. In 1964 she was named “Woman of the Year” by the Española Chamber of Commerce, and in 1979 she was elected first Woman President of the Española Chamber of Commerce.

“Tal was not expecting such recognition for my accomplishments. It always seemed that I was aware of a need that should be filled, so I would make the effort to see that it was accomplished,” she said. “I am proud of what I have accomplished when it has brought satisfaction to a need. That has been rewarding.”

In 2006, she reached out to fellow alumni. “I was privileged and honored to welcome the Alumni Cardinal Migration to New Mexico, ‘Land of Enchantment,’” she said.

Today, Ziegler is finishing writing the Adventures of the Rocking Z in New Mexico, the story of her great adventures and happenings while living in New Mexico.

“Life at Otterbein College was a bubble—nourishing and challenging,” said Joanne Klepinger Ditmer ’50.

Joanne chose Otterbein because it was a family tradition; her father, Murn Klepinger ’23 was a founder of Jonda fraternity and served on the Otterbein Board of Trustees.

While the decision was made by tradition, the education was uniquely suited to Ditmer. “Universally, the professors had a strong sense of what I could do. They challenged and supported me. I had a rewarding experience that was both enjoyable and fun,” she said.

After graduating with a bachelor’s degree in English, Ditmer moved to Denver, where she wrote advertising copy for a Denver department store, before becoming an assistant buyer and then account executive at an ad agency. She was hired by The Denver Post in 1958, and worked in every department except sports until 2002.

“I was a feature writer much of the time, writing on every topic imaginable.” In the 1960s, The Denver Post was the first newspaper in the nation to have a special section devoted to environmental issues, and Ditmer was one of three reporters assigned to write for that section.

Her personal column began in 1962, and continued once a month until her retirement. “It’s really rewarding and great fun to research a subject, find information which may not have been seen before, and then present it to inform the public,” she said.

The farewell published in The Denver Post on her retirement read, “Joanne has served as a community voice on environmental and land-use issues, historic preservation and urban conflicts. Her solid reporting and passionate advocacy set yardsticks for other journalists to follow.”

Retirement has not been boring. This year will be the sixth year that she will travel to Kathmandu, Nepal, as a volunteer for the Himalayan Dental Relief Project, which brings free dental care to impoverished children of Nepal, northern India, Vietnam and Guatemala in partnership with local organizations. Volunteer dentists, hygienists, and non-medical volunteers deliver treatment and preventive care in dental clinics that serve children in schools, orphanages and remote villages.

In addition, Ditmer has been a trustee for Volunteers for Outdoor Colorado and has received awards from the National Trust for Historic Preservation, the Environmental Protection Agency and the Colorado Council on the Arts and Humanities. She received Otterbein’s Special Achievement Alumni Award in 1993. Her advice to today’s Otterbein students is, “Never settle for a career you’re not happy with.”

Marsha Rice Scanlin ’74 has been through a journey. “It has not been a straight line at all,” she said. “It has been filled with lots of detours and back-doors. Each area I’ve worked in—education, private sector and corporate—has allowed me to learn new skills and contributed to my well rounded view of things.”

Scanlin has been in human resources for 29 years and is currently the associate vice president for human resources at Nationwide in Columbus, OH. “I never thought of working at a large corporation,” she said. “I grew up in a town of 500, while Nationwide has 35,000 associates.”

Scanlin came to Otterbein for a campus visit and never looked back. She is a firm believer in a liberal arts education and “development of the whole person.”

“I had great exposure at Otterbein as a speech and theatre major,” she said. “The communication skills I learned have been critical in my profession.”

After graduating from Otterbein, on the advice of Joanne “Dean Van” Van Sant, Scanlin earned her master’s degree in speech pathology at Bowling Green State University.

She worked as a residence hall director at Bowling Green State University before becoming a paralegal. When she resigned that position, the firm asked her to stay on as its first personnel director.

Scanlin experienced the world of the law firm during an “interesting time for women.”
“Many women went into teaching and nursing, and were faced with challenges to be successful in other careers. Law firms were largely male-dominated. I paid particular attention to how they interacted and communicated with each other, and adjusted my own communication style,” she said.

At one point, she was told that she wouldn’t get a raise, while her male administrator counterpart would, so she decided to resign. “Over the weekend, I was asked to stay, and I did for 15 years.”

Scanlin has also faced challenges outside her career. Twelve years ago, she survived breast cancer, and she has spent a decade volunteering at The James Cancer Center and Moffitt Cancer Hospital in Tampa, Florida. She has been a spokesperson, mentor, and advocate for cancer patients. Her favorite quote is by Alfred Lord Tennyson: “I am part of all that I have met.”

Her advice to current Otterbein students is, “Don’t forget backdoor opportunities, always be aware of them. And participate, volunteer. When you give back, you receive more. Be open to new ideas, be a lifelong learner. Explore the world outside your comfort zone. Make friends of all ages and keep old friends. And don’t forget family.”

Nancy L. Bocskor ’79 lives in Arlington, VA, where she has operated her own political consulting firm for almost 20 years. Tagged a “democracy coach” by a major German newspaper, she specializes in teaching individuals how to achieve leadership in their communities, either by running for elected office or by becoming citizen activists.

Bocskor’s work has taken her to all 50 states and more than a dozen foreign countries, including Mongolia, Belarus, Russia, the Republic of Georgia, Poland, Turkey, Australia, England and Germany. She recently returned from spending a week in Nigeria, where she advised nine women members of Parliament in advanced leadership and communications training.

“I taught the women MPs how to tell their own personal stories about what inspired them to run for public office,” she said. “They’re going to be a part of a documentary to encourage other women to begin their own paths to public service.”

In 2007, Bocskor was selected by the Center for Liberty in the Middle East (CLIME) as a mentor to women candidates there. One of her mentees now serves as the youngest woman in the Jordanian Parliament.

Building on that success, Bocskor has been working with CLIME to launch an Online Activism Institute. Ninety women participated in the pilot e-learning environment in Egypt and Jordan. She coordinated the mentoring phase, which provides motivated women with personalized one-on-one training and advice to reach their activism goals.

While a student at Otterbein, Bocskor “loved all the opportunities the school offered, including being selected to be a Student Trustee, my first ‘big’ election.”

“Professors were much more than instructors—they were my mentors,” she said. Political Science Professor John Laubach opened many doors for internships and remained a dear friend to Bocskor until his passing last year. History Professor Harold Hancock “engaged his students, both in and out of the classroom.” And Economics Professor Patrick Lewis encouraged Bocskor to take Russian, even securing a tutor for her.

“When I graduated, I had a better resume than most 25-year-olds,” she added. “Because of my Otterbein experience, I landed a job in the office of then-freshman Congressman Newt Gingrich.” Since then, she has worked with Gingrich in many capacities.

Recently, Bocskor has been using online social networking to reconnect with old friends. “The years have passed yet the roots of friendship have remained intact,” she said. “It’s those personal relationships that make Otterbein such a special place.”

Bocskor brings the lessons she learned from her professors at Otterbein to her own teaching. She is an adjunct professor at George Washington University’s Graduate School of Political Management where she teaches both an online and a live fundraising course. She is vice president of the Women’s Campaign School at Yale, where she chairs the school’s curriculum committee, and is on the board for Running Start, an organization that encourages young women to run for office.

Wendy Peterson Bradshaw ’95 was able to discover much about herself and take advantage of the many resources afforded to the students when she was at Otterbein studying public relations.

Now as director of community development for the Columbus Blue Jackets, a National Hockey League team, she serves as the team’s liaison to Central Ohio through a variety of grassroots outreach programs designed to develop a strong presence in the Columbus community.

“I did not aspire at the time to be in sports, but my current position has allowed me to blend all of my talents and passions into one and make a measurable impact on the community,” said Bradshaw.

She said that while in school, Tuesday Beerman Trippier ’89 in the College’s public relations office gave her a real understanding of graphic design and showed her another side of the public relations field. Her consultation and support from Professor Denise Shively and working with then-Assistant Dean of Students Becky Fickel Smith ’81 in various leadership roles during her tenure at Otterbein also prepared her for life after college.

“I was fortunate to have great mentors and great internships that afforded me the opportunity to meet key business leaders and network myself in the field of community relations and philanthropy,” said Bradshaw.

Her advice is, “Take advantage of any opportunity to intern. My internships were invaluable to my career path today. Networking is crucial. Make sure you are doing something you love, follow your passion. Surround yourself with hardworking people who share your same passion and energy. Stay fresh and always continue learning.”

Innovative brand strategist Melissa Dawn Johnson ’99 is president and CEO of Velvet Suite Marketing Consulting Group, Inc., headquartered in Atlanta, Georgia. VSMCG is a premier branding firm offering consulting, training and networking services to influential companies and industries. In the decade since graduating from Otterbein, she has been an entrepreneur, author and personal brand strategist.

Her book, Brand Me, Make Your Mark: Turn Passion into Profit, gives a seven-step brand blue print to help one make a passion into a profitable life. She has worked with actors and artists, such as Mary J. Blige, Shania Twain, Common, Jessica Simpson, and Hill Harper, as well as executives, politicians, professional athletes, pastors and corporations such as Pepsi, the National Football League, and Citibank.

Johnson came to Otterbein for a college tour and instantly knew she wanted to go here. “There were many opportunities and organizations that you could be a part of,” she said.

She came to Otterbein on a community service scholarship and served as the student coordinator of the Indianola Middle School Mentoring Program.

That leadership experience, as well as internships opened many doors.

“Professor Denise Shively encouraged me to get internships for experience,” said Johnson. “My Victoria Secret’s internship while at Otterbein led to a job at Proctor & Gamble within the department of Beauty Products.”

She moved up the ladder at Proctor & Gamble before branching out on her own and earning her master’s degree from Northwestern University in Integrated Marketing Communications.

Johnson hasn’t forgotten community service along the way. Among her many accomplishments, she is the founder of two non-profit organizations called R.E.A.C.H. and Face 2 Face, Expressions in Mime. R.E.A.C.H. (which stands for Remember to Extend A Caring Hand), was founded in 1994 as a youth outreach program to promote high school volunteerism. Face 2 Face, Expressions in Mime was founded in 1998 to help people express their problems and emotions in a healthy way through movement and music.

Johnson’s advice to students is to “be persistent and don’t take rejection personally. My parents always said you can pursue anything you want to.”
On June 14 Otterbein College President C. Brent DeVore presided over his final commencement ceremony before retirement. In his honor, the class of 2009 raised $1,519 to donate to the College’s Annual Fund.

Over 570 students graduated in the Rike Center on the Otterbein campus in Westerville. Among them was Emmanuel “Manny” Brown, who was chosen as the commencement speaker for his graduating class.

“Otterbein has a special place in my life and it is unimaginable to even articulate my true feelings,” Brown said. “Otterbein has really made a difference in my life and I hope to be able to give back to the institution the way it has given to me. Someday I hope to be able to help change someone’s life the way Otterbein has changed mine.”

A sociology major from Columbus, Brown is a student member of the College’s Board of Trustees and serves as the College Judicial Council Chair and is a member of Administrative Council, College Senate, Student Life Committee and Martin Luther King Jr. Convocation Committee. He is a member of Otterbein’s African American Student Union.

Brown is assistant regional vice president of Alphi Phi Alpha Fraternity, Inc., and is a member of their board of directors. In addition, he serves on the Alpha Phi Alpha Educational Foundation and is a financial aid advisor for I Know I Can in Columbus. He has interned in the office of an Ohio State Senator and with the Task Force Police. He will be pursuing his master’s of divinity degree at Vanderbilt University, which offered him the Dean’s Scholarship.

Thirteen students auditioned for the honor of giving the commencement speech. Excerpts from their speeches can be read at http://www.otterbein.edu/Classof2009/commencement-speeches09.asp.

A commencement ceremony for the 110 students receiving master’s degrees in business, education and nursing was held at 3 p.m. Saturday, June 13, in Cowan Hall on the Otterbein campus. The featured speaker at the master’s commencement was Bruce Vanderhoff, chief medical officer of OhioHealth.

Wendell Foote ’60 and (posthumously) Judith Lovejoy Foote ’58 ~ Service to Otterbein

Serving their alma mater was second nature to Wendell and Judy Foote. To them, it just plain made sense. They loved Otterbein, they valued higher education, and they had a desire to see students excel and achieve. So they simply invested in the things they felt were essential, including some of Otterbein College’s most important campaigns and initiatives. After his graduation, Wendell worked first at Wyeth Laboratories, then Xerox and later H.B. Fuller, an adhesives and paint manufacturer. In 1969, he and a fellow coworker left the H.B. Fuller Co. over policy differences and started their own business, Specialty Polymers, Inc. Because of a non-compete clause, the Footes had to relocate west of the Mississippi. So Wendell chose Oregon, a place he’d visited and fallen in love with one weekend while in the Navy. Judith enjoyed a long career as an elementary school teacher and was known as a favorite teacher among students and colleagues alike. Despite the long distance from Otterbein, the couple maintained friendships with their fraternity brothers and sorority sisters, and gave benevolently to various college funds.

Dr. Thomas Dipko ’58 ~ Special Achievement

At Otterbein, Tom thrived under the tutelage of professors like Robert Price. When he moved into the home of Otterbein’s one-time librarian, Marie Crumrine, as caretaker, she graciously tutored him on the fine and subtle art of the English language. These encounters would not just serve him well, they would shape his very future. Tom Dipko went on to earn his masters of divinity and PhD, and became the recipient of five honorary doctoral degrees, a member of the North American Academy of Ecumenists, and a Fellow of the College of Preachers at the National Cathedral in Washington, D.C. He is an ecumenist and interfaith leader in the United Church of Christ, a liturgical scholar, author, lecturer, teacher, mentor and volunteer. He spent more than 20 years as pastor to churches in Pennsylvania and Massachusetts, and was a member of the Churches Uniting in Christ executive committee, a conference minister of the Ohio Conference, and executive of the United Church Board for Homeland Ministries. He is widely and immensely respected for his work and contributions to worship and liturgy, offering guidance in the publication of The New Century Hymnal.

Ms. Peggy Ruhlin ’79 ~ Special Achievement

Peggy Ruhlin was one of the first to graduate from Otterbein’s Continuing Studies program. She graduated magna cum laude with a B.A. in Business Administration, and soon after she earned her CPA and founded her own accounting business. When she heard about the then-new CFP (or certified financial planner) designation, she immediately wanted to know more. She had found her life’s purpose and passion: financial planning. Her financial savvy, coupled with her ability to build strong client relationships, quickly put her on the fast-track to becoming nationally recognized as one of the best financial advisors in the country. Peggy has been a sought-after source by national news publications, including Money, Fortune, The Wall Street Journal and USA Today. She also presented a weekly financial commentary program on a National Public Radio affiliate, for which she was twice-nominated for an “Excellence in Personal Finance Reporting” award, and she’s currently a commentator for WOSU-AM in Columbus, Ohio. She is currently a member of Otterbein’s Board of Trustees and increased her leadership role significantly in just four short years, now chairing the Investment Committee and serving on the Audit Committee.
Dennis ’69 and Dee Dee Krumm Heffner ’69 ~ Community Service Award

Although they say they’re “just United Methodist missionaries,” Dr. Dennis and Mrs. Dee Dee Heffner are that and so much more. Since 1975, they’ve lived and worked in the culturally diverse and beautiful high desert of northern New Mexico, pouring themselves into the lives of others. Together they minister, teach and serve wholeheartedly in the Espanola Valley. They say Otterbein was instrumental in allowing them to answer God’s call to a life of service. Dr. Heffner is a long-time pastor, a founding member of an interfaith community services organization, and chair of the New Mexico Conference Board of Global Ministries, whose mission work spans from the south Congo to Juarez, Mexico. He supports Hispanic, Mexican and Navajo ministries in New Mexico; participates in disaster coordination for New Mexico and a portion of Texas; and is an advocate for abused women and the elderly. Mrs. Heffner is still at McCurdy, teaching English, speech and drama, and inspiring and encouraging young people. Ninety-eight percent of McCurdy students, most of whom are considered “at risk,” go on to pursue higher education.

Nancy Nikiforow ~ Honorary Alumna

Nancy Nikiforow is a hard-working, detail-oriented, compassionate, go-getter with a penchant for getting things done well and getting them done right. She’s described by colleagues as “professional, positive and engaging.” And for 10 years she was Otterbein’s own “Energizer Bunny,” working tirelessly to raise and manage over $10 million for the College to benefit students, faculty and staff. At Otterbein, Nancy served as the Director of Grants and Special Projects from 1995 until 2005, when she followed her heart and went back to working directly with students through the I KNOW I CAN organization. During her time at the College, she wrote grant proposals to government, corporations and foundations, including four top-ranked federal awards; oversaw proposal writing, budget management and reporting; identified and researched funding sources; cultivated and stewarded donors; and successfully completed three challenge initiatives. Nancy also was a principal creator for many initiatives that became permanent fixtures on campus, including the Center for Community Engagement, the Center for Teaching and Learning, and the Clements Recreation Center.

Dr. Paul B. Paulus ’66 ~ Distinguished Alumnus

Paul Paulus is a professor of psychology at the University of Texas Arlingon, where he has held the post for nearly 40 years. He’s also dean of the College of Science, a prominent and well-published researcher, and a pioneer in group creativity in the field of group behavior and environmental psychology. His research on prison housing conditions influenced the development of national and state standards for prisons. His research has been cited in numerous court cases and news outlets, including The New York Times, and led to an appearance on The Oprah Winfrey Show. He also conducted research on group effectiveness, creativity and innovation and his research in this area has been cited in numerous papers and magazines, including The Wall Street Journal and Inc. magazine. He says his most rewarding work is, however, research and discovery in collaboration with his peers and students. He also credits his Otterbein experience as foundational to his success. “Otterbein cares about people,” he says. “Not just about who you are and what you do, but also how you treat others and relate to people.”

This Surgeon Trades Brains for Brine to Unwind

by Grace Proctor ’09

What does a brain surgeon do to unwind? Well, for Dr. Bradford Mullin ’84, scuba diving with his wife Catherine Bell Mullin ’84 is his passion when he is not saving lives.

Brad Mullin, a Columbus native, came to Otterbein in 1980. While at Otterbein, Brad was a member of Sigma Zeta, Order of Omega, and Alpha Epsilon Delta honorary and graduated magna cum laude with a bachelor’s degree in life science.

Brad credits Otterbein with giving him a start on his career. “My professors helped mold me into a better student over my years at Otterbein and prepared me for my future,” said Mullin.

Currently, Brad serves on the Science Campaign Committee and has shown great interest in connecting to students interested in his profession. For his professional success, he was inducted into the Gahanna Lincoln High School Hall of Fame in 2004, and was also named one of the top neurosurgeons in Central Ohio by his colleagues in 2004.

“I attended the Ohio University College of Medicine, where I graduated with a M.D. in 1988,” said Brad. Following his internship and residency at The Ohio State University Hospitals from 1989-1994, he joined Central Ohio Neurological Surgeons, where he has worked ever since. “My primary focus has been related to the brain and spinal cord,” he said.

Brad met his wife, Catherine, while the two were students at Otterbein. Catherine, a native of Wapakoneta, OH, graduated with a bachelor’s degree in computer science and went on to earn a master’s of business administration degree from the University of Dayton. The couple has three children: Linda, 19, Brent, 16 and Maria, 14.

In Brad and Catherine’s spare time, they both work at the Aqua Immersion Dive ’N Travel Center. “I serve as one of a few rebreather instructors at the Center and my wife serves as the assistant manager and is in training to be an Aqua Immersion Divemaster,” said Brad.

Connecting to his passion for diving, which Brad began doing with his father in 1975, the Mullin family travels all over the world to enhance their diving experiences. Additionally, Brad’s brother, Kerry Mullin ’96, and his wife, Stacey Azbell Mullin ’98, are also instructors at Aqua Immersion.

“In two years I am going to provide a scuba diving course as an elective to any Otterbein student who is interested in scuba diving,” Brad said. “Scuba diving is fun, and I think everyone should try it.” That seems like sound advice from a man whose high-stress day job is saving lives.

Rats swarmed to central Ohio from all over North America in January. And by Rats, we mean Zeta Phi alumni, of course! William (Bill) Daubenmire ’82 helped start the reunion. He had help from fellow colleagues Mike Puskarich ’82 and Scott Carroll ’81.

Daubenmire said, “Originally, we wanted to come to town, meet at a hotel for the weekend, tour the campus, and visit the Rat House and maybe even watch a Cardinal football game.”

The original list was around 25, and ultimately 11 brothers were able to attend. The group rented a 5,000 square foot house in Muirfield Village in Dublin, OH, for the gathering spot, which was nicknamed “Rat House II.”

The 11 alumni traveled to Otterbein from all over North America. Carroll flew in from Charlotte, NC; Pat Borghese ’82 from Phoenix, AZ; Mike Christodoulou ’82 from Quebec, Canada; and current Otterbein Trustee Al Waterhouse ’82 from San Diego, CA. Ohio residents that attended the reunion were Daubenmire, from Hebron; Puskarich, from Cadiz; Mitch Ulery ’82, from Springfield; Carl Weaver ’82, from Columbus; and Matt Frantz ’79, from North Royalton. Ron Arnett and Chris Roberts, who live in Bellefontaine, OH attended, but did not graduate from Otterbein.

According to Daubenmire, after nearly 30 years of separation, and the initial shock of seeing heavier physiques and grayer hair, it was as if only minutes had passed since Zeta Phi alumni were last together. “Smiles abounded, to the point that cheeks were sore the next morning. Special consideration was given in memory of Dave Nespeca, a 1982 classmate who had passed away, but was a very important part of this Zeta Phi group.”

“Time stood still that evening, and these old men, just for awhile, were once again young college guys with very few worries,” Daubenmire said.

The next morning the entire group traveled to the Rat House at 48 W. College Ave. in Westerville. They were welcomed by Zeta actives who were anxious to meet the alumni, exchange stories and show them the fraternity house. Breaking off into smaller groups, the alumni wandered every inch of the old house, pointing out the old things, and being impressed with the new.

“Although we were old enough to be their fathers, and they were young enough to be our sons, for that magical afternoon, we were all the same, Zeta Phi brothers—Rats,” Daubenmire said.

Ron Arnett credits Zeta Phi for helping him make new friends, “Friends that I think about often, but don’t get to see that often.” Daubenmire will never forget “winning the Intramural football championship game, under the lights, on the main field, against Pi Kappa Phi (Club).” And Scott Carroll remembers “Spring Fling, Rush Week, toga parties, weekend social visits to OSU (High Street), and hanging around the Rat House playing cards, backgammon, etc.”

When the weekend was over, they returned to their normal lives as doctors, lawyers, business owners, an engineer, a comptroller, a financial planner, among other professions.

Students Support the Annual Fund and President DeVore!

This year students were asked to give a gift to the Annual Fund in honor of President DeVore and his 25 years of service to Otterbein. More than 76 students donated $1,519 to the College in support of the Annual Fund. The total was announced at this year’s commencement ceremony. President DeVore is pictured above with student volunteers for the Otterbein’s phonathon.

Gifts to the Annual Fund support student scholarships, faculty research and development, technology upgrades, study abroad programs and much more! To make a gift to the Annual Fund please visit www.otterbein.edu/makeagift. Please contact Jennifer Waddell ’01, director of Annual Giving at (614) 823-1948 or jwaddell@otterbein.edu with any questions.
